GSO Lounge to Reopen Today

By Mitchell Horowitz

The Graduate Student Organization Lounge is reopening today, but alcohol will not be served, GSO President Chris Vestuto said Monday.

The Lounge was closed last semester because the GSO was unable to attain affordable alcohol liability insurance coverage. If the Faculty Student Association (FSA) takes charge of the Lounge alcohol sales may be resumed, Vestuto said. Until such a time, however, the Lounge will be used as a "gathering place" with coffee, tea and pastries provided free, he said.

"Everybody wants it to be a bar," said Kevin Kelly, GSO Lounge Committee chairman. "We can't do that, the FSA can."

"This will allow us to boost ourselves up into doing something else if they [the FSA] don't take it over," Vestuto said.

The Lounge will operate on $200 a month from the GSO and on a "donations only basis," according to a memo from Kelly. As long as all non-alcoholic refreshments served at the Lounge are given away and not sold, the GSO's general insurance policy will cover it, Kelly said.

Board games, chess and checker sets and Trivial Pursuit will be available at the Lounge, Vestuto said. A VCR will be set-up to hold "movie nights", possibly on Wednesdays; and the Lounge's stereo will also be in use, he said.

Volunteers are currently slotted to work in the Lounge, although the GSO is interested in soliciting work-study students, Kelly said. The hours will be Monday through Thursday, 4 p.m. to 8 p.m. and until 11 p.m. on Wednesdays for movies.

Humanities Poetry Center Debuts With English Faculty Readings

By Ray Parish

The English Department Poetry Center's first major presentation, a benefit reading by Assistant Professor Helen Cooper and Associate Professor Billy Joe Harris, was held Tuesday night in the Center's new home in the Humanities Building.

The benefit raised $278 for the purchase of reading lamps and other furnishings for room 239, where the Poetry Center offers students and faculty an atmosphere for studying, writing, and reading, as well as a place to attend the series of events and readings planned for the fall semester.

Cooper was first to read, reciting a series of her poems, many of which focused on her childhood. Before she began, she offered as a partial explanation for this focus the fact that this was the first time she would be reading with her young daughter in the audience (or standing next to her at the podium, as it turned out).

During the intermission following Cooper's presentation, members of the audience made donations for the center. Harris then entertained the audience with selections of his poetry, most of which took a more humorous note.

June Jordan, the new director of the Creative Writing Program and the Poetry Center, and Denise Boerckel, who is assistant director of the Center, established the schedule for the upcoming events in just the past three weeks. Both were extremely pleased by the attendance at Tuesday night's event, as the room was packed, with some members of the audience standing or sitting against the walls of the room.

"We really could not be more excited," said Jordan, "The fact that this event ... was standing room only is really thrilling."

Jordan said that preparation for the "resurrection" of the Poetry Center went according to plans. "I came into this position with some very definite goals," she said. Plans for the future of the Center include making a bid for increased funding, according to Jordan.

Funding for the Center for this year includes a $1000 budget from the university, Jordan said. An additional $750 in matching funds will be provided by Poets and Writers, Inc., a service agency providing support for readings and workshops in New York State.

"We met with great enthusiasm in everyone we approached," said Jordan.

"We have seen a real ground swell," Boerckel said. "In the three weeks that we have been working, people have constantly come into the office, saying 'This is great.' The poets on campus are coming out of the woodwork ... It's generating a lot of enthusiasm."

Jordan said that she hopes to collaborate with different departments and organizations on campus to help emphasize the importance of writing in all fields of study. She said that she has already spoken with the chairpersons of the theatre arts department and the music department and discussed the possibility of collaborative plans in the future.

Jordan also said that she had received a letter from the chairman of the physics department expressing interest in a combined-effort program. Regarding the extension of the Center's influence outside the liberal arts, Jordan said, "I don't think it is inappropriate for poetry, in a way, because poetry is the distillation of the most com-

DSA Holds Forum On Abortion

By Daniel Smith

Reproductive rights was the main topic at an open forum held last night by the newly formed Stony Brook chapter of the Democratic Socialists of America (DSA).

Although the forum began with a discussion about the two major opposing stances on abortion - pro-life and pro-choice - much of the actual discussion was centered on the latter view, which is the stance of the DSA.

