Note-Taking Service Irks Admin

By Helen Przewuzman

A note-taking service that began this semester has caused some university officials to question the ethics and legalities of such practices.

E-Z Note Lecture Service, operated by junior John Giglio, offers the class notes for three introductory level courses, Biology 151, Chemistry 131 and Psychology 103. Giglio said he attends or has attended these classes as an auditor, types the edited notes on a word processor and mails them to the 40 students who have already subscribed.

This practice has been thriving at other college campuses. According to the College Press Service, the University of California at Los Angeles (UCLA) operates an elaborate note taking service which cover 125 courses. A UCLA spokesman said that up to 50 percent of the students in those classes purchase the notes.

Even though there is a disclaimer on the mailing package stating that these notes are not substitutes for class attendance, this is one area that concerns some university officials. Graham Spanier, vice-provost of Undergraduate Studies, feels this is an inappropriate activity. "It is a contradiction of the ways we would like to see instruction given at the university," he said.

Rosemarie Nolan, assistant to the business manager for the Office of Finance and Administration, also feels that this service encourages students not to attend classes. But, she said academic freedom is also an issue. "Professors work hard to prepare their lectures. Someone else shouldn't make a profit off of their work," Nolan said.

George Hechtel, associate professor of Ecology and Evolution who teaches Biology 151, called the notes a reasonable effort by someone who doesn't know the subject. He said the notes contained some serious mistakes and many spelling errors. He also pointed out that "a few things were out of place."

"If they were taking my exam after studying these notes, they may have a good start but would get fouled up. The author of these says that lobsters are mollusks, and that is wrong," said Hechtel.

"I wouldn't buy these unless my notes were absolutely horrible or if I missed a day of class. Cliff or Monarch notes would be more accurate," he added.

Giglio said that taking notes is a dying art. "My service is good for a large class where the conditions are bizarre. There are up to 600 people in a room with background noise, talking and newspaper reading. While this is not a substitute for attendance, it allows students to sit back and listen. I feel it is enhancing to the classes," he said.

As for the inaccuracies, Giglio said that everyone would have those. "I'm not 100 percent perfect. I do make mistakes, but there are no consistent errors," he said.

Spanier said, "My own opinion is that most professors would be very uneasy about this practice. A professor giving a lecture to students about his own ideas is the same as one writing a book and publishing it. A professor assumes students in a course are taking notes for their own benefit."

Gerianne Dias, assistant counsel at SUNY Central Administration in Albany, said there may be legal problems with it that the university would want to look into. "It could mean a copy right infringement problem" she said.

Giglio said he doesn't feel that he is violating the copyright laws unless he were taking notes from a professor's published material.

"Also there is a university policy that prohibits commercial activities except in limited cases, like those provided by the Faculty Student Association (FSA), said Dias.

Susan Bernstein, executive director of FSA, said FSA has not given permission for this service on campus. "Anybody who does that kind of thing would have permission from the provost's office before getting authorization from us," she said.

Provost Homer Neal said "There has been no permission given for this to occur." He added that this type of service could be operated, but with specific guidelines. Permission from the instructors would be the most important.

Congress Allows Covert Aid To Nicaragua to Continue

Washington — President Reagan has won at least a reprieve in Congress for the CIA's embattled "covert" aid to Nicaraguan counter-revolutionaries.

The Senate Intelligence Committee has accepted a slightly revised aid plan and the House may shy away from a head-on fight to stop it. The administration's recent success has buoyed some Reagan backers who now believe Congress will let the program continue for the foreseeable future.

Meanwhile, the CIA-backed "contras" — or counter-revolutionaries — have stepped up attacks against Nicaraguan towns near the Honduran border and against economic targets deep inside the country. The leftist Nicaraguan government claims to have beaten back the attacks.

By taking no action before the 1983 fiscal year ended Friday, Congress allowed funding for the covert action to continue. Proposals to end it are expected to re-emerge later this month, but their chances appear doubtful.

The House, which voted 228-195 on July 28 to kill the program, is scheduled to consider the cut-off proposal again in about two weeks as part of the 1984 intelligence authorization bill. The Senate never took up the House-passed bill to kill the program and is expected to back continued covert action while insisting on tighter budgetary controls.

Congressional staff aides of both parties, speaking on condition they not be identified, agree that the cut-off effort has lost steam since the July vote for several reasons. Among them are:

- The more pressing debate over the role of U.S. Marines in Lebanon.

