'Other' Presidential Candidates Meet at SB

By Patricia Hall

"To commit democracy"—that's what producer David Goodman, said was accomplished at Saturday's "Alternative Presidential Convention," held in the Stony Brook Union Auditorium and sponsored by WUSB (90.1 FM).

Beginning at 10 AM and continuing for about 12 hours, 15 self-proclaimed Presidential candidates were given the public and media exposure their chief opponents—President Ronald Reagan and former Vice President Walter Mondale—have already received.

There were candidates who were unable to attend and instead sent letters which were read to the audience. Still other candidates called in during the convention and addressed the crowd of 50. Most of the 12-hour convention was broadcast live on WUSB.

The conference was organized because the media concentrates on Reagan and Mondale (neither of who attended the convention) most voters don't realize that there are 224 total candidates registered for the November Presidential elections. The convention was the brainchild of Eric Corley, producer and special projects developer for WUSB. Corley said that "politics is a victim of commercialization" and that the reason why so many eligible people don't vote is because of the choices presented to them. If the two candidates are supposed to be normal, then I think we need more kooks," said Corley.

Most of the candidates who attended expressed thanks to WUSB for giving them a chance to be heard and to express their views. During their 20 minute speeches, the candidates were allowed to discuss anything they had on their minds—uncensored.

Caesar Augustine, 35, of Woodland Hills, California was one of those candidates who appreciated the chance to be heard. He said, "Networks are bought and paid for by the Democratic and Republican parties." That was a reason why John Anderson did not receive too much network attention in the 1980 campaign, he said.

Augustine said the major parties are afraid of someone like himself or Anderson who could "come and steal the election away from them [the major party candidates]."

Prophet Elijah, another candidate, used the convention as a way to present his views on peace in the world. He said he is "not interested in politics as usual but is deeply committed to doing the right thing." The statement "peace will prevail" was heard several times during his speech. "Deterrence is not peace, peace will prevail, the time is now," said Prophet Elijah.

Isabell Masters, 69, of Topeka, Kansas said that she is "not in a race against people, I am in a race against the

The "Alternative Presidential Convention" held in the Stony Brook Union Auditorium on Saturday allowed some of the 224 candidates for President of the United States (such as "Prophet Elijah", above left, and Stephen Koczak, below) to gain public and media exposure. The chief opponents of these candidates, President Ronald Reagan and former Vice President Walter Mondale, did not attend the convention, but the two did debate last night in Kentucky (see AP story, page 2).

Issues Are Outlined

Among the 15 candidates at WUSB's "Alternative Presidential Convention" and those who phoned or sent several messages, had very precise platforms and ideas on how they could help the country. The following is a summary of some of those candidates and their ideas.

Caesar Augustine, 35, of Woodland Hills, California, claims to be the true candidate for President endorsed by the Republican National Committee. He came to Stony Brook having traveled through 46 states promoting his candidacy.

Augustine said that he has been persecuted by the Secret Service and that they were responsible for him losing the lease on his campaign headquarters. This led to a $6 million law suit against the Secret Service, he said.

Another suit that Augustine has brought against the United States for not balancing the federal budget.

One of the things Augustine would start if he were elected would be a merit pay system for the office of President. "I will not take money for a job that's not well done," Augustine said. He would also like to reform the voting system. Instead of voting once a year, Augustine would have the American people vote on all important referendums and not leave those decisions to Congress as it is now.

A system would be developed so that single family dwellings could use a light to show their preference and apartment dwellers would use their telephone to show their preference on the issue in question, he said.

As for other issues, Augustine said that he believed the criminal justice system that we have today is foul. If elected he would "put repeat offenders on a deserted island (perhaps in the South Pacific) where, if they want to act like animals, they can live like them," he said.

Augustine also said that he would change the existing tax system and would "impose the highest taxes of any President." He added though that these taxes would be aimed at corporations, not the people.

James Yager was unable to attend the convention, but called in to speak to the audience. Yager is currently serving time at the federal prison in Talladega, Alabama. Of his imprisonment, Yager said that he was "guilty as charged." But he claimed that his crimes were justified because "during the depression, the bank took all the money my father had, I was just taking it back."