The pro-life view, speakers said, is basically anti-abortion in all respects: the idea is that life begins at conception, thus making abortion murder. The pro-choice view is that life begins at birth, and the unborn fetus is a part of the woman's body which she can do with what she wants.

A major portion of the forum was a lecture by Paul Kumar, the national chairperson of the DSA's youth section. It is the youth section that has actually set up a chapter on this campus, as well as on approximately 40 other campuses nationwide.

Kumar spoke on the political aspects of abortion and birth control. He talked about the history of the conflict surrounding those issues as well as recent occurrences across the nation related to the conflict.

He said that some states created improper sex education classes in their schools that painted incorrect pictures of the development of the fetus, giving girls a false idea of what happens in an abortion. The rate of sexual activity or pregnancies in these districts, however, did not decrease, he said, only the number of abortions did.

The legalities of abortion were discussed, as well as some of the different techniques that are used. The Supreme Court has ruled, said Lauren Shepherd, co-chairperson of the Stony Brook DSA chapter, that no state may pass a law preventing an abortion before the 28th week of pregnancy unless they can justify such laws as a protection of the

Town Meeting Focuses on Affirmative Action

By Keith Altman

University officials met with main campus and University Hospital employees yesterday in what was billed as a "town meeting" to discuss affirmative action and working conditions on campus.

The meeting, held in the Student Union auditorium, was the first in a series of three designed to allow staff, faculty and students to voice their concerns and ask questions about affirmative action and working conditions on campus.

The discussion was conducted in an orderly fashion; people were called on to ask questions they had previously submitted. The forum was moderated by Marion Metivier, special assistant to the university president on affirmative action. Much of the discussion centered around the role of money in affirmative action programs.

"Stony Brook does not give enough support to foreign students," said Lynn King Morris, the university's foreign student advisor, "who are not entitled to affirmative action, but do bring a contribution to this campus." She said that she is the sole advisor for 2700 foreign students.

Aldona Jonaitis, acting vice provost for Undergraduate Studies, said the foreign student issue should be looked into, but now is a bad time for this due to budgetary shortages. Because of the shortages, immediate expansion is not possible, she said.

Other questions concerning supplies, overtime pay and general working conditions were answered by Robert Francis, vice president for Campus Operations. "I have a budget of $187,000. With $90,000 for plastic bags and $55,000 for paper goods, there isn't much left for sponges and new equipment," he said responding to hospital employees' questions about supplies.

Francis also said he had to cut his overtime budget by $300,000. He said that the more money spent on overtime, the slower the salary budget gets used up, which means fewer jobs will be created.

Antony Ruggiero, president of the local chapter of CSEA said that money must be found to improve the conditions of the workers and that he was "willing to go anywhere; speak to anyone. I'll bring people in on their day off and put them in front of the administration building if that's what you want."

University President John Marburger responded by saying "You have to work with us. We're operating with a budget that is three to five million dollars too small."

Another issue was that of promotions and civil service exams. Muriel Carter and Goldie Evans, both university stenographers, said they had taken the civil service exam numerous times and passed, but were still deemed ineligible for promotion. They both felt that the civil service exams were filled with many irrelevant questions and that they really don't demonstrate who deserves promotion.

Jurgen Krausse, personnel director for Human Resources, said that recently Albany decided that there would be some revamping of the promotion system, but not before announcing that there would be a stenographers exam again in November.

Marburger added that he felt the civil service exams were in many ways ridiculous and unnecessary and must be either revised or replaced as an indicator for promotions.

Despite Vandals, Campus Shanties Stand

By the College Press Service

Salt Lake City, UT - A federal judge last week ruled University of Utah anti-apartheid demonstrators don't have to tear down their symbolic "shanties" even if they've become a target for vandals.

In his ruling, U.S. District Judge Aldon Anderson effectively declared the national anti-apartheid campus movement has become an insurance hazard, but that it shouldn't be enough to shut the movement down.

The anti-apartheid students themselves tend to blame conservative students for the vandalism that has plagued them with increasing frequency since last fall, though the conservatives deny the charges.

Arsonists torched shanties at Indiana during the summer, while at the peak of the spring protest season vandals wrecked or defaced the "shelters" - meant to symbolize the poverty of black citizens of segregationist South Africa - at Berkeley, Stanford, Yale, North Carolina, Dartmouth, Missouri and Maryland, among other campuses.

