2,000 Flock to Lecture Center for ICON Weekend

By Tim Lapham

Not even a Biology 151 final exam could bring as many people to the Jacob Javits Lecture Center as last weekend's ICON V science fiction convention. About 2,000 people attended the three-day event that included films, lectures and panel discussions with well-known authors.

The two primary guests of honor were James Doohan, who played Scotty in the Star Trek films and in the television series, and John Pertwee, who played the third "Doctor" on the cult television series Dr. Who. Also well-attended was the Friday night screening of all three "Star Wars" films.

ICON, short for Island Convention, is held every year at Stony Brook. To the casual observer, it seemed to be attended by a large group of people dressed in strange costumes or wearing buttons with arcane sayings and talking about weird things. These people, known as "fans," have varied interests including science fiction, fantasy, filmmaking, old radio shows and general science.

Compared to other science fiction conventions, ICON is actually rather large. Only the massive inner-city conventions such as Balticon and Boskone, which cost about three times as much to attend as ICON, are likely to attract more than 2,000 people. Most of the people at the convention came from the New York metropolitan area, but there were a few that came from as far away as the west coast.

Despite the large number of people that attended, ICON is not a money-making convention. "We don't expect to make any money from this year's ICON," said ICON Vice Chairman John Madonia. He added that the costs of running a convention are very high. Return of the Jedi, for example, cost $1,000 to rent for the weekend.

The guests are also very expensive. "We had to pay to

One of ICON's costumed fans

James Doohan

Statesman/Daniel Smith

fly Pertwee from England ... plus the fee he is paid," Madonia said. Funding for ICON comes primarily from the money collected from the ticket sales. Several groups on campus, including Commuter College and COCA, helped to supply funding for the convention. The most common complaint that the fans had was with the con-suite (a party room where people get to meet the authors). First, many people were unhappy that they had to pay an extra three dollars to go to the party and second, they were unhappy that you had to be 21 to get in.

"We would have had to raise the price of admission about $10 if we wanted to have a con-suite [open to all 2,000 people]," Madonia said. He also said that the 21 rule was university policy and they could not find any way to get around it. There were some other complaints about event planning, but Madonia said they tried to plan as diverse a program as possible. "We try to give people what they want," he said.

The planning for ICON V began shortly after last year's ICON IV. Some of the planning for ICON VI has already begun. Madonia said that next year he wants to concentrate on making the science guests more visible and solving the con-suite problem.

Administration Weighs Protest Over Alcohol Policy

No Changes Forseen in RAs and MAs Enforcing Alcohol Policy

By Mitchell Horowitz

Responding to a letter signed by 73 Residence Assistants and Managerial Assistants who are protesting their role in enforcing the campus alcohol policy, administrative officials yesterday acknowledged the difficulties expressed in the letter but said no actual changes would be made in the duties of the student staff members.

"Because it [the alcohol policy] marks a change, I can understand that it is a challenge for RAs and MAs," said Vice President for Student Affairs Fred Preston. "... But I don't believe you just take something out of your job description because you don't like it."

Last week's letter to the administration was signed by RAs and MAs from G and H Quads protesting their role as enforcers of the ban on kegs and public drinking in the residence halls. The letter suggests that individuals other than student staff members be responsible for enforcing the policy. "Our enforcement has not fostered unity but has instead led to segregation and secrecy" between student staff and the residents, the letter states.

"If an RA chooses to let that happen, it can," Preston said. "But many RAs are doing that job [enforcing alcohol policies] around the country and doing it fine."

Director of Residence Life Dallas

Baumann said an official response would be given to the letter sometime this week. "Several of the staff are going to follow up on it," he said. "We're going to talk about it. It is going to be a transition period, not that with time it's going to go away. We need to provide better skills in dealing with conflicting roles."

"The enforcement of the alcohol guidelines by the student staff clashes with the attempts to provide the many services which we wish to provide our students," the letter states. "We have become alienated from the students and there has been a dissipation of trust and respect. The enforcement of the alcohol policy by the student staff has been implemented at a high cost to the residents."

"Some [people] can't easily get past that kind of a multiple role," Baumann said. "It makes the job more difficult but not impossible."

"It puts more pressure on the current RAs than it will on the the future RAs," Preston said. "Residence Life will help them make the transition. It is a challenge to RAs, particularly this spring's group."