He said that it's "time that we reshape

Reagan, Mondale Clash Over Economic Policies

Louisville, Ky- Ronald Reagan and Walter F. Mondale collided over economics, leadership and the politics of religion in their first campaign debate last night, with the president ridiculing Mondale's deficit reduction plan and the aggressive challenger charging that Reagan's budget estimates have been "billions and billions of dollars off."

Mondale, far behind in the polls and hoping to rebound, unveiled an aggressive debating style from the start. I respect the president and I respect the presidency and I think he knows that," Mondale said of Reagan as he discussed the president's claim that the budget can be balanced without a tax hike. But he added that deficit estimates from the administration have been off "by billions and billions of dollars." Mondale belittled Reagan's responses about how his administration has shepherded the economy and domestic programs.

"I guess I'm reminded a little bit of what Will Rogers once said about Hoover," Mondale said. "He said, 'It's not what he doesn't know that bothers me, it's what he knows for sure but just ain't so.'"

Reagan went into the debate a solid favorite in the polls, and he struck a presidential pose. He told the television audience estimated at 100 million viewers that he had instructed his advisers to "never" raise political ramifications of issues when they discuss them with him in the Oval Office.

The two men clashed over the role of religion and politics. The president responded to a question of how often he attended church by saying he has been a regular worshipper all his life. Now that he is president, he said, he does not go out of security concerns for others. He did not answer the question about why he did not bring a minister into the White House, as then President Nixon did.

Mondale attacked the Republicans and conservative religious groups for their involvement in issues such as a proposal for a school prayer amendment to the Constitution. He said the Republican platform calls for a "religious test" for Supreme Court justices and give the New Right two justices.

But Reagan said he had appointed only one justice so far in his first term - and used the opportunity to appoint Sandra Day O'Connor, the first woman ever named to the highest court. The candidates clashed as well on Social Security, with Reagan vowing that while "a president should never say never... I will never stand for a reduction of the Social Security benefits for the people that are now getting them."

Mondale, who has charged Reagan favors just such cuts, said that after the 1980 election, with just such a promise on the record. Reagan proposed cuts of 25 percent in some Social Security programs. Mondale said that while spending cuts are needed, "I'm not going to cut it out of Social Security and Medicare and Student assistance and things people need."

Both men were applauded for their pledge on Social Security just as they drew a standing ovation when they entered the Kentucky Center for the Arts for their 90 minute televised debate, their first of the campaign.

Peres Arrives in the U.S.; May Remove Leb Troops

Jerusalem- Prime Minister Shimon Peres, who yesterday started a week-long visit to the United States, is expected to present a plan for withdrawing Israeli occupation troops from southern Lebanon.

Before boarding a plane to New York early yesterday, Peres told reporters he would discuss ways of ending Israel's now 28-month-old occupation with President Reagan and other U.S. officials.

"I am taking a plan for the withdrawal of the IDF Israel Defense Forces from Lebanon. I don't know if it's a new plan, but it's a plan," he said.

Later yesterday, an Israeli Foreign Ministry official indicated that the plan centered on dividing the zone now occupied by Israel into two areas, one patrolled by United Nations forces and the other by the Israeli-backed militia known as the South Lebanon Army.

Syria, the other foreign occupation power in Lebanon, has ruled out any role for the 2,100-man militia, which Israel finances and trains.

Syrian Foreign Minister Farouk Sharaa said Friday in New York that his government would endorse a U.S. mediation effort aimed solely at removing Israeli forces from Lebanon.

Peres told reporters before leaving Israel that Sharaa's remark "deserves a closer look. It is an interesting move."

Peres, who assumed leadership of a bipartisan government three weeks ago said Israel would look with favor on any U.S. pacifying role, but he said Lebanon and Syria would have to agree to an American mediation role.

The foreign Ministry official, speaking on condition he was not identified, said the Syrian position has some conditions that are unacceptable to us.

He said Israel still insisted that militiamen from the South Lebanon army play a role in security arrangements to protect Israel's northern border from Arab guerilla attacks.

Secretary of State, George Shultz told Sharaa the United States was prepared to "help in constructive efforts" to resolve the Lebanon problem, but that it "does not see that the moment has come to mediate," according to a senior U.S. official in Washington.

Committee Ponders Shortening Semesters

By Howard Breuer

After going home through two years of a 15 week semester format, the university's Academic Calendar Committee is considering the possibility of changing to a 14 week format.