- Intense anti-Soviet feeling over the downing of Korean Air Line Flight 007 that has hardened congressional sentiment on a wide range of security issues.

- Administration pleas that covert action is crucial to its overall political strategy in Central America and has already succeeded in forcing Nicaragua to soften its negotiating position.

- Pentagon estimates that an overt program for stopping weapons going from Nicaragua to leftist guerrillas in El Salvador would cost $300 million and risk deeper U.S. military involvement.

The House bill, approved in July, would have replaced covert aid with an open $80 million fund to help pro-U.S. governments in the region stop leftist gun-running. But in letters to the House and Senate intelligence committees, Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said overt "interdiction against ground supply flow alone could cost upwards of $300 million the first year, and at least $100 million for each subsequent year. Even at these levels, little interdiction could be achieved against air and waterborne infiltration."

Sen Democrats Seek to Oust Watt

Washington — Senate Democrats are seeking a quick floor vote this week on a resolution urging the dismissal of Interior Secretary James Watt, but Reagan administration allies, mindful that the measure could pass by a comfortable margin, are searching for ways to block or delay the vote.

"We're ready to vote on Mr. Watt. But the administration doesn't want a vote," said Senate Democratic leader Robert G. Byrd of West Virginia. He is author of the "sense of the Senate" resolution calling on President Reagan to request Watt's resignation "without delay."

Byrd has indicated he'll take the first opportunity to press for adoption of his measure, which labels as "insensitive and insulting" Watt's characterization of appointees to an advisory commission as "a black, a woman, two Jews and a cripple."

That chance could come within the next few days, as Congress works for another week before taking a one-week Columbus recess. Also up in the Senate this week is legislation to designate a new holiday to honor slain civil rights leader Martin Luther King Jr., a bill that could be filibustered by a small band of conservatives. Meanwhile, work will continue in both chambers on major spending bills for the fiscal year that began Saturday.

The White House said last week that Interior Secretary Watt was expected to stay on and that President Reagan considered the matter "closed." But the furor over Watt's remarks continued to rage on Capitol Hill, and GOP leaders concede that Byrd's resolution would likely pass—action that could prove an embarrassment to the Reagan administration.

Some of the harshest criticism of Watt is coming from senators in the West, the region most affected by Interior Department policies. In 12 Western states, only 10 Senators are urging Watt to stay in office, according to an Associated Press survey conducted late last week. Another eight senators for the region have called outright for Watt to resign and two others have stopped just short of doing so.

State Report Criticizes Dormitory Fire Safety

By Kieko Wakeshima

Twenty-one out of 25 residence halls here received poor ratings for fire safety according to a survey conducted by the Dormitory Authority of SUNY.

According to several Stony Brook officials, vandalism and general disregard for fire safety procedures by residents were the major reasons for the poor ratings. "There is blatant disrespect for state property [by residents]," said Gary Matthews, Director of Residential Physical Plant. He said he found there was an attitudinal problem among the residents and that they were "endangering the lives of other students."

The Dormitory Authority Property Condition and Safety Survey was conducted at Stony Brook last October 4 through November 18 by a sight survey team of six people from Albany. The evaluation was conducted statewide at all SUNY campuses with residence dorms. The purpose of the inspection, according to Robert Francis, vice president for Campus Operations, was to "assess the condition of the properties and uphold responsibilities to the bondholders who own the buildings not only of SUNY but of other facilities as well."

The Dorm Authority reports are sent back to the schools with detailed comments and suggestions for improvement in the areas evaluated. The schools must review and return a report advising as to the disposition of the recommendations in the survey.

According to the 20 page summary of the survey, 21 out of 25 residence halls received poor ratings in Life/Fire Safety. Only four--Gershwin, Hand, Baruck and Stimson--received average ratings and the apartment complex (Stage XVI) received good ratings.

The overall property condition of the dorms was rated on the minus side of "good"; maintenance was rated "good to average-minus"; housekeeping was rated "good to average"; vandalism rated "minor-high side"; handicap facilities were rated "good."

In the Life/Fire Safety evaluation, the Dormitory Authority survey stated that there were potential life threatening problems throughout the residence halls that required immediate corrections. Major problem included the smoke barrier doors which were reported to be in very poor condition.

According to the survey, a vast majority of the fire and smoke barrier doors presented a very serious problem. "No building was found to have all doors in operating condition," stated the report.