Straight talk about crooked noses.

Let's face it: if you think your nose is too big, it's too big — no matter what anyone else thinks. And, if it can be made beautiful, well . . . why not?

There are pros and cons, risks and rewards, questions of whether, when, where, how and by whom.

To give you the facts, the doctors of South Shore Cosmetic Surgeons have prepared a frank and honest booklet that talks about the subject in plain English. It's free. Just call or drop in for your copy.

New Student Lobbying Group Under Question

By the College Press Service

Washington, D.C. — A new student lobbying group emerged last week with a press conference denouncing group President Reagan's proposed budget cuts, amid charges it was just another group founded to salve a student politician's wounded ego.

Disclaiming such charges, John Allen, director of the new National Student Roundtable's (NSRT) Washington office, said his group is just trying to protect student interests in Congress. The roundtable's emphasis, he said, "is solely higher education." As a result, the group will compete for legislators' attention with the long-established U.S. Student Association (USSA).

Groups as diverse as the Young Americans for Freedom, the Student Nonviolent Coordinating Committee, the National Student Lobby, Students for a Democratic Society and, in 1978, the American Student Association (ASA) have spun off from USSA in the past to try to establish an alternative student voice in Washington D.C.

The splinter groups often began for ideological reasons — claiming USSA either spent too much time on "nonstudent issues" like abortion, or was too liberal or, in the sixties, would not deal with civil rights or anti-war issues — or for more personal reasons.

In 1978, for example, student Tom Duffy began ASA only after losing a campaign for the USSA chairmanship. Some USSA officials trace NSRT's origins to another disappointed seeker of a USSA office.

"We're seeking bipartisan support on higher education issues," Allen said. "Some of our members feel that USSA sometimes slights or damages higher education questions because of its concern for international and social policies. Forcing these views can drive off some groups who may disagree on particular issues."

"They're legitimate in their concern for higher education," said Bill Ford, director of the California Tech student association in Los Angeles. "Our members might lean their way, except that USSA is more oriented to the West. We're likely to affiliate with both organizations."

Joanna Richard of the University of Wisconsin United Council objected only to NSRT's approach to decision-making. "We are more grass roots oriented," she said. "The executive approach is not as effective for us."

Campus News Briefs

Statesman is sponsoring a journalism conference, which will take place on Saturday, April 12 and Sunday, April 13 for those students interested in any or all aspects of college and professional journalism.

The conference will begin at 9:30 AM on Saturday and will include workshops on feature writing, investigative journalism, editorial writing, photojournalism and lay-out as well as broadcasting and wire-service journalism. Speakers from Newsday, the New York Press Association and the Long Island Press Club will lecture on these and other topics.

The conference will take place in the Student Union Building and is open to the public. For more information call Walter Fishon at 246-3690.

Arthur M. Sackler, scientist, publisher and art collector, will give the inaugural lecture of the Sir Run Run Shaw Distinguished Lecture Series on Tuesday, April 8 at 8:30 PM in the Fine Arts Center Main Stage.

Sackler will speak on "Some Reflections on the Arts, Sciences, and Humanities." Sackler's work as a scientist includes investigations into histamine disorders, neuroendocrinology and medical applications of ultrasound. He publishes the Medical Tribune, a scientific newspaper that disseminates important advances in health care to more than 1,000,000 readers in 20 countries. His private art collection includes works of Asian art, Western and pre-Columbian ceramics and sculptures, and Western painting from the pre-Renaissance period.

The Sir Run Run Shaw Distinguished Lecture series is named for the philanthropist who is chairman of Shaw Brothers Ltd., the largest movie studio in Southeast Asia. His record of social services includes cultural programs, aid for the sick and disabled, and support for educational institutions. Most recently, Sir Run Run Shaw donated a new college, to be named after him, to the Chinese University of Hong Kong.

John Darnton, Pulitzer Prize-winning New York Times foreign correspondent, will speak on "Covering Poland: The Solidarity Period and Its Aftermath," on Monday, April 7 at 8:00 PM in the Javits Room of the Frank Melville Jr. Memorial Library.

Darnton, deputy foreign editor of The New York Times since 1984, will be visiting the university campus as a guest of the Federated Learning Communities, an innovative interdisciplinary program for undergraduates. The lecture will honor the late Martin Buskin, who served as Newsday's education editor, as president of the Education Writers of America and as an adjunct professor of journalism at Stony Brook.

