SERVING THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK AT STONY BROOK AND ITS SUBROUNDING COMMUNITIES

Two SB Profs to Head $35 Million Experiment

By the University News Service:

The widely heralded search for basic particles of matter—fundamental building blocks of the universe—will receive new impetus through a major high energy physics experiment being designed by a consortium of 85 physicists from 15 research institutions.

The collaboration, headed by faculty at Stony Brook, will carry out the project at the giant Tevatron accelerator at the Fermi National Accelerator Laboratory in Batavia, Ill.

The Tevatron, the world's most powerful accelerator, went into operation at the Fermilab last summer, accelerating particles at a record energy of 512 billion electron volts. The Tevatron's energy capacity is now being expanded to a thousand billion (one trillion) electron volts with expansion due in 1986 when collisions of oppositely directed beams will increase the effective energy one-thousand-fold.

Discovery of the "W" and "Z" particles which had long been predicted by high energy theorists took place at the European Center for Nuclear Research (CERN) in Geneva, Switzerland about six months before the Tevatron achieved its current very high energy experimental capacity. The "W" and "Z" particle discoveries have been hailed as a giant step toward possible unified theories on the nature of the four fundamental forces acting in the universe. The Tevatron's much greater energy capacity is permitting more precise measurements which are likely to yield important new breakthroughs in understanding the origins and structure of the universe.

The new particle detection project being developed by the Stony Brook led consortium will be the second at the Tevatron and the first project there designed primarily for university researchers and designed to complement the initial project. The project is being developed at the DO (D Zero) area of the Tevatron, one of six proton/anti-proton beam intersection areas of the accelerator.

The project's director, Professor Paul Grannis of the Department of Physics at Stony Brook, and its deputy director, Professor Michael D. Marx, also of the Stony Brook Physics faculty, expect its design and development phase to be completed by late next year. U.S. Department of Energy funding of $35 million is anticipated for the project over the next few years.

Physicists currently collaborating on the project are from the University of Arizona, the Brookhaven National Laboratory, Brown University, the University of California at Berkeley, Columbia University, Fermilab, Florida State University, the University of Maryland, Michigan State University, Northwestern University, the University of Rochester, Saclay (the French national accelerator laboratory), the University of Pennsylvania, Stony Brook and the Virginia Polytechnic Institute and State University.

The project includes three basic pieces: a tracking detector to "see" the particles as they leave the collision region; a calorimeter consisting of 600 tons of uranium and copper plates to absorb the particle energies; and a 3000 ton magnetized iron box to deflect the single remaining type of particle (muons) and allow their identification.

The detector's sensitivity, achieved through sophisticated calorimetry techniques, should, the Stony Brook physicists believe, permit identification of particles which presently are unknown since they have until now defied detection due to the less sensitive experimental techniques and lower energies previously available to experimenters.

With the Tevatron's extremely high acceleration producing more violent particle collisions than ever before, and with the new detector capturing more of the results of these collisions than a device now in operation, "the potential for startling new physics discoveries should be considerable," Grannis said.

Scientists at the Brookhaven National Laboratory including Sam Aronson, Howard Gordon and Bruce Gibbard are heavily involved in design and construction of the detector. One of its three major elements will be built under the direction of Professor Guido Finocchiaro of the Stony Brook Physics faculty. The project consequently will have a substantial economic impact on Long Island, and $2 million at Stony Brook. The Stony Brook faculty involved in the project are members of the Physics Department's High Energy Physics Group. Formed in 1967 by Professors Myron L. Good and Juliet Lee-Franzini, the group has been involved in numerous major experimental projects using the highest powered accelerators in the world, the centers including Brookhaven, Fermilab, the Stanford Linear Accelerator Center, Cornell and CERN. The new Tevatron D Zero project is the first to involve collaboration of all members of the Stony Brook High Energy Physics Group.

Reagan Gets Strong Support From Youth Vote

By The College Press Service

Northridge, CA — Outside the Student Union at California State University at Northridge, Katrina Parker, a 22-year-old student, hands out ads for a speed reading course. She wears an aqua and pink spattered t-shirt, part of her own line of sportswear, which she also sells. She hopes to start an office cleaning service soon.

All those enterprises, however, meet only part of her tuition expenses. For the remainder, Parker, who comes from a black, Democratic middle-class background, relies on federal student aid.

And this prototypical Walter Mondale supporter plans to vote for Ronald Reagan. "There's no way I could vote for Mondale," Parker said. "He's like a little wimp to me." The president, on the other hand, is "of good character," a "strong leader," and "sincere."

Parker is part of a phenomenon that has emerged as one of the major stories of the '84 campaign — the tidal wave of popularity the 73-year-old Reagan is riding among young voters, especially those under 25 years old.

Virtually all the major national polls show Reagan with a strong lead over Mondale among 18-to-29-year-old voters. The president's advantage swells to overwhelming proportions in surveys of under-25-year-old voters. In some of the polls, they give Reagan his largest margin of support.