Until the fall of 1982, the university had been following a 13 week semester format. On Dec. 7, 1981, the University Senate took University President John Marburger's advice on a recommendation to lengthen the semester by two weeks, and change hour-and-a-half classes to 75 minute classes, and hour classes to fifty minute classes. That proposal was passed by a margin of 2 to 1 by the senate.

"It's still too premature to say anything about the plan," said Rhoda Selvin, who heads the Academic Calendar Committee. "It is still in the drafting stages. All I can say is that the committee seems to like the idea of changing over to a 14 week semester." Selvin also mentioned that changes in length of classes would also have to be made since the State Education Department mandates a set amount of class time per semester.

The committee has been trying to come up with a working calendar for a while," said Polity President Rory "Hawkeye" Aylward. "They notified me late in the summer that they were looking at a couple of different proposals, and they wanted me to recommend under-graduates to the committee.

"The faculty doesn't like the calendar as it is now. They want classes to start after labor day, not before it. Students don't like it either. They'd much rather have an extra couple of weeks at the end of the summer ... More students should volunteer to be on the committee."

Statesman Matt Cohen
Joel Rosenthal, University Senate President

According to Joel Rosenthal, president of the University Senate, the calendar will not be discussed in today's Senate meeting. Both Selvin and Rosenthal have said that the shortening of the semester will not reach the senate floor for a matter of weeks. The next University Senate meeting will be on Nov. 5.

If the semester is shortened, the first 14 week semester will be Fall 1985, according to Rosenthal.

Talk on Rights, New Dep't

The University Senate will meet today to discuss a proposal of a new Biology Department and to possibly set up a council for faculty rights.

According to Joel Rosenthal, president of the University Senate, the senate will recommend that a new department, called the Department of Cellular and Developmental Biology, should not be created at this time.

"We're waiting for the Life Sciences Commission to deliver a report that surveys the needs of the Biology Department," said Rosenthal. "That report won't be out until next year, and I believe that we should wait until that report comes out before adding any new departments to the curriculum."

Businesses Offer More Student Internships

By The College Press Service

Thanks to the economic recovery, the market for student interns seems to have reversed itself in the last few weeks.

A number of campuses around the country report businesses are offering more internships this fall, and that the campus cooperative education offices are having a hard time finding enough students to satisfy the demand.

"Placement is up this semester due to the turnaround in the economy," reported Keith Kirby, co-op ed director at Wichita State University. "For the first time, employers are calling us for students."

"We still have more students than positions," he declared, "but it's getting better." Kirby hopes to place 650 students this year, up from 520 a year ago.

"We register about 2,000 students yearly," added Marilyn Perry of Brigham Young's co-op education office. "Sometimes there are more students than openings. But, while we still do some looking for positions, more and more companies are coming to us with positions. And placements are definitely up."

The economic upswing also in providing an abundance of internships for North Texas State students, especially in "high tech" industries, said NTS program director Diane Altenloh.

"Jobs are booming in this area," she said. "And we're close enough to Dallas/Fort Worth that we can place our students there, too."

And Illinois State University reports a growing number of employers are recruiting students from cooperative education, then hiring them upon graduation.

"It's not guaranteed," explained Bill Kirk, engineering supervisor at Monsanto's East St. Louis, Ill. plant, which takes on "two or three" engineering students a semester. "But we've hired quite a number of them."

U Police Talk on TV About Campus Safety

By Holly Phillips and Howard Breuer

University Police from SUNY Stony Brook and SUNY Farmingdale will be featured on cable TV channel six on Oct. 25, to tell Long Island just "How Safe Are L.I. SUNY campuses."

The half-hour long show features officers Vince Leddy of SUNY Farmingdale, Dean Ruth-a local University Police representative and Anthony Katsur of Stony Brook, and will be aired at 9 PM on the 25th and the 30th.

So, how safe are the campuses?

"I don't think they're safe at all," said Leddy. "They could definitely be safer. This school [Farmingdale] has a larger population than the town it's in. Students deserve to have police protection."

"We wanted to get representatives of SUNY administration down here as well," said Chris Martin, the producer of the show. "We called them for three weeks, but they wouldn't send anyone down."