The smoke and barrier doors were designed to contain fire and smoke and isolate sections of structures in case of fire. The report said many do not work, seal properly or are broken. According to Bill Schulz, Fire Safety technician, this is mainly due to residents who prop open the doors with cinder blocks and other objects that can damage the doors. "We fix and replace some of these doors and then they are wrecked," said Schulz. Carmen Vasquez, Stage XII quad director said that students prop open the fire doors with fire extinguishers--an act which can be interpreted as vandalism by the students. The problem with the doors cannot be attributed to negligence or lack of maintenance on behalf of the authorities, said Schulz. Many of the problems stems from student's lack of awareness, he claimed.

Steve Drelich, a managerial assistant (MA) from Kelly A, said that the problems with fire safety is a combination of student vandalism and lack of maintenance by the university. Drelich reported that there were fire doors in Kelly that could not be opened without great force because the doors were "not hung properly" and were "off the hinges." This problem is due to student vandalism he said, but the doors have not been fixed for quite some time due to neglect on behalf of the university.

Other problems in the Life/Fire Safety included the improper storage of trash in the corridors of Kelly Quad. According to the report, there are designated rooms to collect trash and garbage which were not being utilized. The problem with residents not using the designated trash room was a contributing factor to the rash of fires which broke out in Kelly last year, said Schulz. "These rooms are equipped with heat sensors, but if the rooms are not going to be used, there will be fires," said Schulz.

Stony Brook reported to the DA that students have been instructed to use designated trash rooms and will request funding from SUNY to install sprinklers in Kelly Quad trash rooms, which currently have heat detectors.

There were problems with automatic generators providing emergency lighting in the residence halls which were not operable at the time of the survey and the DA pointed out that the halls needed improved maintenance programs for all generators and related emergency lighting systems including checks on bulb replacement and exit sign replacement.

According to the report from Stony Brook, the generators have been inspected and are now operating. Given the current funding and staffing to maintain lighted exit signs, the report stated that Stony Brook was doing its best to alleviate the problem.

Fire safety programs dealing with damaged doors, missing exit signs, improper storage of trash, and wood paneling in dorm rooms were due to negligence, according to Schulz. Exit signs are replaced only to be stolen within the hour, reported Matthews. According to a male student who requested anonymity, the signs are easy to take down and he currently has one hanging from his room wall.

According to the DA survey, vandalism "uncorrected, spreads like a 'cancer' wherein the occupant subconsciously concludes 'if the facility (university) isn't concerned, why should I be?'"

Drelich agrees with this statement, and said students have a bad attitude because they feel the university does not care about the problems of fire safety

'Bottle Bill' Redemption Center to be Created

By John Burkhardt

A Coca-cola can redemption center will be set up in front of the Stony Brook Union this week, according to officials of the Faculty Student Association (FSA) and a vending contractor.

Joe Fedor, from Automatic Catering of New Jersey said a manned booth would be opened on a four-week trial bases, and that it could become permanent if enough cans are brought in. He said about one thousand cans a day would have to be brought in for the redemption center to pay for itself.

Larry Roher, FSA's director of Operations, said that automatic Catering has no obligation to provide the service. He said the company met its legal obligations by arranging for Stony Brook beverage to accept the cans and posting an announcement of this of the machines.

The redemption center will only take containers from the Coca-cola bottling company's products.

Roher said they were planning a grand opening for Wednesday but were trying to get the redemption center open sooner, possibly even today.

"I don't think it's going to be ready yet on Monday," said Fedor, but it might, he added. Fedor said that an information booth, currently sitting unused in front of the administration building, would be used. An attendant will keep the booth open several hours a day, five days a week, he said. "We're probably only going to have it open in the afternoon," he said.

Automatic Catering has arranged for a local company, Ed Christian Distributors, to cart away the cans, Fedor said.

The Union was chosen as a convenient central location, according to Roher, and the booth will be set up outdoors in front of the building on the right hand-side.

Fedor said a four week trial was necessary to make sure that people will really be in the habit of using the redemption center. "We may get a large influx the first week as people empty out drawers and stuff like that," he said.

Roher said the redemption center can be successful if people make an effort to use it, because vending machines on campus sell hundreds of cases of Cola-cola products each week.

The New York Public Interest Group (NYPIRG) and Environmental Action (ENACT) may try to set up other redemption centers on campus, according to Dave Kalish, NYPIRG Project Coordinator.

Statesman Ken Rockwell

When New York State's "Bottle Bill" became law recently, there were no redemption centers on campus for refund on cans purchased from vending machines.