"The Democrats don't offer hope for the future like Reagan," explained James Bozajian, 18, a UCLA student. "My parents loved (John) Kennedy. I think Kennedy inspired young people much the same way Regan does today."

Reagan "has so much charisma, he convinces me," said Sharon Kincaide, also an 18-year-old UCLA student.

Linda Weber, an 18-year-old Northridge student, liked "his fighting spirit, like when he was shot (in the March, 1981, assassination attempt)."

Danny Hill, 20, a Los Angeles City College student, described himself as "from a second-class background, trying to make it into first class." He thinks his chances of accomplishing that are better under Reagan than Mondale.

In just the last few weeks, such sentiments have helped Reagan win student preference polls at Fort Hays State, Penn State, Virginia, and New Hampshire, among many other campuses.

"Such support is all the more startling in view of Reagan's behavior as governor of California, when he tried to fire campus administrators who disagreed with him, ruthlessly put down campus protests, sent police to attack wounded protesters at Berkeley's infirmary, and once told a press conference that "if students want bloodshed, they'll get bloodshed. And since 1980, Reagan has abolished student Social Security benefits, proposed cutting other student aid programs by as much as 50 percent, tried to eliminate the U.S. Department of Education, supported tax breaks for segregationist colleges, presided over a 20 percent decline in student aid budgets, sought to limit laws prohibiting discrimination against campus women, and drastically reduced aid to college libraries and black colleges.

Nevertheless, "there has been a steady increase in the values of personal success as against wanting to contribute to social causes," noted Leonard Freedman, a UCLA political science professor and dean of the school's extension program.

Israel Appeals for Agreement With US for Troop Pullout

Jerusalem-Israel appealed to the United States yesterday for help in reaching a Lebanon troop withdrawal agreement with Syria and also called for a broader role for the United Nations in securing peace along the Israel-Lebanon border.

A statement issued after a policy review by Prime Minister Shimon Peres' Cabinet said Israel will continue efforts "for reaching an agreement with Syria through the good offices of the United States."

At the same time, the statement called for talks between Israeli and Lebanese military officers, under U. N. auspices, to arrange security for Israel's northern border once Israel's troops pull out of southern Lebanon. Cabinet sources, who spoke on condition they not be identified, said a partial withdrawal which Peres has mentioned publicly did not come up Sunday.

Peres suggested this month that if an agreement could not be reached with Syria to pull Syrian troops out of Lebanon or to control its Palestinian and Lebanese militia allies, then Israeli troops who are withdrawn from the border area could be redeployed against Syrian positions in Lebanon's Bekaa Valley.

On Sunday, Cabinet secretary Yessi Beilin said, "No redeployment was discussed."

U.S. Secretary of State George P. Shultz has said Washington was ready to be "as helpful as we can" in building conditions for Israel to withdraw from southern Lebanon, which it invaded in June 1982 to stop cross-border attacks by Palestinian guerillas.

Italian Judge Says a Shove Saved Pope From Gunman

Rome-An unidentified spectator saved the life of Pope John Paul II by shoving a Turkish gunman just before he fired what probably would have been the fatal shot, the judge who investigated the attempted assassination was quoted yesterday as saying.

The pope was badly wounded by three bullets on May 13, 1981, but has since recovered.

Judge Ilarie Martella, who on Friday indicted three Bulgarians and four Turks for complicity in the assassination attempt, granted a rare interview to Turin's La Stampa newspaper. The interview, conducted Saturday, was published in La Stampa's Sunday edition.

Convicted gunman Mehmet Ali Agca, who is serving a life sentence for the shooting, "was very clear on this point," Martella was quoted as saying. "I would have continued firing," he told us, "someone who was next to me had not shoved me with force."

The newspaper quoted Martella as saying John Paul was an "easy target" at the point Agca was jostled. One bullet had hit him in the intestine, a second bullet hit him in the arm, and a third hit his finger. He lay immobile on the seat of his open truck in packed St. Peter's Square.

Martella's report on his three-year investigation also charged that the shot that hit John Paul on the finger had been fired by a second gunman, a boyhood friend of Agca's named Oral Celik. Both Turks were members of a right-wing terrorist group known as the Gray Wolves.

Twenty Key Crime Figures Arrested in Southern Cal.

Los Angeles—A bid by organized crime members to take over $1 million-a-week bookmaking operations here was cut short yesterday with the arrests of 20 people, including the reputed crime boss of Southern California, police said.

Among those arrested was Peter John Milane, "considered to be the head of organized crime" in Southern California, police chief Daryl Gates said.

The investigation-dubbed "Operation Lightweight" began in the spring, was put on hold during the Summer Olympics and resumed immediately afterward, Gates told a news conference. "We feel the name is appropriate because organized crime is such a lightweight in Southern California crime families as 'the Mickey Mouse Mafia.' The arrest warrants charged the 20 with conspiracy to commit bookmaking.