"Why aren't campus police armed?" was one question asked by the show's host, Joel Martin, when the show was taped a month ago. "How can the campuses be made more secure? What sort of training do you have?" he asked. "How are the campuses at night?"

"I've been on the Stony Brook campus at night," Joel Martin said in an interview recently. "The campus is lonely and scary."

"We want a standard police agency on these campuses," said Leddy, "with standard police cars and tools."

"We're still trying to get the Administration to do a show with them," said Martin. "The officers have said that they're willing to go on the air any time with them. It's a serious problem that we're dealing with."

"I was called and asked if I would consider appearing on the show," said Robert Francis, vice-president for campus operations at Stony Brook. "I didn't want to be in a forum where I would be debating public safety officers."

"Generally, the campus is safe," said Francis. "There are some important safety problems—the most important being the protection of women students, faculty, staff and visitors."

"The big problem with Stony Brook," Katsur said on the show, "is that anyone can walk or drive onto campus." In an interview after the show, Katsur said, "I'm 30 years old. I don't need a gun to prove myself. I just don't want anybody coming to my door one day and telling my family I'm dead. We're not security guards, but we're supposed to be. What we're actually called is peace officers. If we have a serious problem we have to call the [Suffolk] county police, and they take 12 to 20 minutes to get here."

Stony Brook is known as the zoo [to other police and campus police]. All we carry are nightsticks and mace, and we only got that recently."

people, I am in a race against the system." An ordained minister and evangelist, Masters' motto is "not for myself but for others." She said, "Government by the people has vanished, now it is government by the rich."

John Kusumi, 18, of Waterbury, Connecticut said "very few people could do a worse job as President than Reagan. Mondale is one of them." He is making a serious effort to win the presidential race and says he has found a loophole in the U.S. Constitution that would permit a candidate under 35 years of age to win. Among the items on his platform is to "balance the Federal Budget in his first year." On the issue of nuclear weapons, Kusumi said he would "check the nuclear arms race and reduce it."

The convention was viewed as a success by WUSB personnel. The media coverage was seen as "phenomenal" by John Vernile, public affairs director for WUSB. Representatives from WNBC, WABC, CNN, INN, SPIX, New York Times, Newsday, Voice of America and several other local papers attended the convention. That only 50 people filled the audience of an auditorium that holds approximately 350 was attributed to the fact that Saturday was a holiday and people came and went at different intervals, according to Corley.

The convention was the first of its kind according to Corley and they would like to repeat it, perhaps next year. The only concern he had before the convention was that "they [the candidates] might do really crazy things" because of what they had said in pre-convention interviews. However, after seeing the candidates and hearing them speak he found that they were "sane individuals, not crazy at all." And they all had something valid to say, he said.

Candidates Talk Issues

America and quit listening to theactors." His campaign is for "not so much as being elected, but being heard today," according to Yager.

Yager stated that "we need some leadership in this country and we need it now. Do we want glamour or leadership in the White House?" He said that right now the United States is so much in debt that the Russians wouldn't even want to invade.

If elected, he would raise taxes to get the country back on its feet, perhaps by instituting a national sales tax. He would also stop corruption in the criminal justice system.

Larry Harmon, also unable to attend the convention was another candidate who phoned in. Although he is registered as a candidate in the 1984 presidential elections, Harmon may be better known as the actor who played "Bozo" on the television series "Bozo the Clown."

Harmon announced his candidacy at the Washington Press Club in full make-up. Of his candidacy, Harmon said, "I had decided I had a job to do and I was going to do it." He said it is important that "people hear what I have to say."

He claims to have helped UNICEF win the 1966 Nobel Peace Prize and that he would like to be a "spokesman for our nation." The best way to be a spokesman for the United States is to become President, he said. If elected, he would continue performing as Bozo. He ended his phone call with the famous Bozo laugh.

Peter Swider, 36 of Hamtramck, Michigan calls himself a "feministic chauvinist." If elected he would have everyone listen to two hour of rock and roll music per day and would make sure that each child learned to "read and write and count up to ten."

On the issue of abortion, Swider said, "Dead fetuses go to heaven, don't they?"

Swider has spent much of the last few years hitchhiking across the country. At the convention, he said he would be at the Main Gate of Stony Brook for anyone who wished to give him a campaign contribution so he could make it back to Detroit.