The hazards persuaded officials at a number of colleges to ask protestors to dismantle the structures before someone got hurt, and the schools themselves were held liable.

University of Utah President Chase Peterson, for one, cited safety and liability problems when he asked students to dismantle the shanties. But Judge Anderson last week ruled that, while Peterson could impose "reasonable" restrictions on use of the shanties, dismantling them would violate the protestors' rights to express themselves politically. The university is appealing the ruling.

The shanties in Dunn Meadow, erected in April, have been the target of five attacks. BB guns, eggs, chemicals, tear gas and a Molotov Cocktail have all come hurtling toward the buildings and their occupants.

On August 18, two of the buildings were burned to the ground. No one was injured, and no one has been arrested in connection with the incident.

Josh Nessen of the American Committee on Africa, which coordinates national campus anti-apartheid activities each spring and fall, blames the Republican Party.

"Our opposition is housed in the Republican Party," he said. "They are collaborating with the South African regime to help set up moderate student alliances. A lot of money is being funnelled from the Reagan administration to College Republican campaigns."

While College Republican officials readily concede they oppose calls for colleges to sell their stocks in firms that do business in South Africa, they deny Nessen's charge.

"We have formally taken a stand for anti-divestment," said Dennis Kilcoyne, head of the National College Republicans in Washington, D.C. "In fact, we encourage more investment (in South Africa). However, we are not funding any groups against divestment." Officials, he said, "would not touch this (issue) with a 10-foot pole."

A College Republican chapter member was also arrested at Penn State for tacking "Don't Tread On Me, Blackie" posters around the campus last spring. At Utah, though, the anti-apartheid folks are led by Ron Gardner, who calls himself "a card-carrying Young Democrat." Speaking of the shanty vandalism, "I have no idea who did that, although our organization was implicated," Gardner said. "We are trying to stay away from people who seem like Nazis." Initially, Gardner said he "thought the shanties were a great idea. They heightened political awareness."

"People in Utah are usually content to follow the Mormon Church or Reagan's line. They don't tend to think for themselves."

Fall Fest: Mixed Factors and Mixed Results

There has been considerable disagreement in the past few days over the way Fall Fest '86 turned out. Polity members have complained that criticism of the event has been insensitive to the fact that only a handful of people had only about three weeks to conjure up the entire fest. Many students, however, have complained that the event was inundated by "townies" and lacked the familiar atmosphere of past fests. Wimp-out Opinion of the Year: Both sides are correct.

True, some tribute must be paid to the event's coordinators. Large committees organized past fests during the summer months. The people who organized Fall Fest '86 had only the few weeks after Labor Day weekend to make all the plans. Also, the university would allow them to use only the ESS parking lot. This was a smaller space than the athletic fields and, of course, asphalt does not provide a comfortable environment for listening to music or watching movies. This created more crowd problems by preventing anyone from relaxing on the ground while eating, listening, or watching, as was always done on the fields. And obviously, the tightened alcohol regulations detracted from the good times of many.

Some students called the event "Townie Fest" and their bitter humor was not far off the mark. According to a co-coordinator of the event, about half of the people there were non-students. To ensure a relaxed atmosphere for the students, this will have to change.

The Three Village Chamber of Commerce participated in Fall Fest this year, resulting in increased advertising in the surrounding towns. Advertising spots on WBAB also brought in many outsiders. On-campus advertising for the event was scarcer than in past years. The vast majority of people attending future fests must be students. The complaints most often heard concerned the lack of alcohol and the lack of students. The former is tough to deal with, but the latter is a factor that can be controlled.

Many students said that the fireworks show was mediocre this year. Firework-show prices are very high, and were just raised. Perhaps in future years the money earmarked for such shows could be diverted toward getting more, or better-known, bands.

The highlight of Fall Fest was probably the blazing performance by NRBO. If there is more organizing time next year, such semi well known bands should be hired to play throughout the weekend.

Unfortunately, there was very little audience-gathering for the daytime bands. This may have been because of the asphalt situation. People are not going to stand around for a band they don't know. When the event was on the fields, however, people seemed content to sit down and give the bands a chance. This is, of course, an Administration difficulty. Using a parking lot is uncomfortable and does not encourage anyone to hang around.