"The investigation identified eight bookmakers who were being squeezed for either money or a percentage of their operation," Gates said. But he said no violence took place before officers intervened. Although Gates identified several of those arrested as associates of crime families in New York, New Jersey, Illinois and Florida, he said the effort to take over the bookmaking was not controlled by those families.

He said the investigation, arrests and search warrants were based on intelligence from "informants," but he refused to say more about possible witnesses in the case. He did say the case was unrelated to recent mob arrests that followed disclosures by a former Mafia figure in Italy.

Gates said seven bookmaking locations were seized and that it was estimated that approximately $1 million in wagers were being handled at those locations each week. Eight of the arrests took place at bookmaking joints. Some of the bookmakers approached "were scared," he said.

G-Quad to Hold Room Decoration Contest

By Jeanne Kane

You've been wanting to redecorate your dorm room; cover up those cold, dull tiles with a cozy warm rug; paint your walls and, finally get rid of that antiseptic university blue. Maybe you've already done away with the 'waiting room look' and are right now languishing in a loft of your design. No matter the state of your dorm room, the G-Quad Council is ready to put your decorating expertise to the test.

The First Annual G-Quad Room Beautification Contest begins this week. Judges will be viewing the rooms on November 15 and the winners will receive cash prizes of $25, $10 and $5 for first, second and third places respectively. "It's (the contest) is a good way to get students to decorate their rooms, as well as, recognize those who put in a lot of effort," said Bob Crawford, RHD for Grey College. "Also we're going to put together certificates of appreciation for all those involved."

Each of the rooms will be considered for prizes in five categories, and each contestant will be asked to pick the category they think represents the strong points of their rooms. If a loft is the main feature in your room, "Lovely Lofts" could be your category. If you've done wonders using your credit card, category number two, Macy's Magic could make you a winner. "Penny Pincher", "Comfortable and Cozy," and "Apartment Life," the three remaining categories are geared towards rooms furnished with creativity, comfort and a little pizzazz.

Tom Delany, an MA and Chris Halka, an RA at Grey College take pride in their white lace curtains and their Elvis Presley Poster. A giant James Dean poster and some of Halka's photographs decorate the walls, but the main attraction is their "architecturally unique loft" which Delany describes as "probably the best on campus".

Cindy Bernhardt, a junior and RA

Statesman: Gordon Kennedy

Monica Kallas and Risa Kessler study in Irving College. Risa and her roommate, Jessana, have entered their room in the G-Quad Beautification Contest.

at Irving College is ready to challenge any loft. She says her loft is "hands down, a winner." The full-size loft has cabinets built into both the top and bottom headboards. "This loft is great" Bernhardt said. "It took a lot of time and money."

Bernhardt has painted her room a royal blue, filling the walls with mirrors. "I love mirrors. They make a room look bigger," she said.

Diane Atnally, a senior at O'Neill College is also a loft owner. Atnally doesn't plan to enter the contest but, she likes the idea. "I think people should be encouraged to fix up their rooms, especially freshman," she said. "They don't know what to expect when they get here."

Keira Brings, a freshman from O'Neill, agrees, "It'd be good if they could give you an idea (of what to expect) before you get here."

Atnally has more ideas for improving dorm life. She'd like to see hall vacuums provided and said the University could give us a lot more furniture, especially more shelves.

Paul Carsh, a sophomore in Grey College disagrees. Carsh who shares his room with John Grundhofer, has let the imagination run free in his college home. "There's a little bit if everything here." He said "there's music, there's art, there's space and science. And there's unique things like...speakers under the bed (a full-sized loft)."

The Beatles, Captain Kirk and the Space Shuttle hang on the walls along with a Clint Eastwood poster that's poised in front of a dangling noose. Like most college dorm rooms, Carsh's is equipped with a stereo, but with a special touch. Carsh has arranged the stereo so that a speaker can easily be hooked up outside his door for "dinner" at the end hall lounge or "parties" and can be brought inside when he is out.

Crawford expects the contest to be "real interesting. We're hoping to get a good turnout." He said "I talked to a number of students here in Irving and Grey. They had put a reasonable amount of work into their rooms and thought it was a neat idea."

The judging panel will be made up of one student selected from each building legislature, and one representative from Quad Council. Larry Siegel, G-Quad Director will also be on the panel and, according to Crawford, Robert Francis, vice president for Campus Operations may join the panel.

According to Crawford, those who are interested should "see their RA's to pick up applications." Applications must be submitted to RHD or the G-Quad Office by 5 pm on November 9, said Crawford.

Campuses Becoming Religious Battlegrounds

By The College Press Service

(CPS) — A series of incidents in recent weeks have turned college campuses into "a battleground" for forces seeking to separate — or merge — religion and public education.