Rufus Thunderberg walked up to the stage in an Indian costume, complete with feather headdress and beating a drum. He also brought his own cheering section with him, complete with signs and literature.

Thunderberg wants to "disassociate himself from the other candidates at the convention." Thunderberg claims to be a "half-breed hermaphrodite Indian with mixed mulatto parents [Jewish and Catholic]." He is running under the "rejection party", claiming that we all will be rejected in some way for the rest of our lives.

He said he is qualified for the job of President because he is over 35, a citizen for 14 years and unemployed. He said, "I need the job and I would like to have it."

Thunderberg would like to give people "a kick in the intellect." According to Thunderberg, if elected, he would "let each family have a nuclear weapon to give them a feeling of security." He would allow street gangs to fight our wars because they want to fight. He referred to Reagan as "a war figure slowly melting." He suggested to the audience that if attacked in an elevator by a mugger, act crazy because that scares them away.

He has developed what he called the "Patsy Doctrine" which would allow one race to volunteer to be the whipping board for a year so the same race would not be discriminated against year after year.

If elected, Thunderberg also would like to see "free public toilets on all city street corners; new tough laws to save the lobster; Michael Jackson appointed Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare; free venereal disease, Herpes, and AIDS personalized license plates for all afflicted drivers, and designer diapers to be outlawed."

Exercise Both Your Right to Vote and to Know

With the first of the two presidential debates occurring last night, the conversational topic for many of us over the next couple of days is bound to be politics... or will it? While great interest lies in the ongoing campaign for many of us, an equally large number walk around willingly oblivious. There is a tremendous amount of information available about the election in November, last night's debate being only a fraction, and it is up to us to utilize the information being offered.

It is crucial that we seek out our own information about the candidates rather than depend on uneducated assumptions (i.e. "the economy is back on its feet") or the opinions of others (i.e. "Reagan is senile"). We are all well aware that it is our duty to vote, but it is likewise our duty to do it intelligently and with reason.

It is encouraging that the "Alternative Presidential Convention" sponsored by WUSB Saturday was well attended. It shows that political concern is alive and well at Stony Brook. It is just as disappointing, however, though that so few students took part in the recent polity elections. There was a polity vice-presidential debate sponsored by WUSB two nights before the election, one can only hope that most of those who voted tuned in even for a little while. Hopefully, this is no indication of what Stony Brook's student turn out will look like at the polls next month.

There will be two more presidential debates (one more between Mondale and Reagan and another between Ferraro and Bush) before election time and we strongly urge anyone who can watch at least one of these debates. Also look to alternative areas of information from newspapers and other publications that offer constant information on the progress of the campaign. You don't have to look hard to find an abundance of information on Mondale and Reagan, but watching the local news during dinner just won't do it.

Many of us are registering to vote for the first time this year, and hopefully most of us that registered will indeed vote. Nothing is worse than going to the polls ignorant though, because this is an extremely important election. Don't just exercise your right to vote: exercise your right to inform yourself. When you are pulling that lever on November sixth, allow yourself to understand why.

Whose Bud Is It?

To the Editor:
Why, might I inquire do you for two consecutive weeks choose an intramural athlete for the Budweiser Athlete of the week? Do our intercollegiate sport teams command that little respect from the school? We are fighting hard to gain an athletic reputation for all of the sports teams here at Stony Brook, and we are shunned by the largest media form on this campus. This is to take nothing away from our fine intramural athletes, but these intercollegiate athletes and their teams practice for at least two to three hours daily. Then they play their hearts out on game day, only to be overlooked for the star of a two hand touch football game.

Don't the men and women who dedicate their effort, sweat, and time to their game deserve a little more respect from the University they represent? People on this campus know very little about the sport teams here, and it is no wonder why, with the lack of recognition Statesman has given all of us in the choosing of the Budweiser Athlete of the week. For all of those men and women who play intercollegiate athletics:

THIS BUD'S FOR YOU!!!

- John Buonora
- Sal Romano
- Paul Ryan

- Undergraduates

(Editors note: The Athlete of the Week award program was sponsored by Clare Rose (Budweiser) and the athletes chosen are picked by the Physical Education Department. The decision to discontinue Athlete of the Week was not made by Statesman, but rather by Clare Rose. The Intramural Athlete of the Week is sponsored by Clare Rose.)

flect general student attitudes. Respect for others and good sense as regards public property— i.e. property for which the parents of the student quoted as well as of others pay taxes— were generally observed over the short existence of Stony Brook.

