Statesman to Close as Editorial Board is Arrested For Free Speech Violation

By Hairy Rosencrantz

and
Whiskey Sauer
Statesman Manager of the Idiots

In a scene right out of the former Soviet Union, the Statesman editorial board was arrested last night for an issue they have fought so hard for, the right to free speech. The members of the editorial board were cited for a violation of a brand new speech code instituted last week by University President John Marburger. Members of the editorial board were later suspended from the University without pay and dinner.

The editorial board was arrested by Public Safety officers Sergeants Booker and Taker very late last night at the paper's offices in the Student Union basement. The members of the board were arraigned before Judge Wapner of the Suffolk County District Court in White Plains.

All members of the board except for Editor-in-Chief Richard "Glory" Cole were released without bail. Cole was held in jail to face past, unrelated charges. "I have a file on you the size of Roseanne Arnold's ass," said Wapner. Cole's rap sheet includes a charge of not tipping a waitress in Kuala Lumpur and taping a baseball game without the express written consent of the commissioner. He will be released from the Orange County jail if he gets a really good note from his doctor.

Reached at his estate in Newark, Cole predicted victory. "When I get through with Administration, there will be a glory hole in every room in every campus building," he said. "My cell-mate Joey [Buttafuoco] thought it was a good idea."

Managing Editor Robyn "Dingbat" Sauer said that the arrests would lead to the permanent shutdown of the Statesman. "We can't come out if we still have editors in jail," she said. "By the way, I don't want to waste my time and dedication for a bunch of communists." "This whole thing has made me nauseous. I think I want to yak."

Also upset about the incident was Sports Editor Tom DaMass, who said he might sue the university for the emotional trauma that he might endure without getting into volleyball matches for free to see the girls.

The arrest of the Statesman Editorial Board conjures up new questions surrounding Marburger's newly implemented speech code. The new speech code was instituted to foster more diversity and multiculturalism on campus. "I want our students to write and think nice happy thoughts. Our students should not devote time to that politically incorrect garbage," said Marburger. "Besides, they printed my home address in the newspaper. Dozens of people came to my house looking for dinner, my grocery bills doubled because of that."

After Statesman was shut down, its office was taken over by a traveling band of derelicts posing as sports staff writers. Statesman/ David Donahue

Vice-President of Student affairs Fred Preston concurred with Marburger's decision concerning the new speech code. "As always, I support Marburger's decision. Forget about them printing [Marburger's] address," said Preston, "they printed my phone number. There comes a price with free speech." Preston was glad that Cole was in jail. "Jail will do him good... I hope he gets a 'visit' from my brother Bubba, he said. "Maybe when he's released, he'll see the light and be supportive of my multicultural endeavors."

The Statesman Editorial Board was held in violation of the speech code for columns written by "Glory" Cole. The columns accuse institutionalized programs at the University such as Africana Studies for inciting racism, instead of combating it. A coalition of student groups was organized last month to demand Cole's ouster as Editor-in-Chief and his ouster from the University.

Ken "DooBee the bee" Daube said that the University's claim may be invalid because, "Cole wrote the article and did not say the words so it can't possibly be a violation of the speech code."

"Now that we have shut down Cole and his silly paper, we'll change our direction and go burn some books," said Joseph Goebbels, the minister of propaganda for the coalition.

Most student leaders were divided over the speech code and the arrest of Statesman's Editorial Board. "This is a travesty, where else am I going to get positive press?" said Commuter Senator Vincent "Shellac" Bruzesse.

"The biggest thorn in my side is gone, Polity is mine for the taking," said Polity Vice-President Crystal "What?"

Plati. Through his interpreter, Brian "Whisper" Greer, USSA Representative Adam Turner, otherwise known as "Billy Guy," said, "It's a sad day for the students at Stony Brook. There goes my hopes for the Polity presidency."

Jerry O' Canada still could not be reached for comment because, technically, Cole is still in office.

Before the editorial board faces an outside trial for their alleged violation of the speech code, they first must face the charges in the Student Judiciary. "Let's just say that they have a choice, they can die by firing squad or die by lethal injection," said a source very close to the judiciary. The source claims that the case will be open and shut, a guilty verdict for the editorial board. "Guilty until proven innocent, it's always that way at the Student Judiciary," said the source, of course, of course.

Some editors are hoping to get bailed out (no pun intended) by the Polity Judiciary. "No problem," was the only comment offered by Judiciary Chair Cesar "Salad" Caro. Statesman Photo Editor John "No focus" Chu said that he had faith in the intelligent student leaders on this campus.

Polity Secretary David "Nays to the left" Shashoua said only that this wouldn't happen in England.

For Stony Brook, it's the start of an era without Statesman. Stony Brook will now have to look at Shelanu for the latest news surrounding Stony Brook. "Shelanu is my favorite paper, all the politically correct news that is fit to print," said Preston.

Stony Brook Dorms #1 in the Country

By Hairy Rosencrantz
Statesman Helsinki Correspondent

Citing cleanliness and a vibrant student life, Stony Brook residence halls were ranked number one in a nationwide survey that was released this week. The survey conducted by the Princeton Review ranked Stony Brook as having the best dormitories in the country, barely beating out the second-place finisher, Attica Tech.

Princeton Review ranked the dorms with the following criteria: cleanliness, student life, the architecture of the buildings, the friendliness of the RA's, the availability of the RHD's, the low cost of the housing, quality of the institutional food, and the general ambiance of the facilities. "They [USB] have the best dorms overall, especially winning points with the great dorm social life that exists over there," said Thor Azin, the conductor of the Review's survey. "I hear they have parties and fun seven days a week."