University of Colorado residents vote next month whether to allow prayers at next spring's graduation ceremonies, a practice dropped years ago to shorten the ceremonies and avoid religious entanglements.

At Memphis State, football coach Ray Dempsey is in hot water with parents and students over charges he forces players to attend mandatory prayer meetings, imposes his religious beliefs on students and staff, and attempts to cure players' injuries through faith healing.

Southern Baptist-controlled Baylor recently threatened to revoke the charters of all non-Baptist campus religious groups — including a campuswide non-denominational fellowship group — after an unnamed religious "fringe group" applied for recognition there.

And perhaps to duck the religious conflicts altogether, University of Florida student government officials temporarily have halted funding for all student religious groups.

"Religion and education form a continuing dilemma in American church-state relations," noted James Wood, a specialist in the study of church and state at Baylor. Wood says campus religious conflicts have increased dramatically in the last several years since the rise of the "New Right" in 1980.

Moreover, "these conflicts have been the result of persistent and zealous efforts aimed at Christianizing the public schools and eliminating the secular character guaranteed by the First Amendment," he added. Wood says such efforts also pit faiths against one another and foster religious intolerance.

Indeed, even parochial colleges are struggling with questions of just how much religion and education should be mixed. At Wood's own Baylor, for instance, officials recently backed down from their threat to revoke the charters of all non-Baptist student religious groups, and now say the policy will be applied only in issuing new charters.

"We don't want to be giving out charters to cult groups or radical groups," admitted Baylor spokesman David Clampton.

Last spring, some members of the Southern Baptist Convention — which operates Baylor — wanted to fire two Mormon faculty members, arguing only Baptist instructors should be allowed to teach there. After much debate, the instructors kept their jobs.

But academicians walk a dangerous line whenever their religion is even arbitrarily linked to their teaching activities, Wood observed. "When people try to impose their religion on others, through the government (or through government-supported activities), it's a threat to society," he contended.

The American Civil Liberties Union (ACLU) is using that argument to try to stop Memphis State's coach Dempsey from forcing his religious preferences on football player there, noted ACLU attorney Bruce Kramer.

School officials, however, are reluctant to get involved in the conflict "until we have concrete evidence" Dempsey is violating the law, said spokesman Charles Holmes.

But at Florida, no one's waiting for proof. "This year alone hundreds of students have complained about funding religious clubs," reports student treasurer Brian Ballard, who has frozen all funding for campus religious organizations.

Of 160 student groups funded by the student government, Ballard says, 30 have religious affiliations.

Student officials will withhold funds for them until the officials decide if they're promoting religious views with state money. "We are not anti-religion at all," Ballard contends. "We just want to abide by the constitution."

It's part of the Navy's Nuclear Propulsion Officer Candidate Program. And the nearly $27,000 you can earn while still in school is just the start.

When you successfully complete your studies and become a Naval officer, you receive an additional $6,000 bonus. On top of that you receive a year of graduate-level training you can't get anywhere else at any price.

As an officer in today's Nuclear Navy you have a career advantage no civilian job can offer. The Navy operates over half the nuclear reactors in America. The early responsibility and unequalled experience you get as a member of the nuclear propulsion officer team place you among the nation's most respected professionals in one of the world's fastest growing fields.

In addition to the professional advantages, as a nuclear-trained officer, after four years with regular promotions and pay increases you can be earning as much as $42,000. That's an addition to a full benefits package.

Brown Action May Hinder Freeze Movement

Providence, RI (CPS)—Attempts by students at Brown University and more recently at the University of Colorado to stock cyanide pills for use after a nuclear war may be doing the fading campus freeze movement more harm than good, some activists warn.

Last week—in the largest student vote turnout in six years—Brown students voted 1044 to 687 in favor of a measure asking college officials “to stockpile suicide pills for optional student use exclusively in the event of a nuclear war.” At the same time, Colorado student leaders voted to hold a similar referendum on that campus in late October.

Officials at both schools point out that the student referenda are not binding and steadfastly refuse to consider stocking the lethal pills. One Brown administrator declared the referendum would be enforced “over my dead body.”

The students, of course, admit they’re after headlines as much as they are an easy out from doomsday. “Our motivation is purely educational,” said CU student Kyra Grossman, co-director of Students for a Sane Nuclear Policy, the group which drafted the student referendum. “Even if people say, ‘This must be a joke,’ then at least they’re talking about (nuclear war), and that’s what we’re trying to accomplish,” she adds.

Brown students, too, were trying to convey “the feeling of fear” of nuclear war, said Jason Salzman, a junior who originally got 700 students to sign a petition calling for the suicide pills. “There’s been a tremendous increase in discussions on disarmament,” Salzman says. “People have been able to personalize the issue by thinking about their options.”