The carnival midway was a disappointment. Spending a couple of bucks to throw ping-pong balls into a clown's mouth to win a stuffed worm kind of loses its thrill when you hit college-age. Perhaps an international food fair, cartoonists, and video set-ups could replace some of the carnival games (which many people feel are scams anyway).

Lord knows that every student organization from Statesman to the Outing Club performs under the strain of campus apathy. We can empathize with the Fall Fest organizers' feeling that they were on their own all the way, and then finding themselves criticised after the fest.

Perhaps next year the non-student, or "townie," situation will be foreseen and dealt with, and more student interest can be generated for the production of the fest. A survey to learn what students would like may also be in order.

Most importantly, more students should consider the outrageous: getting involved.

Recent Polity Coverage Biased and Unfair

By Marc Gunning

I am extremely disappointed with the latest issue of Statesman for quite a number of reasons. Due to biased reporting (which included personal reviews instead of hard facts) and an inappropriate editorial, Student Polity was given negative publicity. I'm not sure of the reasoning behind this, especially since Statesman is now asking the Polity Council for financial help once again. Whether there remains a hidden threat of bad publicity in the future if we don't help Statesman I cannot say; however, the possibility exists.

The articles that I am specifically having a problem with are the following:

1. Let's start with page 1: "GSO Requests Representation in FSA." Why wasn't Polity contacted for our viewpoints? Since this issue affects undergraduates, shouldn't we have been contacted? Quotes from Pat Flannery's letter aside, there was no attempt on Statesman's behalf to get Polity viewpoints on this topic.

2. Page 2: Not one mention of a Polity sponsored event is given in the "Weekly Calendar" or "Around Campus" sections.

3. Page 3: "Students Voice Distaste Over DAKA Service." No mention was made that FSA and Polity officials also attended and participated in that meeting. Lisa Garcia, Polity junior rep.; Mike Fitzpatrick, FSA class A member and expolity vice President; Ira Persky, FSA executive director; Mike Tartini, FSA president and myself were at that meeting, and we offered a number of proposed solutions to some of the problems discussed. All of us were and are concerned with the reported problems in Kelly Cafeteria.

4. Page 6: "PSC: When Is It Ever Going to Learn?" Why are you attacking the Program and Services Council when it hasn't even met yet? A PSC meeting was called last Thursday, but only two members were able to attend. Anything that those two members voted on would have been declared invalid because the quorum of 5 members had not been reached. Your suggestions and hints of a conspiracy are paranoid and inappropriate. If Red Balloon Collective had not been on that agenda, would Statesman have gone ahead with that editorial? Doubtful.

5. Page 8: The title of Josh Dubnau's letter. I don't understand why this guy is complaining, but he has the right to do so. Statesman, however, came up with the title "There They Go Again", once again referring to the Program and Services Council and the alleged ongoing conspiracy. (Reread reason four.)

6. Finally we have page 12: "Celebrating Fall Fest '86 for the Fun of It." Is this an article or a review? Let's examine the reported facts: there were 150 kegs of beer, not 200, of which 66 were consumed, not 60. "A Nightmare on Elm Street" was never shown. The cancellation of the band "1812" was not "mysterious" — it was due to outbreaks of rain. (Exactly what is a "seemingly state-issued Grucci fireworks display?") Then we have phrases like "...it was a well organized event..." with "...a few unique pleasures..." and "...there was no rain to drown out the festivities, however unfestive..." because it "...lacked originality..." and was a "generic affair." Is it me, or are there a few contradictions here?

The Fall Fest Committee put in a tremendous amount of work to do a thankless job. Mike Fitzpatrick, Paul LaMantia and others had three weeks to pull off that event, when it normally takes about four to six months. I for one am very grateful and pleased with the job that they did. It would have helped if Statesman had lended Fall Fest support rather than complained about it.

Statesman has a responsibility to this campus to report facts accurately. It is my opinion that Statesman has failed in their responsibility. Statesman has made a number of improvements in recent years and hopefully will continue to do so. The last issue, however, was a step backwards.

(The writer is the President of Student Polity and was co-producer for Fall Fest '86.)

Letters

Misunderstanding Fall Fest

To the Editor:

At this time I would like to thank Kathy Fellows for the energy she put into writing "Celebrating Fall Fest '86 for The Fun of It," however inaccurate it was. Obviously this paper does not realize the amount of man-hours, time and dedication it requires to produce such an event.