The Department of Campus Residences is ecstatic over the results, placing Stony Brook as number #1 in the nation. "Forget about the rundown conditions and the lousy student life, it doesn't matter, screw the students, we're number one," said DeVry Institute, the Warden of Campus Residences. Most resident assistants were also happy with the results. "I'm never around my building, but I hear it's a great place to live," said Shirely Incompetent, a resident assistant of Baruch College.

Many of the dorm residents allege that Campus Residences bribed Princeton Review for the number one ranking. "Have you ever seen these dorms? The dorms look like something out of Beirut," said Ariel Wasserwus, a resident from Dewey College. "Those people must have been on drugs," said L.S. Dube, a resident of Irving College. Some residents didn't care about the rankings or anything else. "I don't care," said Tammy Beard, an apathetic resident of Hendrix College.

Amid the allegations of impropriety, it was discovered that Azin and Institute were relatives. Thor Azin is DeVry Institute's seventh cousin, twelve times removed, on his Uncle Elmer's side. That might make Azin and Institute absolutely nothing. Institute denies the allegations of impropriety. "I just gave her the keys to the school's condo in St. Maarten, nothing else," said Institute. "I am not a crook." Institute was later arrested for jaywalking and possession of illegal sexual paraphernalia; i.e. a concrete dildo.

Despite all the possible bribery resulting from the ranking, one thing is still clear, Stony Brook is the king of campus dorms.

Polity Executive Council Recycles Greene

By Guareteedta B. Atweet

and

Hairy Rosencrantz

In a surprise move, that actually surprised no one, the Polity Executive Council has selected former Polity President David "It's not easy being" Greene as their next Executive Director. The position has been left vacant since the forced ouster / "resignation" of their current Executive Director Stressor Altemis. Greene will take over the position effective August 33 1/3.

Greene, Polity President for the 1992-93 school year, is known for his confrontational, hands-on style of management. He often butted heads with Commuter College, the Polity Senate, the Polity Executive Council, the College Republicans, and the Association of Pecker Heads. "I am a born fighter," Greene said. "I'll fight anyone, including Pee Wee Herman." He said his first order of business is to name LaWanda Page (Aunt Ester from Sanford & Son) as the official Polity mascot. "She is something that represents the beauty of Polity," he said.

The hiring of Greene as Executive Director has angered a number of Polity Senators. "Greene as Executive Director? I haven't see anything this stupid since Nancy Kerrigan was on Saturday Night Live," said Commuter Senator Steven "Lollipop Kid" Alamia.

"The only thing I miss about David was his nice shiny, gold tooth," said Commuter Senator Vincent Bruzzese, also known as Mr. Exxon Valdez.

The Polity Executive Council defended the selection of Greene as Executive Director. "Heck, I'm graduating, I don't care," said Polity President Jerry "Toronto" Canada. "He [Greene] doesn't return phone calls, he's perfect for the job," said Polity Vice-President Crystal "Pepsi" Plati.

Other Executive Council members also decided that Greene's attributes matched the job description perfectly. "David is a seedy character, pompous - a perfect candidate for the E.D. job," said Ryan "Pretty Boy" Mitola.

Greene said that in order to persuade the Commuter Junkies to respect him, he will make Commuter College an official gambling location. When he takes office, students will be able to bet on every game in the book. Yahtzee is said to be the first game to have money placed on followed by Go Fish. On the opening night of the new casino, Greene will not be betting with money but with gold teeth.

With the upcoming elections in Polity, Plati is more than pleased with the return of Greene. "I will win the presidency race," she said. "I'll use the same tactics as my David did. Ballot stuffing... I mean... effective campaigning always works."

Next week, Greene will sign the contract and afterwards some invited members of the Tall-Redheaded-Chinese Student Organization will attend a party, funded by the Activity Fee.

Traffic Officers Booted After Booting Themselves

By Hairy Rosencrantz

Statesman King of the Multi-cultural Jews

In a strange twist of fate, two officers from the Parking and Transportation Department were arrested for booting their own cars.

Clarence Oveur and Roger Dunn, the two employees were arrested Tuesday and charged with official misconduct, illegal possession of the boot, and general stupidity. Both Oveur and Dunn were issued appearance tickets and immediately sent to the Nancy Kerrigan Home for the fine and dandy.

The arresting officers were Director of University Police Richard Young, Head of the Royal Mounted Police Jacques Rougeau, and Hawaii Five-O Chief Steve McGarrett. The University Police set up a surveillance at the Kelly Quad parking garage due to a tip from a waitress that traffic officers were going to boot their own cars for past due parking tickets.

Royal Mounted Police Spokesperson Glenn "Chico" Resch

commented on the surveillance and ensuing arrests. "They [Oveur and Dunn] proceeded to boot their own cars for their own parking tickets that were in default. It seems that they ticketed themselves constantly, they refused to pay the tickets, so they took action against themselves," he said. "They were idiots, parking officers never self-ticket because they can make a killing on the rich students and faculty members on the campus. The job of the parking officer is to harass the students, not themselves." Resch wouldn't comment if the cars were still booted.

According to the Assistant Director of Parking,

Transportation, and Harassment, Herb Larceny, the antics of the officers were costing the department money. "Every one knows that the revenue from our tickets supports our department. By wasting time by self-ticketing, they were taking food out of my mouth," said Larceny.