But thinking about suicide could foster a defeatist attitude and actually drive students away from the campus freeze movement, warned Sanford Gottlieb, executive director of United Campuses to Prevent Nuclear War (UCAM). “I think (stockpiling suicide pills) is a very poor idea because it doesn’t offer hope,” Gottlieb said.

Instead, he argues, students should work to educate each other about the horrors of a nuclear confrontation and “discuss solutions to the arms buildup.”

While the Brown students “were sincere in wanting to raise consciousness” of the imminent dangers of nuclear war, he said, “they miscalculated what effect it would have: it makes people feel more hopeless.”

“But nuclear war is suicide,” counters Brown’s Salzman. “If I’m not dead, I want to be able to kill myself. Life after nuclear war is a fate less than death.”

Besides, Salzman added, “I’m more optimistic about the future now just by seeing everyone’s growing concern and awareness” since the referendum was introduced.

“We’re trying to use the momentum we’ve started to get other campuses involved,” he said. “We’re sending out information to campuses to hold rallies on November 2 against nuclear war. It’s coming up fast, but we want it to be before the (November 6th presidential) election.”

Reagan Gets Support From 18-25 Year-Olds

Alexander Astin of UCLA’s Higher Education Resource Institute said his annual survey of incoming college freshman confirms Freedman’s analysis. The survey, for example, asked students what importance they attach to “developing a meaningful philosophy of life.”

During the height of the counterculture, this value ranked as the most popular among freshman. At one point, it was rated important by 85 percent of the respondents. Since the early seventies, the number of students calling “philosophy of life” an important goal has declined steadily, Astin said.

In the most recent survey, only 45 percent considered it an important value, while “being very well off financially” was ranked as the top value by 70 percent. “Making money has become a philosophy of life in itself for a lot of people,” Astin observed.

“It’s poor people’s fault for being poor,” Northridge’s Parker said before insisting, “I do have a heart.”

Reagan’s devotion to the entrepreneurial spirit fits neatly with the attitude shift among young voters, Freedman said. “Reagan doesn’t tell people we are in an era of limits. He says the Republican Party is the party of opportunity, and young people are responding to that,” he said.

Steve McHargue, a Pepperdine University political scientist, added Reagan’s public emphasis on family and religion does not hurt him among today’s college students. “Ten years ago, if you got a guy who talked about religion and family, there would have been a lot of skepticism” among students, McHargue said. Now the attitude is one of “quiet respect.”

Freedman noted that, especially among those too young to have anyone besides Jimmy Carter to compare to Reagan, Carter is viewed as a “weak president” while Reagan is seen as an “effective president who has gotten some things done. They respect that.”

Things are going pretty good right now, a lot better than they were four years ago,” said Eric Krogus, a 24-year-old UCLA grad who now manages the campus tennis shop. “It’s not Mondale. It’s more what happened with Carter-Mondale that I don’t want to see happen again.”

It remains to be seen if the president’s popularity among young voter will translate to long-term gains for the Republican party.

On one hand, a recent Gallup Poll showed 27% of the nation’s under-30 voters now call themselves Republicans, up from 18% in 1980.

But UCLA’s Astin believes students’ support of Reagan is less a shift to conservatism, and more a shift away from liberalism.

After Reagan, students’ political loyalties likely will be anyone’s prize, he says.

Editorial

Swing to Right Is Understandable but Frightening

There seems to be a frightening (and what some would call an obvious) trend on college campuses these days. Many students are leaning towards the political right. This is a trend brought out and often characterized by student support of President Ronald Reagan. The question many are asking is "Why"? Our past decade was one dominated by "left-leaning" students, by protests against rightist views and by a higher value placed on being a good person rather than earning a buck. Today's seemingly opposite trend is not all that surprising—and that makes it all the more disturbing.

"Convince oneself that nothing is wrong and nothing will be wrong." This rather Orwellian concept is what is at work in the world today. This is what we are doing to ourselves. We look around our world and we see VCR's and home computers and our smiling, assuring president and we think "Gee, I am better off than I was four years ago and every one else must be, too." We see good things all around us, such as headlines telling us how well the economy is doing and that the Soviets are coming to speak to us. We finally have a "tough" president. He said on student protesters, "If students want bloodshed, they'll get bloodshed" as governor of California. All seems to be all right, so why not vote for Reagan?

This is the easy way to look at things, this is the convenient view one can have without really having to check into what is going on. What students seem to forget is that the economy became strong after suffering a long recession and the odds are, with the way Reagan has blasted the deficit, that we are headed for another recession in the not so distant future. The deficit is something that must be paid off eventually and chances are that most of us will be in the work force when the deficit can no longer be swept under the rug.

Reagan has been unproductive in the area of sitting down with the Soviets. Our 'tough' president has said he will "take the blame" for the deaths of the 241 Marines who died in Lebanon—but did he take action?

We are living in an age of simple answers and few questions. We have to look beyond the snippets of information we read and hear and think hard before voting.