This event is run through Polity and the Student Activities Fee (SAB), both student run organizations. Many people from these organizations worked hard and long to facilitate Fall Fest '86. If the students are unsatisfied with this "generic affair" (ha-ha) I suggest that they become involved in planning the foundation of Fall Fest '87 and other student activities.

The "seemingly state-issued Grucci fireworks display" was not state-issued at all, but rather conceived and executed by the members of the Fall Fest Committee.

"It was a well organized event, although security guards, vendors, and the majority of band members seemed half-hearted about taking part." You're damn right it was well organized, but let us take into account the large crowds in attendance both Friday and Saturday nights. It is a little difficult to be bouncing off the walls with enthusiasm while trying to keep events running smoothly and providing a safe atmosphere for the enjoyment of all when you're at the point of physical exhaustion.

Fall Fest does not end at 2 a.m. when the crowds go home for those on the committee. More often than not these students remain on the fair grounds until 7 or 8 in the morning tying up loose ends, only to return at 10 or 11 a.m. to reopen and reorganize for the next day.

I personally would like to praise those students who worked so selflessly to make Fall Fest '86 a great success. They are: Pete Fox, Marc Gunning, Mike Fitzpatrick, Tymon Yound, Mike O'Malley, Fran Wexler, Lisa Teish, Helen Robson, Evie Hedayatzaheh, Chris Scaduto, Josie Molina, Sue Q. Frank Scutarro, Scott Christy, John Salca, and all those others who worked for security, selling tickets, etc. Also, a special thanks to Paul LaMantia for his help in coordinating this affair.

advertisement tempts students to engage in the immoral and anti-intellectual act of submitting commercially prepared term papers as their own work. It condones illegal acts, because the sale of research papers is against the law in New York State. As the Undergraduate Bulletin says (p. 45): "Intellectual honesty is the cornerstone of all academic and scholarly work."

Stony Brook cannot be proud of a newspaper that will accept revenue from this source nor of any readers who may welcome the information and use the source to undermine their own education and cheat their peers.

Research Ad Flunks

To the Editor:

On September 11th Statesman published an advertisement for an activity totally antithetical to the academic enterprise: the sale of research papers. To accept such an advertisement is outrageous. This

Surprises at Happy Days

By Tim Lapham
 Stepping through the stylish, ultra-modern storefront of Happy Days Ice Cream Parlor is, to say the least, intriguing. Entering the store, it seems ordinary enough with a take-out counter followed by a variety of tables and booths. But stepping all the way, one is greeted by several pleasant surprises.

The first surprise will come when you sit down to find the likes of Elvis, Bogart and the Brooklyn Dodgers staring at you. This is the first clue that something in the pleasant environment betrays the modern appearance. The second clue comes when you are served by the kinkily waitresses, dressed all in white, reminiscent of sock-hop days. The final clue comes when someone drops a quarter in the jukebox and instead of Madonna, out come the greatest tunes of the '50s and '60s.

Even more pleasant than the atmosphere are the prices. A full fledged banana split costs a scant $2.75. If splits aren't your thing, you can opt for a sundae for only $2.45. I suggest the tutti-frutti, a tangy desert that delivers a refreshing zap to the palate. For the ice cream connoisseur, there is the Commons Crock, named after the plaza the store is on ($3.47). And for those who want to ice-creamate themselves with a barrage of scoops, there is the massive P.J. Pitt, a 21-scoop dish with absolutely every topping.

Besides just ice cream, Happy Days is a nice place to go for regular meals, or just for a snack. A full breakfast can be had for less than $3.00 and most dinners are under $4.00.

For a snack, I recommend the mozzarella sticks, which come nestled in a bed of lettuce and is served with Happy Days' home-made cocktail sauce.

Women's Tennis Sweeps Nassau

By Myrna McElhiney

The Stony Brook tennis team won their third match of the season yesterday defeating Nassau Community College 9-0. This win brings the Patriots' record to 2-1.

The team lost to St. John's in the first match of the season and then defeated New Paltz 8-1 on September 21.

The Pats, who rallied for victory against Nassau were freshman Anna Bentsianov (6-0, 6-0), freshman Carolyn Zubli (6-0, 6-0), junior Debbie Rosner (6-1, 6-1), freshman Mine Kamoy (6-0, 6-1), freshman Maria Castillo (6-3, 6-3) and freshman Karen Swain (6-3, 6-1). The doubles teams of Bentsianov and Kamoy, Rosner and Zubli, and Swain and Kelly Quinn, also swept their matches by scores of 8-1, 8-3, and 6-4 respectively.