University Senate to Discuss Department Merger

By Mitch Wagner

The proposed merger of two life science departments is expected to be the main topic of discussion at tomorrow's University Senate meeting, said Senate President Ronald Douglas.

The senate, which will meet in Lecture Hall 109 at 3:30 PM, is an administrative advisory body made up of students, faculty and non-teaching professionals.

William Van Der Kloot, chairman of the Department of Physiology and Biophysics, opposes the merger between his department and Neurobiology and Behavior. He said the "gigantic department" resulting from the merger would create a great deal of administrative confusion, "too much confusion for one chairman to handle."

David Cohen, disagrees. He is presently chairman of Neurobiology and Behavior, and is being eyed for chairmanship of the proposed "Neurobiology, Physiology and Biophysics" department. He thinks the merger "has got a lot of merit, but it's a significant amount of additional work."

Cohen is supported in his position by Marvin Kushner, dean of Medicine, and Biology Dean Richard Koehm, who drew up the proposal. The Department of Physiology and Biophysics is affiliated with the Health Sciences Center's School of Medicine, while Neurobiology and Behavior is with Main Campus' College of Arts and Sciences. One of Van Der Kloot's objections to the proposal is that the super-department would be affiliated with both schools are the departments of Biochemistry and Microbiology.

Microbiology Chairman Arnold Levine said the cross-affiliation has created no problems within his department.

Ron Tangos With the Paparazzi at Xenon's

(Part III of a four-part series)

Just then, Ron Galla, the famous Paparazzi, and the guy who had been chasing Jackie Onassis, and her children, all over the place for years, and had actually been taken to court over the whole thing, with Jackie, saying with tears in her eyes, that Galla was harassing her, and making her life really miserable, walked right in front of me, his trusty camera in hand. I knew it was Galla, because I had seen pictures of him in one of the local papers, and he was by now quite famous himself

"Sweetheart"

By Ron Kovic

Galla? I said, introducing myself to him. I'm Ron Kovic, I said, as his eyes darted around the room looking for famous people, to take a picture of. I wrote the book, Born on the Fourth of July, I told him. I know you've heard of me, I said, shouting, Al Pacino's planning to play the story of my life. Oh yea, he said, suddenly looking at me. I heard of you. Where's Pacino? He asked, darting his head around the room again, with the eyes of a hawk, searching every face in the crowd for a picture. I don't know where Al is, I said lying. Al was standing directly in back of Galla, and I was doing my best to keep the Paparazzi's attention. Oh please, please; don't let him turn around and see me, I could see Al saying with his face, as he began inching slowly towards the men's room, after the Garbage Pale incident at Elaines, and the court proceedings with Mrs. Onassis. I'm sure he loved all the publicity. Hey, are you Ron which was directly to his left a few feet. If I could just keep Galla busy, until Al got into the men's room. Hey Ron, why don't you take my picture? Come on Ron, I said how about taking a picture of me. Sure, he said, stepping back a few feet, clicking off a couple of shots. The lights of his camera flashed, as Al kept inching towards the men's room. Come on Al, I thought to myself, you can make it. How 'bout a couple more shots? I shouted to Galla, who was starting to grow impatient with me. Ok, alright, just one more, he said, shaking his head. The camera clicked, and just at that exact instant, Al disappeared into the men's room. We were safe. Ron Galla had missed Al. He had been standing right in back of one of New York's most famous Paparazzi's, and he had gotten away clean. It was wild, I thought. Galla had his back almost pressed up against Pacino's chest, and the guy didn't even know it. I had completely fooled him, and stalled for time, so Pacino could slip into the bathroom, and hide, sitting on one of the toilet bowls, probably for the next couple hours.

It was a great feeling. I had just tricked one of the slickest Paparazzi's in New York. I shook Galla's hand before he walked away. Thanks a lot, I said, grabbing his hand. Try to get it into People Magazine, if you can, I told him. It would really be great if you could get it into People, I told him shouting above the roar of the disco. He shook his head, as if to say he'd try, and walked away, pushing himself back into the wild crowd all around us.