Reached for comment, Oveur said he would still keep ticketing himself if he returns to work. "Hey, I parked illegally, I should get a ticket. I don't pay the tickets, I should get booted. Larceny believes Oveur needs a lobotomy. "He hasn't been this sick since he saw that Madonna movie," he said.

Resch said that if any community member witnesses a traffic officer booting themselves, they should call Creedmore right away.

While You Were Away

While students were off having fun in Florida and their respective homes for Spring Break, Stony Brook and the rest of New York was rocked with controversy.

New York State Governor Mario Cuomo was linked to the infamous Cuomo Mafia of New York City. Don Mario (known as the Moron Don in the underworld) was found guilty for the assassination of SUNY funding and the senseless murder of student grants. Cuomo has been sentenced to a four-year term in any of the architecturally structured prisons of New York State. It is rumored that Cuomo will choose to be confined to a building of Roosevelt Quad on the SUNY Stony Brook campus. With Cuomo out this year's gubernatorial race, shock-jock Howard Stern is expected to win by a landslide.

President Bill Clinton and first-lady Hillary Clinton have agreed to be keynote speakers for Polity's new conference, How to Successfully Manage Your Money. The conference will held over the summer in Atlantic City, New Jersey. The cost of the conference is expected to come to over $5,000. Since Polity is currently bankrupt, the council has decided to allocate the money from next year's budget. Seminar topics include, How To Invest In Land, How To "Borrow" Money From Your Budget and Not Get Caught, Forcing Executive Directors To Resignation and How To Get Started In the Restaurant Business. The Clintons pleaded guilty last week to embezzlement and tax fraud during their botched land deal, but were not sentenced because nobody really cared.

All 20 members of the Stony Brook Symphonic Band were killed on the Staller Center Main Stage last Wednesday when a cannon shot into the ensemble and blew them away. The cannon was a prop used for the performance and was scheduled to go off during the 1812 Overture, but was misfired into the band after the operator, Cliff Kurkowski, said he did not know how to run the machinery. Spectators were terrified after limbs and appendages flew into the crowd.

Residents of Middletown, New York flooded the local police station with sitings of The Loch Ness Monster last Saturday night. After the investigation, it was discovered that the monster was only Farmer Ted's cow dressed up in evening wear.

The Stony Brook Press and BlackWorld printed a news article.

Rights vs. Privileges: The Great American Fraud

In today's society, people are always talking about having this right or that right. Our society teaches people from the time they are young that concepts that are actually privileges, are rights. Examples of this fallacy can easily be seen by listening to people talk about their "right" to reproductive freedom, "right" to education, "right" to drive, etc. The fact of the matter is that there are no inalienable rights. There are no natural rights.

"RIGHT" TO REPRODUCTIVE FREEDOMS

During the past twenty years, there has been much debate over "reproductive freedoms;" whether or not women should have the right to have an abortion. Those people (male and female) that are in favor of legal abortions talk of the woman's right to control her own body. Those people against abortion talk about the rights of the unborn child. In my opinion, both sides of this debate have missed the mark. Having children is not a right, it is a privilege.

The pro-lifers are wrong because "rights" are only given to citizens. One is not a citizen until one is born. Furthermore, in many cases when women can't support their children, it would be a violation of "human rights" to be born at all into a world where a mother can't feed, cloth or care for the child.

The pro-choicers are partially wrong because if someone can not support or care for a child, they do not have the "right" to have one. In the United States, some people on welfare continue to have babies because they get more money for each child they have. Why should the tax payers as a body have to support other peoples children? Many hard-working people have a tough enough time supporting their own families, let alone other people's children.

I would take this argument one step further... The government should pay to put Norplant in all women at the age of 10, then the women should have to purchase a license from the state to have a child. (To those women who are going to accuse me of being sexist, or one of those oppressive males this type of procedure has to be done to women rather than to men because one man could impregnate many women. Therefore, mathematically, it makes more sense to do it to the women. But if it makes you feel any better, I would also be in favor of doing a similar procedure to men if it were available.) In order get the license the woman would have to prove that she has the financial means necessary to take care of a child and has taken an approved course on parenting. The cost of the license should be graduated with the applicants income level. If one makes $15,000 a year, then the fine would be $2,500. But, if one (a woman or a couple) makes $150,000 a year, then the fine should be along the lines of $25-50,000. If one's income is under the established poverty level, then one would not be able to obtain a child license. If one has a child without the proper license, then that child would not be eligible for the national health care, welfare money, public education, etc.

I will admit that this plan has one major flaw, it puts the government in charge. It has been proven time and time again that government is completely inefficient and incapable of running any kind of service properly. However, the alternative, the way things are now, it worse.

Too many people are having too many children for the wrong reasons and at other people's expense. People should really want to have a child and be able to support that child on their own. If any one thinks that I'm being harsh, just think of this... You need a license to drive, fish, hunt, live in a house (Certificate of Occupancy); why shouldn't you need a license to have a child?

"RIGHT" TO EDUCATION

Today, more than ever, people seem to be screaming about how everyone has the "right" to an education. In my opinion, education, like reproductive freedoms, is a privilege and not a right. Yes, it is true that the United States has always said that its citizens have the right to an education, but this meant the right to learn how to read and write. This right does not include the a "right" to a college education.

Politicians and special interest groups claim to be so concerned about getting more numbers of people into college, yet no one seems to care about the high number of students in colleges within the United States that can't read and write, let alone think and process information. The very fact that universities, institutions of higher education, have remedial reading and writing classes is a disgrace and shows how the "right" to education has been abused. Within the past few years Harvard University instituted a remedial reading and writing class. What the hell does this say about Harvard? Not much!