It is to be hoped that students will continue to act as responsible citizens and not like spoiled brats.

Explain Yourselves

To the Editor:

If Mario Cuomo and Geraldine Ferraro are really personally apposed to abortion, I for one, would really like them to explain why. It certainly isn't because they're Catholic.

I, and most pro-lifers I know, am opposed to the painful dissecting of living, unborn babies, considering it legalized murder. Whether I am a Christian or Jew, whether my religion is pro-life or anti-life, nothing can change my conviction that a beating heart, destroyed, is anything less.

Responsibility Waning

To the Editor:

In your Sept. 26 edition on page 3, your reporter, Jeff Leibowitz quotes a student, Barry Fox, who, when asked about his views on the Library policy limiting eating, smoking, and drinking in certain areas, responded by saying: "I'll eat where ever I choose."

I wonder whether such views re-

Tennis Women Win Again; Extend Streak to 4

By Jim Passano

Under cloudy and then sunny skies, the Patriot women's tennis team easily defeated their opponents from SUNY New Paltz Saturday. With this 6-1 match victory, the Pats have extended their winning streak to four straight matches.

To open the match, Patriot Chrissy Goodman returned briefly to the role of first-seeded singles in the absence of Deirdre Ettus. Goodman overcame Gina Lustaw in straight sets, pushing balls into corners and taking full advantage of the side lines. In the first set, Goodman won 6-1.

During the second set Lustaw warmed up to the contest and took three games. However, Lustaw lacked the polish that many people credit Goodman for, and wound up dropping the second set as well, 6-3.

Also absent from Saturday's competition was the senior veteran, Lisa Pisano, who had been suffering muscle related wrist problems. With Pisano's absence, fourth-seeded Sharon Marcus was given the call by head coach Rich L'Homme-dieu to play second singles. She responded well, defeating her opponent Kathy Aschliman in straight sets with the same scores as Goodman had, 6-1, 6-3.

Continuing the match the Pats had a 2-0 lead going into third singles. Ericka Iten, Stony Brook's third seeded player, increased that lead to 3-0 when she challenged and defeated Chantai Jean Baptiste. She, like her teammates did so in straight sets, 6-2, 7-5.

With Marcus playing number two,

Jackie Fiore was moved up into the number four singles slot, where she challenged Candy McLearn. Using those deep, hard shots that earned her the third-seeded position at Ithaca, Fiore, despite a few mistakes, defeated McLearn, 6-2, 6-1. In the fifth and final singles match, Lisa Treyz took on New Paltz's Susan D'Annindale, whom she easily overcame in straight sets, 6-3, 7-5.

With the match won, the Pats went on to a pair of doubles matches, which they split with New Paltz. In first doubles, Iten and Fiore combined to play against Lustaw and Aschliman. Despite the good serves and strong net play that they both have when they play singles, they were unable to defeat their opponents and dropped in straight sets, 6-1, 6-1.

The Pats did take second doubles, when Treyz and Michele Caputo combined to take on D'Annindale and Baptiste. The Pats won in two sets, 6-3, 6-1.

With the match in hand, Goodman put the match into a perspective with the rest of the season. "I'm playing better now than at the beginning of the season. Hopefully, I will be at my peak for the states [competition]," she said.

Other team members were happy about having an even record for the first time this season. "It's nice to be .500 now," Fiore said adding, "Another down and St. John's to go."

The Pats next match will be Tuesday at St. John's, where against a tough Division I squad, the Pats will be going for win number five. Fiore was optimistic about Stony Brook's chances, when she said, "one down and St. John's to go."

Patriot Sharon Marcus (shown here in an earlier match this season) defeated her opponent Kathy Ashliman in straight sets, 6-1, 6-3, during Saturday's 6-1 victory over New Paltz. The match was played at home.

Padres Win Pennant With Pitching, Rally

By The Associated Press

San Diego—The San Diego Padres defeated the Chicago Cubs 6-3, yesterday to win the National League title and the first pennant in their franchise's history. Craig Lefferts (2-0) got the win in relief. Rick Sutcliffe (1-0) took the loss.