Loretta suddenly appeared from in back of me, and I told her the whole story about Galla, and how he had been right in front of Al, and he had missed him. It was outrageous, I shouted into Laurie's ear, cupping my hand close to her face, so she could hear. At that moment Al came back out of the mens room and we all got together, next to a big garbage pail, shouting to each other because it was so incredibly loud. Boom, boom, boom, the thump, thump, thump, the disco exploded, and pounded all around us, the red and green lights flashing in our eyes. How's it going Al? I shouted. He still had the Yankee cap on his head. We really fooled Galla, didn't we? Yea, shouted Al with a smile, but I think it's getting a little dangerous in here, Al said, a little too hot to handle. Ahh, don't worry, I told Al, your having fun, aren't you? Al shouted out a big, yeaaa, and we all started cheering. let's party, come on Al, hang in there, let's close this place tonight. Look at all the beautiful girls, I shouted look Al, they're all over the place, I said, pointing my finger at all the beautiful foxy looking women in there skin tight skirts, with slits up to there navels. Let's hang out a while longer, I said, we can go home in a little while; don't worry, I told Al, really believing myself now, nobody's going to know you're here. Just keep your hat on, I said to Al. And he did and even went out on the disco dance floor, and started dancing with Laurie, and nobody noticed him. He was having a ball, and by the look on Al's face, which seemed to all of a sudden light up, it seemed like Al was having the time of his life. There he was, out there, dancing with Laurie, with his Yankee cap on his head, and me, sitting in my wheelchair, watching the whole thing. What a night, I thought, what a night this is turning out to be.

Note-Taking Service Irks Administration

Paul Madonna, the university Business Manager, said in order to conduct such a business, approval would have to be granted through his office. "We don't allow any activity to take place at the university that does not meet with the university's mission and goals. We would also require him to sell through FSA, which is the only entity on campus that exists for profit businesses on campus," said Madonna.

Richard Solo, a Chemistry 131 professor calls this a student project that exceeds what students typically take on as a project to help others. "Despite the fact that there will be differing opinions from all over, the effort, quality and effectiveness are phenomenal. The notes are accurate, other than a few misspellings and errors," said Solo.

He added that these notes should not be taken as gospel—a note-taker can not truly be held responsible for the errors.

"If the university, through its various bodies, does not want him to do this, we will ask him not to do so," said Madonna.

Female SB Student Found To be a Precious Jewel

By Ana Maria Ramos
Being crowned as Miss Ivory Sapphire recently has yet to change Stony Brook senior Renee Lipscomb. "I dress and act the same before winning as I do now after winning", Renee said. She was crowned Miss Ivory Sapphire on Friday, September 23, at the Mu Delta Chapter of the Phi Beta Sigma Fraternity's Fourth Annual Blue and White in the Fine Arts Center Recital Hall. The event was attended by more than four hundred people.

Renee beat out eight other women for the title and the $250 first prize, competing in categories such as: grade point average, community service, evening gown competition and talent she said. But everyone came out a winner, Renee said. "We all won because we now have a positive attitude about ourselves and we became very good friends with each other", she said. When asked if she planned on competing in other pageants, she said, "I really enjoyed being in this competition, but I don't think I want to participate in any others." First Runnerup, Ivonne Bailey was awarded with $100 and Clare Cortez was named as "Miss Congeniality".

Judging the contest were four administrators representing various campus organizations and offices, and one student judge. Renee also mentioned student Sharon King, who King said, "was like a mother figure", to all the contestants giving last minute advice and helping them with the preparations and competition itself. Her other duties were, "sitting in on their individual talent acts, giving them constructive criticism and also collaborating an event in which all the contestants participated in a monologue and dance routine."

Renee's future duties will include serving as a role model and being present at various fraternity functions in the coming year.

As a role model, Renee urged other students to follow her lead and get involved in campus activities. She is treasurer of the African American Student's Organization and works as a peer counselor on campus. "I feel that getting involved in either. He said there is a fire door in Kelly Quad with a makeshift coat-hanger door nob that has not been replaced. Another problem is the university gives students ripped furniture, makes them foot the bill, and in general, does not look out for the students, who in turn do not care about the university.

According to Schulz, the university administration is concerned. There are daily inspections conducted in all the buildings for fire and life safety and fire marshalls visit the halls and speak about fire safety and awareness.

Francis stated the administration recognizes the problem of fire safety and are in the process of appropriating funds to repair and replace damages in the residence halls. According to Matthews, Stony Brook received funding for roofing repairs which are "definitely needed." Antennas installed by residents, he said, have damaged the roofs and could be a potential fire hazard. The request for additional funding from SUNY Central Administration for life/fire safety problems stated in the survey have depleted the funds and the funding is low, said Matthews. Stony Brook has been granted funds to replace the smoke/fire doors in Kelly and Stage XII. They have also received funds for fire extinguisher cabinets in G and H Quads. The total amount received was $45,000.