Coach Clark Pratt seems to think that the team has a good chance for a winning season. "We're really starting to come along," Pratt said. "We've only had a couple of weeks of practice, but we're really starting to put together some tough doubles teams.

The only returning member of the team is senior Debbie Gruskin. "We lost [almost everybody] we had last year, but it looks like we'll have a good solid group for the next four years. It's a good young team," he added.

The team will be trying to increase its winning record on Saturday when they go to Wagner College.

Statesman/Myrna McElhiney

Mine Kamoy (top left) defeated her opponent (6-0, 6-1) in Wednesday's game against Nassau Community College, her teammate Debbie Rosner (above) also took a (6-1, 6-1) victory over Nassau's Karen Barret.

Pats Boot Opponents in Soccer Tourney

By Juliette Sentochnik

The Stony Brook women's soccer team soared through the Red Dragon Tournament in Cortland this weekend, securing two wins, a tie, and the strong possibility of a national ranking.

Prior to this season, no separate division III ranking status for women's soccer existed. This tournament provided the groundwork for a new I.S.A.A. National Ranking policy of division III schools.

In their first contest, the Patriots won 2-1 over Rochester Institute of Technology. Goals by Nancy Zimmer and Captain Rose Hickey provided the margin of victory. But this was the Patriots' easiest challenge.

The next game was against Curry College of Massachusetts. Curry, with a record of 16-3-1 last season, had recently been ranked 17 in the National Coach's Poll. Stony Brook, which had a losing record last season of 6-7, was clearly the underdog, but it proved to be the underdog's day. Curry was shut out 3-0. Nancy Zimmer scored two goals for the Pats. Noreen Heilingenstadt, last year's team scoring leader as a freshman, also registered a goal and an assist. But the battle had just begun. Stony Brook's next opponent was 6th ranked Scranton.

Scranton quickly placed their first shot past the diving Patriot goal keeper, Dawn Mchugh. The Patriots tried to counterattack, outshooting their opponents, but they couldn't score.

As the clock ticked on, the score remained 1-0. With only 10 minutes left in the game, Stony Brook was given a direct kick off to the right of the Scranton goal. Sophomore Captain Coral Gubler lofted a high sailing ball out in front of the goal, where freshman Lisa Paladino rose to the occasion. Surrounded by several Scranton players, Paladino jumped and placed a perfect ball off her head, and into the left corner of the net. The score remained tied as the Brook's ranking and reputation were elevated.

The tournament, which was neither the round robin nor the elimination type, was based on a point system. Each team was given three points for a win, two for a tie, one for a loss and one for each goal scored in a contest (maximum of three). All in all, the Patriots had captured 14 of the possible 18 points, more than any other team.

There are only two seniors intermixed on this team of nine sophomores, and 10 freshmen. Second year coach, Sue Ryan, described the event as a confidence builder for the young team. "We didn't even know how good we are," she said.

Regardless, the rest of women's collegiate soccer will not question the ability of this team. The Patriots are a force to contend with.

Assistant coaches have been appointed at Stony Brook for the men's soccer team and for the men's and women's cross country and indoor and outdoor track teams.

Frederick S. Amodeo, of Bellport, is assistant in cross country and track and Christopher D. Wheeler, of Garden City, in soccer.

Amodeo has been assistant varsity track coach since 1984 and head indoor track coach since 1985 at Comsewogue High School in Port Jefferson Station. He has also served over the past six years at both Comsewogue and Bellport high schools as an assistant and head junior varsity coach in football and track. On the Stony Brook staff under head coach Steve Borbet, Amodeo will specialize in field events—shot put, javelin, hammer and discus. He has degrees in education from Upper Iowa University and Adelphi University.

Wheeler, who will assist men's soccer coach Shawn McDonald, has been a soccer, football and wrestling coach and music teacher since 1984 at St. Paul's School. He is playing in the Long Island Soccer League and is a registered soccer referee as well as a distance runner. He has a degree from the Philadelphia College of Performing Arts and has studied at the University of Vienna. He is studying for a graduate degree in music at Stony Brook.