The Martin Buskin Memorial Lecture was begun in 1977 and has included speakers such as CBS Special Correspondent Bill Moyers, Times Education Editor Edward B. Fiske, Pulitzer Prize-winning columnist Murray Kempton and investigative reporters Robert W. Greene of Newsday, and Jack Newfield of The Village Voice.

Also, the Martin Buskin Memorial Award was established to honor a student who has made a substantial contribution to journalism. The name of this year's recipient will be announced at the lecture.

Darnton won the Pulitzer Prize in 1982 for his reporting during the height of the solidarity movement.

The works of Miriam Gideon, one of the most active and well-known senior composers in the country, will be performed in a retrospective concert at Stony Brook on Monday, April 7.

A Very Strange Way to Spend a Rainy Weekend

It was a cold and rainy Friday evening. It seemed as if all the whole campus were in hibernation. Yet there seemed to be some commotion around the Jacob Javits Lecture Center; cars were parked outside, signs were being put up and people were cramming themselves through the front door. It was a very strange sight, especially for a wet Friday evening.

Stepping inside the dimly lit building was like stepping into twelfth century Europe; or twenty fifth century Earth; or a screening of Star Trek; or even a battle between wizards. What had brought this strange mix of people together? According to the sign over the registration desk, it was ICON V. What is an ICON?

ICON (Island CONvention) is a science fiction convention held every year at Stony Brook. Science fiction conventions, called cons, are held all over the world. On the east coast alone, you can find at least one convention every weekend. Cons vary in their specialties, ranging from comic book collecting to wargaming to costuming. Regardless of specialty, each con draws a wide variety of people.

Stepping into room 100 to find the three "Star Wars" films being shown was a welcome change from the usual lecture on squid anatomy. In one room there were videotapes of Star Trek episodes. In another room there was a radio show and in still another room John Pertwee, who played the part of the third "Doctor" on the television series Dr. Who, was signing autographs. Across campus, in the second floor meeting rooms of the Stony Brook Union, wargamers of every ilk were casting dice and moving miniatures.

But the strangest part of the con, and of cons in general, is the people. Once you get used to the archaic costumes, you find that the people in them are more open and more friendly than any other group of people. The ones dressed in leather biking outfits look as though they would kill you if they saw you in the street. Yet if you ask them, they are likely to spend hours describing how they got their clothes, which cons they have been to and what their favorite hobbies are. And if you happen to stumble upon a game in process, all you have to do is ask and the gamers are certain to invite you to play. So what if you have never even heard of Dungeons and Dragons; the players will be happy to teach you the rules.

Alcohol Enforcement Article Off-Base

To the Editor:

The petition about the enforcement of the alcohol policy you reported on [April 3] was signed by 73 student-staff members who wished to voice their dissatisfaction with their roles in the enforcement of the campus alcohol policy. The articles approached this topic very differently from the editorial. The editorial was a thoughtful analysis of the dilemma that many staff members have been faced with, while the front page article was a thinly-veiled attack on the administration.

My objections to the article begin with a telephone interview that Mitchell Horowitz gave me at 12:30 AM on April 3rd. I was quite surprised that an issue as important as the enforcement of the alcohol policy was being dealt with on such a last-minute basis, without adequate research being done to support the views espoused in the article.

After reading the article, I was shocked. Instead of focusing on the letter which the student-staff members wrote, a major portion of the article was dedicated to quotes from staff members. These quotes were taken out of context and made to fit into Mr. Horowitz's interpretation of the situation. Furthermore, the quote that I allegedly made concerning inter-staff strife was blatantly misquoted. My comment was that residents on one hall often ask why residents on other halls are subject to different interpretations of the alcohol policy. I was appalled by the fact that Mr. Horowitz had no reservations about using my name in his article without seeking my permission to do so. This error was compounded when he attributed misquotes to my name, further impairing my credibility with my superiors.

A resident student reading Mr. Horowitz's article could very easily assume, given the ambiguous writing style present in the article, that this was just another situation where administration was turning a deaf ear towards a request made by students. I cannot believe that this is the case. It was only after multiple re-readings of the article that I was able to ascertain that President Marburger was indeed willing to listen.