Don't Rip Down Braille Signs

To the Editor:

As a student working at the Office of the Disabled on campus I find myself outraged at the immature behavior of some of the students here at Stony Brook. Three times in the past month I and another student have placed braille signs in and outside of elevators used by blind students. These signs serve not only to identify the buttons for floors but also to locate the alarm and stop buttons in case of an emergency. Each time that we returned to the elevators, we found many of the labels pulled off. In some elevators all of the labels were removed.

Students should think about what these signs mean to blind students. When someone who is blind enters an elevator they have no way of finding the correct button without these labels. If no one else is in the elevator they have to play a guessing game hoping that eventually they will find the correct floor. The blind and people with other disabilities can lead normal, productive lives if a little concern is shown for their needs. Making buildings and classrooms accessible to students with disabilities enables them to take full advantage of the learning opportunities available. Why place unnecessary barriers in their path? The next time you are about to rip off a braille label think about what you are doing and what this will mean for the blind. Based upon honest reflection, any sensitive, caring person would have to reconsider his/her actions.

Election Baffling

To the Editor:

I was going to put off writing this letter until the election was over but at the current rate I might graduate first.

I have read in amazement your recent coverage of the Polity elections. Given the current trend in campus politics it would appear the best way to achieve elected office here at the Brook may soon come down to getting 10 or 15 people together to "vote" you in. I couldn't understand the need for a runoff election when the first and second places were separated by 172 votes? That was a virtual landslide. I didn't think there would be that many votes in the runoff. Heck, was I wrong! In light of the recent Polity "election" in which only around 1500 of the approximately 10,000 students participated and its sequel, "the runoff", I have some ideas on how to get more of the student body involved in the local electoral process.

In the future why not simply commission the people that sell!

pretzels to administer the election. If we were to pay the pretzel man $.25 per student, a 50% bulk discount, the whole election would only cost $2500, and everybody gets a pretzel too. This way nobody could blame Statesman for not letting the student body know about the election, that would be the pretzel man's job. This way the students would each get a pretzel, the pretzel man would make a bundle and for once the Brook might have a fair election.

Or, we could ask NYPIRG to do it. After all it would be in the public interest and they did a great job of getting people registered to vote in the real election. Since we are paying them over $5.00 a head the least they could do is hold a little election for us?

My point is that the way elections are held on this campus is a joke, a very bad one, that is at the great expense of all students paying the activity fee. We deserve better from our student government. There are many very real problems on this campus; dorm cooking, campus bars, public safety and FSA to name a few, but until the student government can operate on a day to day, year to year basis isn't it asking a bit much of any administrator to take our "representatives" seriously?

Patriot Teams Play Weekend of Tournaments

SB Men's Soccer, Men's X-Country and Womens Volleyball are Invited to Games

By Jim Passano

This past weekend the Stony Brook men's soccer team competed in the SUNY Centers competition, which was held at Albany University. The Pats dropped one match, then came back to win another during the two-day event.

In their first contest, Stony Brook dropped a close game to Buffalo, 2-1. Buffalo scored first at the 42:30 mark. Stony Brook then tied up the score at 71:22 when Mike Bellero put one past the Buffalo goaltender to make the score 1-1 with an assist from Paul Doherty.

In overtime, Ron Cone put one into the Pat net to make the final score 2-1 Buffalo. The loss dropped the Stony Brook record to 8-6-1. Stony Brook did however get a chance to redeem themselves when they challenged Albany on Saturday. The score was the same, 2-1, but this time it was different. Mike Bellero's score was not the Pats' only score. In addition at 82:30 Pete Zamboni put a second Pat score past goalkeeper Howie Tygar to give Stony Brook the win. They now have a 9-6-1 record and will face Baruch College on Tuesday.

At the Collegiate Track Conference (CTC) in Cortland Park this past weekend, the Stony Brook men's cross-country team placed 20th out of 25 schools in the CTC champs.

Farleigh Dickinson placed first in the contest, which was only raced by the Stony Brook junior varsity team. Stony Brook had a combined 479 point score, which placed them well out of the running with FDU taking first with 23 points. FDU was followed by Iona College. Iona earned 41 points to earn its second place spot.

The next contender was third place Fordham University, who earned 82 points.

Stony Brook's first runner to complete the race was Wilco Lagendyk. He finished 73rd with a time of 28:07 for the five mile course. Ray Rodriguez, with a 28:49 finish time, came in 98th.

The next Pat finisher was over the 100th spot in the race. Bill Oehrlein finished 108th after completing the course in 29:18. The final two Pat finishers, Mike Dunlop and Curtis Fisher finished 110th and 142nd with a respective finish times of 29:23 and 31:34.

The Pats next meet will be held in Pennsylvania on Tuesday when they travel to Stroudsburg for the IC4A Championships.