Every U.S. citizen should be enabled to read and write, but beyond that, the "right" to public education should be based solely on merit. If one does well in secondary school, and passes the standard admittance requirements, then one should be given access to public higher education. However, if one doesn't make the cut, then there is no "right" to higher education, until the standard is reached. Just think about how much money is wasted each and every year because unqualified students are filling our classrooms.

OTHER "RIGHTS"

Along with the two above "rights" that are actually privileges, there are many other privileges that people just seem to take for granted. It seems to me that people, especially on Long Island, take for granted the privilege of being able to drive. We all know who I'm talking about... All those damn guidos driving around in their IROC's, cutting everyone off, peeling out from every light, etc. People need to realize that driving is a privilege and it should be taken away if respect for others is not shown on the road. Drunk drivers should be shot! Those rich little kids driving mommy and daddy's Saab, weaving in and out of traffic, should be castrated.

Everyone should feel safe on the roads. Why should people have to put up with these wise-ass kids or over grown kids in their cars? On the other hand, those old people who can barely see their own hands should not be driving either. There is nothing more annoying than getting caught behind some old geezer on the LIE who insists on going 40m.p.h. in the left lane. He, like the wise-ass kid, should be prepared to face the repercussions from other drivers on the road.

We shouldn't have to, nor should we want to, have the state deal with these people. The populace should take care of these irritants.

In order for our society to work, people need to realize that most of the concepts we consider "rights" are actually privileges; and a base level of respect is needed for us to maintain order.

A Women's Guide To Urinary Tract Infections

Urinary tract infections (UTIs), also known as cystitis (bladder infection), are a common problem for women. UTIs account for many visits to the Student Health Services Center. The incidence of UTIs increases with age and many women may experience recurrent infections over time.

What Causes a UTI?

UTIs are caused primarily by the spread of bacteria. Normally, the bladder is bacteria free. The passageway to the bladder (the urethra) is located next to the vaginal opening and the anus. Commonly, bacteria that are present in your own large intestine can travel from the anus to the vagina and then enter the urethra. The bacteria may ascend to the bladder and possibly to the kidneys. If your body's normal defense systems against infection cannot control the contaminating bacteria, the urinary system may become inflamed, causing symptoms of infection.

What Are The Symptoms of a UTI?

Symptoms of a urinary tract infection may include:

- *Pain or burning on urination.
- *Frequent urination (despite a small amount in the bladder.)
- *Urinary urgency (feeling the need to urinate, but unable to pass any urine.)
- *Pressure just above the pelvic bone.
- *Blood or pus in the urine resulting in an orange or cloudy urine.
- *Lower back pain.

Some women with UTIs have few or no symptoms. Other women may have symptoms of a UTI, but actually have no urinary tract infection. Infections of the vagina, vulva, or cervix may cause UTI-like symptoms. These can include gonorrhea, trichomonas, chlamydia, or yeast infections. Mechanical injury

(i.e. "bubble" baths or feminine hygiene product, etc.), or allergy (i.e. to a soap, feminine hygiene product, etc.), may also cause UTI-like symptoms. Even anxiety or nervousness can mimic a UTI.

How Is A UTI Diagnosed?

Diagnosis of a UTI begins with a history of UTI symptoms and a physical examination. To make the diagnosis, a clean, uncontaminated urine specimen must be obtained for a bacterial culture. A urine dipstick for white blood cells and blood can be useful, but not necessarily conclusive. Only if the bacteria, often E. Coli, grow to concentrations greater than 100,000 organisms per cc of urine. This usually takes about 48 hours.

Urine cultures are only as good as the specimen given. It will probably not be useful if either: 1) The specimen is contaminated by vaginal bacteria during collection, or 2) You begin self-treatment with an antibiotic before collecting the specimen.

How Is a UTI Treated?

Treatment of a UTI consists of a three to ten day course of an antibacterial drug. Choice of drug depends on both the type of bacteria causing the infection and on any allergies you may have. One of the best drugs for treatment is a sulfa drug called Septra/Bactrin, but other medications are also commonly used.

If you have had a positive urine culture and are treated with a course of antibiotics, you will be asked to return to the Health Service two days after completing your medication to leave a repeat specimen. This makes sure that the infection is adequately treated.

Can I Prevent UTIs?

Roughly one third of women with a UTI may expect a recurrent infection within a year. In order to help prevent future infections, you take the following steps:

- *Drink plenty of fluids to keep urine clear and "flush out" bacteria that may have entered the urethra or bladder. WATER is the best fluid.

- *Don't hold back from urinating. Urinate regularly throughout the day; empty the bladder every 3-4 hours.

- *Urinate both before and after intercourse. Many UTIs are related to sexual activity. Intercourse frequently introduces bacteria into the urethra and bladder.

Similarly avoid vaginal intercourse directly after anal intercourse unless your partner washes his penis.

- *After urination or defecation, wipe yourself from the front to back. This avoids bringing bacteria in contact with the urethra.

- *Avoid tight fitting jeans or other clothes which create a warm, moist environment. This encourages bacteria growth.

- *Cotton-crotch underpants are preferable to synthetic materials.

What Should I Do If I Have The Symptoms?

If you have any or all symptoms of a urinary tract infection, seek medical care as soon as possible. Most UTIs are easily treated. Ignoring symptoms or delaying medical treatment could lead to a serious kidney infection (pyelonephritis).