I think that the front page article did not explain the reasons that the letter was written. Our [the student staff] goals in writing the letter were to:

1) Make the Division of Residence Life aware of the fact that enforcement of the alcohol policy has adversely affected our roles as advisors, counselors, and friends.

2) Indicate that we are not complaining about a new policy, but are looking for a more viable means of enforcement.

3) State that we are willing to work with the administration to create a solid policy that eliminates the present ambiguities.

Give Blood Conquer AFRAIDS

To the Editor:

While AIDS has struck only a small fraction of the population, it has triggered a second epidemic of hysteria, which is even scarier. It is called AFRAIDS (Acute Fear Regarding AIDS).

The AIDS virus is transmitted either through sexual contact involving the breaking of bodily tissue and exchanging of bodily fluids, from contaminated needles used by drug addicts, or from contaminated blood in a transfusion. The latter is no longer a threat since screening methods have already been perfected.

Let me reassure you that there is no risk to you from donating blood! During the donation process a blood bank worker, specifically instructed in the proper techniques for scrupulous attention to hygiene at every step of the procedure, opens a sterile, disposable blade and pricks your finger to test your blood. Then the blade is thrown away. If you make it as far as the actual donation process, another worker locates a vein in your arm, inserts a new disposable syringe into the vein, attaches that to a disposable tubing attached to a disposable plastic blood collection bag and your blood is collected in the bag. Again, all materials are discarded after their one and only use, so that the danger of contracting AIDS is eliminated.

Please do not use AFRAIDS as an excuse not to give blood because we all need blood. The 95% of the population fortunate enough to live to the age of 72 will, at some time in their lives, need blood. Your donation could help a baby in open-heart surgery, a little girl with leukemia, or a grandmother who has broken her hip.

PLEASE give the gift of life on Wednesday, April 9, between 10:00 AM and 8:30 PM in the gym and help conquer AFRAIDS!

Music Between COCA Films Doubtful

To the Editor:

In response to Carl B. Weiss' letter [March 20] 1986, the committee and staff of COCA appreciate Mr. Weiss' comments on our efforts to make the campus weekend movies as enjoyable as possible. The idea of playing "music between movies" has come up before, but last year we were told that SCOOP AV could not guarantee us a tape deck every weekend as much of their audio equipment was already committed to other weekend events.

With the recent theft of $10,000 worth of equipment from SCOOP AV, it is even more doubtful that they could provide us with "music between the movies" in the Lecture Hall, but we will see what we can work out. Again, thank you for your comments and I'm glad you enjoy a good Warner Brothers cartoon as much as I do

Get A Lot From A Little, Mandarins That Is

By Alan Goinick

Among the peculiarities known to Long Island is the location of its Chinese restaurants. In the shopping center near Waldbaum's and the deli can often be found the local source of Oriental cuisine. After dining out, man of us have gotten into the habit of taking a few short steps to do the marketing. How thrilling.

The Little Mandarins, on the other hand, is a full-service Chinese restaurant not located in any shopping center. At The Little Mandarins one's meal is served in a relaxed, tastefully-decorated atmosphere. There's more than a few tables and chairs scattered about a room trafficked by patrons carrying brown bags containing what will eventually be their meal. Of course The Little Mandarins offers a take-out service. But their waiting area is more than a Pepsi machine against which to lean.

Both inside and out, The Little Mandarins succeeds in providing a totally Oriental ambience. It's hard to miss their bright yellow sign on Route 25A just east of the university. The outside of the building is laced with Oriental ornaments and inside, the decor reflects a subdued Asian influence. Ornamental chandeliers, works of Oriental art and bamboo window treatments make for a tranquil atmosphere.

The Little Mandarins runs the gamut of Oriental culinary offerings with over 40 menu selections to choose from. There are both Mandarin and Cantonese dishes, ranging from appetizers, soups, chow mein, egg foo young, lo meins and beef, chicken, shrimp and pork dishes. Complete luncheons range from $3.75-

$5.25 and a la carte dishes range from $3.95-$8.95. The food is not overly spicy or greasy. The chef has many of his own specialties, such as sliced beef and chicken with watercress or shredded chicken with garden vegetables. Catering service is available for up to 400 people.

The Little Mandarins has a spacious cocktail lounge that's also decorated with Oriental trimmings. Perhaps you'll find that to be the perfect way to unwind - Oriental cuisine served in an atmosphere of style and class, topped off with a drink.