The Stony Brook women's volleyball team traveled up to SUNY Binghamton this weekend for the Binghamton Invitational. The Pats fared well as they defeated two teams, but lost to three others.

They lost their first contest on Friday to Oneonta by a score of 15-8 and then 15-12.

Stony Brook was down but not out. They came back to defeat Buffalo, also in straight games. The scores in that contest were 15-3, 15-7.

Saturday came and Stony Brook was ready to go. Unfortunately, they were not ready to go fast enough and wound up losing the first game 15-9 to Albany. If that wasn't enough, Albany came back for a repeat 15-9 performance. After the loss to Albany, Stony Brook proceeded to challenge Binghamton. This contest was also lost by the Pats, but it went three games, all of which Stony Brook lost. The scores in those games were 15-12, 13-15, and 15-9.

Stony Brook did find someone else to beat when they ganged up on Alfred with three games to win that match. The first set left Stony Brook on the short end of a 13-15 score. They won the second and third matches with scores of 15-2 and 15-3.

The Pats compiled some impressive statistics during the contest. They had 120 kill shots, 54 of them from Nancy Kuhlman. Wendy Nelson and Kuhlman had a total of 68 blocks into them team

Upset In N.Y. Marathon

New York — Overcoming serious stomach cramps and extreme heat and humidity, Orlando Pizzolato, a little-known 26-year-old distance runner from Italy, scored a stunning upset victory in the New York City Marathon yesterday. But there was no surprise in the women's race, as Grete Waitz of Norway won for the third consecutive year and the sixth time in seven years.

Pizzolato, who never had won a marathon in 12 previous races, led from near the halfway mark of the 26-mile, 385-yard event and struggled to the finish line, stopping to hold his stomach eight times during the final five miles. His time of 2 hours, 14 minutes, 53 seconds, was the slowest in the race's 15-year history since 1975 when Tom Fleming clocked 2:19:27. At that time, however, the course went only through Central Park. In 1976, the course was changed to include all five boroughs in New York City.

Pizzolato was not considered in the class of previous winners like Rod Dixon, last year's first-place finisher. Dixon was unable to defend his title. Suffering stomach cramps, he dropped out about 100 yards before the 21-mile point, when he was in fourth place.

Pizzolato's time had to be considered respectable, in light of his physical problems and the heat which reached a high of 74 degrees and the humidity which seared to 96 percent.

Dave Murphy, a native of Britain now living in Louisville, Ky., finished second in 2:15:33. He was followed by Herbert Steffny of West Germany in 2:16:22, Pat Petersen of Ronkonkoma, N.Y., in 2:16:35, and Gianni Demandonna of Italy in 2:17:05.

Waitz, who also admitted to having stomach cramps early in the race, was clocked in 2:29:30, her slowest finish since winning the New York city race for the first time in 1978.

Pizzolato, born in the little Italian town of Piovene, some 60 miles from Venice, and now living near Milan, was asked after his triumph what had been his previous biggest victory. "There wasn't any," said the physical education student, who finished 27th in last year's marathon here.

Waitz, loser of only one race in eight previous marathons in which she had finished — when she wound up second to Jean Benoit of the United States in the Los Angeles Olympics — said she almost quit yesterday's race in the early going, when the stomach cramps bothered her continually.

She thought the cramps were caused by too much liquid. "It was very warm, so I was drinking more than usual," said the 31-year-old former Oslo school teacher. "I had stomach cramps for the first three of four miles...I think I dehydrated. The first part of the race I wasn't concentrating on the race, but on my stomach." But like Pizzolato, she doggedly continued on, and Waitz said that the cramps finally went away near the 16-mile mark.

Waitz finished more than four minutes ahead of runner-up Veronique Marot, a native of France now living in England. Marot was timed in 2:33:58. Then came Laura Fogli of Italy in 2:37:15, Lizanne Bussieres of Canada in 2:37:34 and Judi St. Hilaire of Cambridge, Mass. in 2:37:41.

Gabriele Andersen-Schiess, a native of Switzerland now living in Sun Valley, Idaho, whose struggle to finish the Olympic marathon provided one of the most dramatic moments of the Games, finished 11th among the women in 2:42:24. Each of the winners earned $25,000 from the total purse of $273,800.

In addition, Pizzolato and Waitz received a $23,000 Mercedes-Benz. This was the first year in which race director Fred Lebow, head of the New York Road Runners Club, said the prize money would be paid in the open, instead of secretly, or under the table, as he had been doing since 1976.

Each of the runners-up collected $22,000 and the third-place finishers got $18,000.

A total of 18,365 runners were entered, making it the largest ever for a marathon in the United States.

Ramapo Roadrunners Nip SB Patriots 17-14

By Jimmy Gilligan

The Stony Brook Patriots lost a heartbreaker Saturday afternoon to the Ramapo College Roadrunners by the score of 17-14. The loss, which brought the Patriot's overall season record to 2-5, was a tough one for the team.