Some Things Just Never Change

The sweet smell of spring at Stony Brook is often clouded by the unbearable stench of the Polity elections. Past elections were often riddled with low turnout, allegations of voter fraud, biased election boards, and procedures often reserved for Banana Republics. With the new scantron ballot counting system instituted during the Fall 1993, we were all led to believe that Polity elections would finally be 100% legitimate. We were wrong.

The Polity election season is underway with candidates having their nominations filled out and the actual campaigning starting next week. The most interesting aspect of this year's election season is that there is no Polity Election Board chairperson. Despite Jonathan Hanke's resignation as chairperson three weeks ago, Polity has not deemed it worthy to find a replacement. Polity President Jerry Canada has offered to serve as the chairperson of the Election Board. It's a nice gesture Jerry, but we need someone impartial as Election Board Chairperson. Jerry might do a credible job, but Election Board members should have no connections to the candidates, which is hard since many of Jerry's fellow council members are candidates.

Beyond that, Hanke alerted some council members weeks, maybe even months, beforehand that he would be resigning and they should find a replacement. He only resigned after he saw that no efforts were being made to find some to take over his position.

The only person who knows how to run the ballot tallying program at this moment is Hanke - he wrote it. We are not saying that he is dishonest but Hanke is going to be a candidate in the upcoming elections and this situation could lead to some problems come election night.

Not only is the election board in a state of disarray, but the candidates seem to be preparing for yet another dirty campaign. Several presidential candidates have already been vying for Statesman's support. One candidate went as far as to write a letter for one Statesman editor who was in trouble with Student Affairs with the hope that that editor would reciprocate with positive press. Another candidate took another Statesman editor "out to dinner" with the hopes of getting information and to get in the newspaper's good graces.

Candidates should run their campaigns based upon issues, not on policies of sucking up to newspaper editors, engaging in backroom / backstabbing deals / blackmail, and bloated senses of self importance.

Will these elections be any different from the ones of the past? As of right now, it seems that we will need gas masks because the stench of Polity elections will be lingering in the air once again.

Reviewer Had No Knowledge Of Music

To The Editor:

An article titled "What A Shame, An Education But No Talent" appeared in the March 14 edition of your paper. The article, authored by Cliff Kurkowski, was offered as a "review" of the Concert of Music by Women that occurred on March 8 in the Staller Center's Recital Hall. This article contained much inaccurate information about the music performed and presented opinion as fact.

The appearance of this article as a "review" raises serious questions and doubts about the editorial policies of the paper. Mr. Kurkowski's personal reactions to music about which he apparently knows little—he does admit that he is not a "music aficionado"—have no place in what should be an informed and reflective account of the musical events in a performance (Mr. Kurkowski's most influential musical experience appears to be hearing street musicians at "Fanuel (sic) Hall").

Sending this Statesman Staff Writer to review a concert of western, classical music is analogous to sending me to report on a lacrosse match. I know nothing of the rules of the game and would likely describe the event as a "group of people running around in circles with sticks enacting some inane ritualistic act." I might also conclude that such ludicrous activity has no place in a college education. Of course, I would not write such a report since I know that lacrosse does indeed have rules; and, loathe to embarrass myself in such a public arena, I would either refer the assignment to someone else or set out to learn about what I don't understand.

Mr. Kurkowski is certainly entitled to his opinion about contemporary art music, but the editorial review policy of the paper should place such opinions in an appropriate context. If the paper wants to engage a discussion on the value of the art music tradition, it should do so honestly.

If a college education does nothing else, it should at least encourage students to confront new experiences from a position of knowledge. The editorial policy of a student newspaper should encourage such confrontation not confirm student's insecurities.

Associate Professor of Music

Music Review Shows Ignorance

To The Editor:

My letter is about Statesman's March 14, 1994 review of the concert of music by women.

What a shame that your reviewer showed no education and no talent in attempting to review a concert of music which he could not handle and which he had no familiarity with.

And what a shame that your paper showed its mediocrity and irresponsibility both towards your readers and toward those who were "reviewed". You sent a person without any basic knowledge of different eras and genres of music. This is not acceptable in an educational institution. The Department of Music has courses for those who are ignorant about music and need to learn at least the "basics." The job of a music critic is not for a cavalier and opinionated ignoramus.

Unfortunately, there are no courses to remedy the arrogance of ignorance. The swell-headedness and macho stupidity of your reviewer, and of you by implication, is more than obvious. Your ignorant and uncivil reviewer was sent to do a smear-job on the Concert of Music by Women and not, for instance, on the L.I. Philharmonic concert to which you sent someone with at least a smattering of musical education.

You owe an apology to both your readers and the concert participants for publishing, not music criticism, but abusive trash.

Isabel Machado Soveral, ABD

Review was Dim Witted Drivel

To The Editor:

"What a Shame, an Education but no Talent," or what posed as a review of the Department of Music's annual Concert of Music by Women was "very unprofessional with a lot of rough edges." It is a shame that Cliff Kurkowski, and other so-called writers for the Statesman, to cite Cliff's own 'enlightened and educated' rhetoric, "will be graduating with no talent and to top it off, some of them are teaching other students their morals of what (journalism) should be." Well Cliff why don't you just tell the world exactly what that is? What should music be? What is a talented performer? While you are mulling those questions over, let me offer you comments on your skills as a writer and a journalist. One of the things that sets intelligent journalism apart from dim-witted drivel is the ability to see past one's own narrow-minded and uninformed biases. Proper grammar, punctuation, and compositional skills wouldn't hurt either. I've heard some very good things about the writing center here on campus. You might want to make an appointment.