The Cubs led the decisive game 3-0 after a two-run homer by Leon Durham, in the first and a leadoff homer by Jody Davis in the second, and Sutcliffe looked invincible.

Sutcliffe, 16-1 and the winner of his last 14 decisions in the regular season, had won Game One of this series and had not lost a game since June 29. He took a two-hitter into the sixth inning when the Padres scored two runs and San Diego scored four more runs in the seventh with the help of a Durham error at first base, and they were on their way to their first World Series. The game was played with regular major league umpires working for the first time in the playoffs. The umpires had been on strike over the post season pay and job assignments but decided to go back to work and submit the contract dispute for binding arbitration by Commissioner

Peter Ueberroth. Substitute umpires had worked the previous playoff games in both leagues.

Eric Show, the Game One loser for San Diego, was the victim of Chicago's early power surge, and it looked like the Cubs were on the way to their first World Series in 39 years. But the frustration will last at least one more year, and largely due to the relief pitching of Andy Hawkins, Dave Dravecky, Craig Lefferts and Rich Gossage, who had failed the day before. Hawkins took over for Show in the second. Dravecky pitched a flawless game in the fourth and the fifth. Lefferts polished off the next six in a row, and Gossage put the finishing touch on the game that was played before a stadium record of 38,359. The five combined on a five hitter—three allowed by Show and two by Gossage.

With two outs in the ninth inning, the Padres' fans rose and cheered. When Davis grounded into a game-ending fielder's choice, fireworks went off in center field, a mighty roar rose from the fans and several hundred ran onto the field to celebrate their team's victory.

Patriots Devoured by Lions

Chuck Dempsey Gives All, But Trenton Beats Pats by 51-18

By Jim Gilligan

The Trenton State Lions handed the Patriots their fourth straight loss of the season Friday night. By defeating Stony Brook 51-18, the Lions (1-4) garnered their first victory.

The game was ill-fated for the Patriots right from the outset. Only 24 seconds into the game, Patriot running back Ralph Tuckett committed a fumble, which was recovered by the Lions, putting them on Stony Brook's 20-yard line. Three minutes and five plays later, Trenton quarterback Rodney Thomas crossed the goal line with the first of the Lions' seven touchdowns.

Although the Patriots controlled the ball for the better part of the first quarter, they were unable to do much. After Paul Emmanuel intercepted a pass, putting the Patriots on the Trenton 39-yard line, Stony Brook managed to work their way down to the 14-yard line. This, incidentally, was the best field position the patriots were to get for the entire contest. Unable to score a touchdown, Stony Brook attempted a field goal, which was ultimately blocked.

A fumble by the Lions' running back, Eric McDuffie, who amassed a total of 74 yards rushing for the game, gave the Patriots possession early in the second quarter. However, a punt blocked by Trenton State's Tony Sorrell, which he ran back 35-yards for a touchdown, game the Lions a 14-0 lead.

After the ensuing kickoff, the Patriots were only able to get off one play before Lions' defensive back Jim Ball intercepted a pass by Paul Ryan who started his first game of the year and returned it 50 yards for a touchdown. It was only two and a half minutes into the second quarter and already the Lions were leading 21-0.

Trenton State was able to score again on their next possession on a four-play, 49-yard scoring drive highlighted by a 44-yard pass from quarterback John Gormley to wide receiver John Aromando. The touchdown was scored on a two-yard run by Eric McDuffie.

The Lions' Ernie Williams then kicked off to the Patriots' Chuck Downey, who returned it 94 yards for what turned out to be the first of his three touchdowns scored in this manner. Ray McKenna missed the extra point, leaving the score at 28-6 in favor of Trenton State at half-time.

At 7:16 into the third quarter, McKenna, attempting to punt from the Patriots' 33-yard line, went back into his own end zone to try to recover a missed snap which went sailing about three feet over his head. Unable to recover it quickly enough, he was tackled, and the Lions scored a safety, elevating the score to 30-6. The remainder of the third quarter passed without incident.

After the Lions were unsuccessful in their first scoring attempt in the fourth quarter, Chuck Downey returned a Skip Wohler punt 70 yards for his, and the Patriot's, second touchdown of the game. The two-point conversion attempt failed, putting the score at 30-12. When the following onside kick by the patriots failed, Trenton got the ball on their own 35-yard line. Despite two penalties against them and the sack of quarterback John Gormley, the Lions managed to score on a 26-yard pass to John Aromando, who caught for a total of 163 yards in the game.