The game, which head coach Sam Kornhauser called "the best football game we've played all season," was an intense and gruelling contest throughout.

After winning the toss, the Patriots executed eight plays in a drive that saw the clock run down to the 10:00 mark. Unable to score, they punted from mid-field and handed the ball to the Roadrunners on the Ramapo 12 yard line. They were forced to reciprocate with a punt of their own. Already two-thirds of the first quarter was gone and neither team had managed to do much.

A series of fruitless possessions by both teams saw the game brought midway into the second quarter. At this point, things started looking up for Stony Brook. Receiving the ball on the Ramapo 44, the Patriots pulled off a three-play scoring drive that was highlighted by a 44 yard pass from quarterback Ray McKenna to wide receiver Eric Knechtel, who caught for a total of 164 yards in the game. The touchdown was scored on a two yard run by Chris Brown, who suffered a minor nose injury during the course of the game. Kicker John Buonora's extra point attempt was blocked and the score stood at 6-0.

The Roadrunners tried to get on the scoreboard before the end of the half by executing eleven plays within a minute and a half. However, kicker Glen Bisceglie's 48 yard field goal attempt fell short and the score remained 6-0 in favor of the Patriots at half-time.

Ramapo came out of the locker room pumping and managed to score on their first possession of the third quarter. An eight play, 46-yard scoring drive, which culminated in a 27 yard touchdown pass from Tim Cummings to Ray Sellman, evened the score. Bisceglie's extra point was good and the Roadrunners took a 7-6 lead. Ramapo quickly regained possession after an unsuccessful series of plays by the Patriots. This time the Roadrunners drove 66 yards downfield to score on a Cummings pass to freshman Gary Palomba. Bisceglie's kick was good for his second extra point and the Patriots were suddenly down 14-6.

Although Stony Brook was unable to produce with their next possession, they caught a break when Scott Glatley fumbled the punt return. Chuck Downey recovered the fumble for the Patriots and with more than a quarter of football left to play, it looked like Stony Brook still had a chance. However, on the first play, McKenna was sacked and the ball was forced loose from his hands, with Ramapo recovering the fumble.

The Roadrunners, receiving the ball on the Stony Brook 21 yard line, took advantage of their good field position. Bisceglie attempted another field goal, this one from 42 yards out, made it, and the score was upped to 17-6.

But the Patriots weren't out of it yet.

Ray McKenna passed for 205 yards, but it wasn't quite enough, as the Patriots fell short to Ramapo College, 17-14.

At 6:38 left to play, Jorge Taylor crossed the goal line with Stony Brook's second touchdown. When McKenna's two-point conversion pass to Knechtel succeeded, the score became 17-14 with still more than six minutes to play.

The Patriots downfall came on a 22 yard pass to Knechtel. He came up with what looked like an impossible reception, only to have it wrenched from his grip by a Ramapo defenseman. With less than two minutes left to, the Roadrunners ran out the clock and sealed the Patriots' fate.

Although the score may not show it, Stony Brook did play their best game yet. Their play excelled in areas that can't be measured by statistics. It was certainly impressive that McKenna connected on 15 of his 23 attempts for a total of 205 yards and that Knechtel had 6 receptions for 164 yards, but more importantly, the team showed a vigor and an enthusiasm that went beyond measure. "We showed intensity, offense when we needed it, defense when we needed it, and enthusiasm," said Kornhauser. "Of course we're disappointed, but we're real proud of the effort. We played well and we're getting better."

The Patriots' next challenge will come this weekend when they travel to upstate New York to meet SUNY Brockport.

SB Ruggers Pound Highly Ranked Iona, 25-0

By Jeff Eisenhart

The Stony Brook Rugby team had one of its greatest days ever as they walloped the highly ranked rugby squad from Iona College on Saturday afternoon.

The Iona team had come into the day's action ranked fourth in the East Coast Union Conference. But the visiting Gaels from Iona were overmatched by a surprising Stony Brook squad, 25-0.

Mike Cash and Paul Meyers led the Stony Brook attack as they combined for 17 points. Cash tallied nine points when he booted three point afters, and a penalty kick, while Meyers contributed eight points when he ran in for two tries.

Stony Brook dominated play for the onset, as they took a 9-0 halftime lead. Meyers got Stony Brook rolling in the second half when he scored the first of his two tries.

The win was Stony Brook's fourth win in seven matches. What was the key in this win over the powerful Iona team? According to one player, Bob Brooks. "We played as a team better than we ever played before."

In the B-game, Stony Brook lost a heartbreaker to the Iona B team, 10-4, on a try in the closing moments of the game.

The Stony Brook Ruggers hope to continue their dominant play over the opposition when they will face the St. John's Redmen at home on Saturday for a 1 PM start.

Paul Meyers is seen above on his way to scoring the first of his two tries. The Pats won easily over Iona College, 25-0.