End Religion Now, Before It Is Too Late

By Vincent Bruzesse

I would like to address an issue that most people simply do not want to keep an open mind about. The issue of which I speak is one of the most dangerous elements in our society. I am speaking of the prevalence of religion in our society. One of the oldest and most respected institutions in the history of the world is also the most detrimental to all people physically and mentally. You don't believe me, do you? I figured that most people who will read this will remain as ignorant as they were when they first became religious.

First, look at how religion survives in today's society. Its existence depends on the brainwashing of little children in the family. What choice do the children of our world have when deciding what faith to believe in? When they are finally old enough to make an educated decision, it is too late. Their minds are programmed into believing what their parents told them. They are taught it is a sin for them to believe otherwise.

So what? Big deal. What difference does it make, we are brainwashed into things everyday. What is overlooked is how restricted, educationally, this is for people. People stop asking questions. Why are we here? How did the universe come to be? Is there any answers other than what we are told? These questions are no longer asked by people who, mistakenly, embrace religion.

The problems with religion by no means ends at the mental restriction of our youth. The taking away of the free will and choice is not the only crime of the fanatics of this world. Many people have lost their lives in the pursuit to preserve their wondrous ideals. How many wars have been fought over religion? I will answer for you, almost every single one of them. How people know that Hitler was actually a religious fanatic. He believed he was the son of god and then convinced all of his followers of this. How was he able to do this? These peoples minds were already open to idea of waiting for the presence of a messiah. Once again religion takes part of the destruction of humanity.

The list goes on. I have a question to all the religious women of the world what the hell is the matter with you? Where do you think discrimination against you comes from? Have you read the bible recently? Have you read what Eve's punishment was? Does the words "and he shall be your master" ring any bells? Even the virgin Mary (virgin my ass), had to be pure and innocent to have any redeeming role in the history of religion. Women are constantly degraded in this so called holy book. Homosexuals are not excluded from this constant battering either. Homosexuality is wrong or so religion teaches us, do you agree? I have a feeling a lot of you do not agree. Slavery for a seven year period is also allowed. Yet, if after seven years the slave has the option to leave or stay. Do you agree with that? Apparently, many people seem to endorse these views. It is really sad how many people are hypocritical and don't even know it.

Why can't people just see the truth in the matter. Why are you all so blind. Religion was created out of a misunderstanding of our environment. People didn't understand lightening so they made a god of lightening, thunder and everything the didn't have a clue about. Now science hits the scene, science begins explaining these supposed spiritual acts. What is to be done now? What is religion to do? I tell you what they did, the nomadic Jews started preaching monotheism, successfully. I have to hand it to religion it has persistence. Now, a bunch a mindless people started following this line of reasoning. Was this some magnificent act of god? No, this was just some magnificent of stupidity. Wake Up !!!!!!!

I suppose as well, that everyone believes that humanity was created with incest as well. If you believe in the current faith, then obviously follow this idea. Adam and Eve had two children in the beginning, Cain and Abel. Cain knocked off Abel, and then Cain had a child. I have just one question. Who had Cain's child? Eve, his mother was the only female on earth at the time, you figure it out. You think god is all knowing, think again. Why is that in Genesis, god admits to making a grave error with humanity thus calling on Noah for a flood. How does someone who is all knowing make a grave error? Where is you logic?

So here we are now and where is your god? He, (notice that it is of course a he, what else would you expect). Where was god during the holocaust (translated: whole burnt offering), slavery, wars fought over religion, premature deaths. Where? The almighty doesn't intervene you say? Wrong again. When Moses led the Jews out of Egypt, wasn't it god hardening the Pharaohs heart, preventing his free will, so can he intervene or not?

People must break away from this disease. Don't you see how religion controls the masses? You don't have minds of your own anymore, you are owned, controlled, and manipulated. End it now. I have pledged myself to fighting religion for the rest of my days on earth. As I know there is no life after for me when I am gone. Just like a machine, when I die that is all there is. There is no wondrous soul, no better life afterwards. Start depending on yourselves, not on mysticism and lies. Believe in yourself, not in what your are told to believe in. When asked don't I respect other people choice of their own religion, the answer is No!!!! Just like I won't respect someone's right to murder or rape I also will not respect someone's right to believe in something more dangerous than any bomb or missile we can make. I hope I will get some response on this issue, and I am entirely open to debate anyone and I stress anyone (rabbi, priest, anyone) I know I am right, it is just a matter of waking up enough people to see it. I paraphrase from Karl Marx, end religion and you will have taken care of half of society problems. There is no god and religion will come to an end and when it does I will be there with tears of joy.

Never Mind Athletics - Defund History Dept.

I am sick and tired of all the crap I keep hearing from these anti-Division I lunatics. Day in and day out, they bitch and moan about all the money Division I is going to cost us. Hey, pal, take a look in the mirror.

Athletics is a necessity in life. Anyone who has ever been on an athletic team - especially a college athletic team - can tell you. Athletics build solid foundations of teamwork, respect, comradery, self-esteem, responsibility, etc. What does the History Department do?

They spoon-feed people endless drivel about things that happened hundreds of years ago. What kind of crap is that? Do they discuss anything useful, practical, or applicable? Do they develop any desirable characteristics that will help someone survive in the real world?