On the next kickoff, Downey once again showed his agility and finesse by returning the ball 95 yards for his third and last touchdown. The two-point conversion attempt, however, once again failed also and the score stood at 37-18 with the Lions ahead.

For the second time, Stony Brook's onside kick failed, this time giving Trenton State the ball at about mid-field. The Lions parlayed this favorable field position into their sixth touchdown, via five rushes by running back Dan Rogers totalling fifty-one yards. But the assault wasn't over yet. Rich Reasoner intercepted a McKenna pass, returned it 33 yards for a touchdown, and gave the Lions a 51-18 lead, which was the final score of the game.

Although the Pats didn't win, they did discover a new weapon in freshman Downey. He played as though he could be a big part of the team's transitional process to a bona fide contender in Division III in the years to come. Head coach ~~St~~ Kornhauser had this to say about the star of Friday night's game: "I don't see any reason why he shouldn't be the ECAC Rookie of the Week with three touchdowns and a total 324 yards."

When asked about the game, Kornhauser commented, "As I told the team in the locker room, we gave them 28 points and you're not going to beat anyone if you give them 28 points." He added, "it's hard to assess a 51-18 loss and that running back [McDuffie] was the toughest one we've seen yet. The players told me that he was very difficult to tackle."

Stony Brook hopes to enter the victory column this weekend on Saturday at 1:00 PM when they meet SUNY/Maritime for our Homecoming game here at Stony Brook.

SB Invite: Women Place 1st, Men 2nd

Statesman/Ed Giannatti

Patriots Steve Brown (center) and Jon Pahta (right), have led Stony Brook to several successful outings this season. In yesterday's SB Invitational, Brown finished first, and Pahta came in tenth. In the final standings, the Pats finished second to Long Island University.

By Jim Passano

Both the men's and women's cross-country teams competed in their own invitational tournament yesterday. The men's team placed second behind Long Island University (LIU), while the women's team continued their winning ways with a first place finish.

The meet was held at the teams' home course at Sunken Meadow Park, which features those three difficult hills—Snake, Hernia and Cardiac. The Patriots were not hampered by the course, as Coaches Gary Westerfield and Paul Dudzick said they wouldn't be before the race. Stony Brook, LIU and Hunter College were the three strongest teams in both the men's and women's divisions.

In the men's division, the Pats finished second thanks to some strong performances by Steve Brown, Pat Hardman and Joh Pahta. Also Gary Paperno, Dan Riconda and Charles Ropes had strong finishes to give Stony Brook second place. Brown, who finished first, had a time of 26:09.4. Hardman, who had a finish time of 27:23.4, finished in eighth place. Pahta was in 10th with a time of 27:36.1.

To back up the three strong times of their teammates, Paperno and Riconda finished 11th and 12th with finish times of 27:38.6 and 27:42.3 respectively. Wilco Lagendyk and Ropes rounded out the Patriot finishers with 15th and 18th place finishes respectively.

With the scoring complete, LIU garnered first with 27 points, while the Pats finished second with 42 points. Hunter was the only other school to qualify for team scoring with 106 points.

In the women's division, Stony Brook came in first thanks to strong performances by harriers Laura Whitney, Mary Dolan and Donna Lyons, who finished in first, second and third place respectively. Whitney's time was 19:18.1. Twenty seconds later Dolan crossed the line to claim second place. At 19:38.8, Lyons came to the end, just .3 seconds behind Dolan. Hunter and LIU each took one between Lyons and Megan Brown, the next Patriot finisher. Brown came in sixth for the Patriots with a time of 20:38.7.

To follow up those finishes, Christine Tierney, Liz Kreinsen and Kerri Kehoe finished in a row with ninth, tenth and eleventh place finishes respectively. Tierney's time was 21:50.3. Kreinsen and Kehoe's times were within one second of each other.

After all the runners came in, the Pats were way out in front with 21 points. Hunter earned second place with 51 points. LIU took third with 60 points.

The Pats next competitions will be Saturday when they travel to Manhattanville College for that invitational tournament.