What kind of people does the Department of Athletics turn out? Selfless, confident, independent people who are not afraid to work and know how to work with others. Who does the History Department churn out like cattle? Lawyers, politicians and more History professors (to procure this farce): the three classes of people that have rotted society to its roots.

Now, one of these clueless fanatics in the History Department claims that there were 45 men on the USB football team. Was he at any of the games? If he was, either he can't count or he's blind. When will these people realize that not all the answers can be found in a book of statistics. Another one constantly whines about athletes getting all kinds of benefits and being passed through classes not matter how bad they are as students.

Of course, she wasn't whining when she was receiving these supposed benefits at another college. She was one of those poor (as in bad) students that reaped those benefits, and used them to get into one of Stony Brook's grad programs.... in History!

Coincidence? I think not.

Well, Stony Brook, I've had enough! I'm calling on the student body to get off you lazy, apathetic, donut-laden butts and demand SUNY to shut down the History Department. And while we're at it, we might as well get rid of PoliSci. And then we'll pump all of that cash into athletics - something important and useful. Finally, we should level that money pit, formerly called Central Hall, and build a multi-level, free-of-charge commuter parking garage instead of another useless building like a "Student Activity Center."

Just when you thought you had the answers, I change the questions!

I Really Don't Care

It has come to my attention that no one reads this column. Hey, I really don't care. I'm gonna keep on writing, and keep on saying what I damn-well please. And if ya don't like it, well then have a nice day - 'cause I'm sick of hearing it.

Lyric of the Week

My house burned down in a flash of thunder.

My wife ran off with a one-legged plumber.

The crops fell dead when the riverbed went dry.

My dog got squashed by a pickup truck.

My son ran away and got hooked on drugs.

My daughter's knocked-up by the Class of '85.

People say that Life is good.

It don't seem good to me.

I'm lost without a paddle,

And I'm headed up St Creek.

People say that Life is fun,

But I don't know why.

As far as I can tell,

Life sucks, then you die.

The government dumps its toxic waste Right on top of my mother's grave.

A team of experts say it won't do 'er no harm.

But, my sheep went crazy and killed my mule.

I cut off my dk with a power tool, Fixin' a hole when a meteor hit the barn.

(And it hurt, too!)

People say that Life is good,

But I just piss and moan.

I got one foot on a banana peel -

The other in the Twilight Zone.

People say that Life is fun,

But I don't know why.

As far as I can tell,

Life sucks, then you die.

I went to the store to buy some shells. My gun went off and blew the owner to hell.

Now I'm sittin' here in jail, singin' this song.

And one guy wants to cut me with a knife,

Another guy wants me to beat his wife.

Hey, I hope they hang me before somethin' really goes wrong.

People say that Life is good,
Give thanks for what you have.
When all you have is nothin',
Nothin' makes you glad.
People say that Life is fun,
But I don't know why.
As far as I can tell,
Life sucks, then you die.

I said, people say that Life is fun,
But I don't know why.
As far as I can tell,
Life sucks...Life sucks...Life sucks,
then you die.

14 Laskowski's Bad Shorts

King of Athletics, Dr. Richard Laskowski, officiated a charity benefit basketball game between Duke of Athletics for Development, Greg Economou, and lowly sports information peasant, Mark Peterson.

Economou dominated most of the 60-minute contest, but Peterson scored 42 points in the last 2:37, and literally beat Economou into submission. "He had it coming to him," said Peterson. "And I don't care what anybody says about the legality of that biting incident. I won the game fair and square."

From his room on Level 10 of University Hospital, Economou said "I'll run that little jerky over with a steam-roller when I get out of here."

The game, which drew a crowd of over three people, raised $0.78 for the Kingdom of Athletics. "I just wish I hadn't worn those wussie shorts," said Laskowski.

SPORTS TRIVIA QUESTION OF THE WEEK

Congratulations to the Almighty God, the all-knowing Creator, a 5.4-billion-year-old Religion major, who had the correct answer to Thursday's Sports Trivia Question. Starting today, God will be enjoying his prize of one free pretzel and one soda every day for a week, compliments of Stony Brook Pretzel Service and Sports Complex Concessions, Inc.

God was able to name every high school, college, semi-pro, and pro team and nickname worldwide throughout history and into the future (from the Alpha to the Omega - ha, ha). Congratulations, God! We would also like to thank Satan, who forgot the Hartford Hellcats.

We would like to take this opportunity to update our rules for winning. God and Satan are no longer eligible.

Join us again on Thursday for another question (this week: who put the 'lam' in the 'shamma-lamma-ding-dong') and another chance to win.

And, for more information about how you can be a Pretzel Guy, call 1-900-P.R.E.T.Z.E.L. The cost of each call is $400.00 per minute.

Rutabega Sets Pot-Sitting Record

Junior Joey "Flatch" Rutabega of the Stony Brook bowl-ing team set a new University record and has lead his team all season. Rutabega, who plans to hook on with the Professional Bowl-ers Tour next season, sat on the bowl for over two hours and compiled points in four categories, including moaning, snorting, drooling, and shoe-changing. For his extraordinary efforts, Rutabega was named Statesman/LMNOP Club Athlete of the Week.

"I'm just doing for my school what my school is doing for me," said Rutabega, as throngs of students crowded to see him escorted from the Union. "They gave me the bowl, and I just sat on it." Rutabega's official bowl time was 2:14:43.7. This shattered Frank "Crappy" Crapolina's old record of 1:57:09.8 by almost eighteen minutes.

"He's really come a long way in a short time," said bowl-ing head coach Johnny Walker-Black. "When 'Flatch' came to the team last season, he couldn't last but thirty minutes on the pot without something to read. Now, it seems he can stay on there for days on end." Walker-Black added, "He's a world-class pontificator."

Rutabega will be Stony Brook's only representative at the NCAA Division II Championships next week in Fresno, CA. "I'm really hoping that I'll be able to perform as I have been the last few weeks," said Rutabega. "Coach [Walker-Black] has me peaking right before the Nationals. This is what I've been working for all year."

Walker has a lot of confidence in "Flatch." "I have a lot of confidence in 'Flatch'," said Walker-Black. "He definitely has the ability, but even with all his improvement, he is still somewhat lacking in experience. I'm going to have him on the pot all week until two days before we fly out."

Rutabega is 14-3 in head-to-head competition, is currently fourth in the nation in points (14,353), and is ranked number three in the country. "This is my only event, and I hope to put in a good showing," said the junior. "I'm going to do my best, but even if I don't come back National Champion, I still have next year to sit away."

"I just keep sitting and sitting and sitting."

Division I Poll Results Finally Released

By Hairy Rosencrantz and DaMass

Statesman Wonder Twins

Results of a poll of faculty regarding the move to Division I athletics show very strong opposition. Sixty-eight percent of faculty opposed the move, while three out of four faculty members recommend Trident as a weapon against tooth decay. It's also interesting that 50 percent of the 68 percent of the faculty that are against the move did not register a pulse. An alumni poll also shows strong opposition. Fifty-nine percent of alumni are against the move while 73 percent actually One hundred percent of the History department is against the move; however, 98 percent could not name the current President of the United States and 94 percent could not point out New York on a map of New York. Meanwhile, the Department of Mathematics asserted that a fair coin will turn up heads 50 percent of the time.

The following statement is true. The preceding statement is false.

There is also considerable opposition among students and some 40% are undecided about whether the move is a good thing for the campus. Furthermore, 93 percent of the students polled didn't know what Polity is. Surprisingly, 47 percent of the people in the Kingdom of Athletics are against the move. But, 89 percent are in favor of closing down the rest of the University to fund Athletics. Four out of five student-athletes could not read the survey and required the aid of tutors to fill in their answers.

No matter what the polls say, according to King of Athletics, Richard Laskowski, "There's a 50-50 chance we will not go Division I... and there's only a 10 percent chance of that."

WE'RE #1 AGAIN!

Lacrosse Wins Fourth Straight National Title By Destroying North Carolina 27-2.

By DaMass

Statesman Sports Writer Guy

Just twelve years after entering the Division I ranks, the Seawolves have won their fourth consecutive NCAA Championship. A capacity crowd of 67,000 watched the 'Wolves annihilate one-time lacrosse dominator North Carolina by an embarrassing score of 27-2 at Seawolf Stadium.

"Plain and simple, we kicked the crap out of them," said head coach John Espey. "Of all our National Championships, this one was the sweetest." When asked why, Espey said, "It's none of your damn business."

"I'm very proud of all of our young, paid... er, I mean talented athletes," said King of Athletics Richard Laskowski. "And to think, all of this happened only five years after the Department took over the University."

The outcome of the game was "academic" (so to speak) from the beginning. Stony Brook jumped out to a 7-0 lead in the first six minutes of the game. By game's end, Espey had only five players and a goalie on the field - everyone else was at the Indoor Sports Palace.

"We really outplayed dem in ev'ry facet of da game," said 25-year-old sophomore midfielder, William McCaffery. "We might just be a buncha dumb jocks, but boy, can we play lacrosse."

"It's good to see that all that crap we put up with from those Anti-Division I fruitcakes didn't keep us from our goals," said Duke of Athletics for Development, Greg Economou. When asked if perhaps the Anti-D-I's actually had valid points

the Sports Palace.

Back at the Palace, King Laskowski was holding court. He praised the lacrosse team for their dedication and told them not to worry about their finals. "We have who constantly berated the media for misquoting him, and with a vicious public taunting of Dr. David Burner by the National Champions.

This championship will be the last of Espey's as the 'Wolves' coach. Espey will leave the team to be knighted by Laskowski and to take the position as head of the palace guard. Espey leaves the team after more years than anyone cares to count.

The Kingdom of Athletics has organized a search committee to find a replacement for Espey. The committee has been instructed to search for a Chinese-Jewish-African-American-left-handed-midget, either male or female, but preferably asexual.

At any rate, not even the notification of multiple pending NCAA investigations against the Brook could stem the tide of glory from this unprecedented event. "The NCAA can go spit," said His Highness. "They don't tell us what to do, we tell them." Later in the evening, Economou reinforced the King's sentiments. "Look, jerky, we don't have to talk to the NC-double-@#*&?!%-A. We play it our own way. You got me, tough guy?"

For now, the Kingdom will celebrate its fourth straight lacrosse national title and the other six national titles it's captured this fiscal... that is, academic year. But soon, the King and his servants will be looking for the best athletes money can buy - and numerous other national championships.

King of Athletics Dick Laskowski receives transfusion after Lax wins 4th consecutive National title.

considering the average G.P.A. of Stony Brook's student athletes is 1.37, the Duke said, "Look, jerky, I don't have to talk to you anymore." At that time four rather large goons escorted Economou back to plenty of qualified ringers to take them for you," he said.

The title victory celebration lasted for hours. The party culminated with a performance by Court Jester Jim Cronin,