Another significant problem area cited by the DA was the inadequate sealing of wall louvers and louvered doors and also "penetration through fire rated walls and floors" which needed to be sealed to prevent the spread of smoke and fire. According to the report sent by Stony Brook to the DA, they are assessing the problem to determine whether a request for funding will be submitted to SUNY. According to Schulz, in G.H, Tabler and Kelly, the dorm cooking installment contractors put holes in the walls and these will be sealed providing there are funds.

The survey also reported a very serious PCB transformer problem, "necessitating priority remedial action." All transformer rooms require sealing and repairing. The primary concern is to prevent possible building contamination from PCB, an additive to transformer oil, in the event of fire.

Stony Brook reported that the PCB containment action has been completed in the transformer rooms and funding is being requested to change the contaminated transformers.

According to Francis, in previous years, the DA conducted similar surveys of the SUNY system but "never anything on this scale." "The Dormitory Authority used to do yearly, informal inspections to which we objected because they were not thorough and systematic," said Francis. "This is the first comprehensive survey conducted by the Dormitory Authority," he said.

Lindo Signorelli, SUNY vice chancellor for Capital Facilities, said that all SUNY schools with dorms have been surveyed and of the reports completed, Stony Brook is on "the low side" of Life/Fire Safety in comparison to other schools.

"By conducting this survey, we found what problems in SUNY need to be addressed," said Signorelli, "and steps can be taken to get whatever funding is necessary."

The DA will not be returning to check if improvements have been made by the university, but they plan to do a detailed study perhaps in the future.

When asked whether the residence halls' fire safety standards will have improved by then, Schulz said that as long as the residents continue to disregard safety precautions set by the school and continue to vandalize, fire safety ratings will always be poor.

Dormitory Blues

The State Dormitory Authority's assessment of the dorms at Stony Brook as lax in the area of Life and Fire Safety comes as no big surprise. Most residents may agree they should be labeled as unfit to house the roaches they are infested with. However, they are home to more than 7,000 residents, most of whom make of them what they can.

But this report comes on the heels of another report by the Legislative Commission on Expenditure Review (LCER) which was also highly critical of dorm conditions. As Stony Brook officials have cited vandalism in the dorms as causing problems, the LCER found this as well.

This is disturbing to some Albany watchers like us. Why have two recent reports within the State been aimed at our dormitories and listing students as causing problems?

As the targets of the reports, students should take this as a warning that something is brewing in Albany. The State will point out deteriorating circumstances, but will they fork over the funds to fix things? The answer is, no. In lieu of the sorry state of New York's finances, they will not foot the bill. And it is logical that they point to students as the catalysts to deteriorating dorms. We ask you, isn't it also logical that they will look for the funds in student wallets?

This seems apparent already with one vice president here preparing to raise the dormitory cooking fee in the coming months. The in-dorm cooking program was attacked vehemently by both State reports and a proposed rise in student fees has resulted.

Fine. We may be able to point out the problems but haven't the foggiest idea how to solve them. Perhaps the bad apples who are stealing fire exit signs and ripping alarms off the walls should be tarred and feathered. After all, the 7,000 will end up paying for their mischief; whether by living with the holes in the walls or getting stuck paying the tab.

Preparations For The Heating Season

To the Editor:

With cooler weather finally providing some relief from the heat of the past summer, now is the time to prepare for the heating season. As fall begins to set in, and people try to keep warm, the risk of carbon monoxide poisoning increases. This year, we hope Suffolk County residents will not needlessly lose their lives as a result of careless behavior.

The most important thing to remember is that deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning are, in most instances, preventable. The most common cause of monoxide poisoning is cars that are left running with windows closed, and a faulty exhaust system causing carbon monoxide to enter the inside of the car, resulting in the death of the occupants.

There are certain safety tips that follow that can prevent carbon monoxide poisoning:

- Do not leave your windows closed and car running when parked. Always turn off the ignition when parked.
- When you are driving, always leave a window partially open, even if you are traveling with the heat on.
- Be careful not to back into snow banks, during winter months, which may damage your muffler and exhaust system.
- When first starting your furnace, check them for backups, which could indicate your flue is clogged, allowing waste products to remain in your home. Check flues on wood and coal burning stoves often.
- Be sure all space heaters are in proper working order.

Carbon monoxide is odorless and colorless, so you may not be aware of its presence. At low levels of carbon monoxide in the blood, one may experience a slight headache, irritability and fatigue. At high levels of carbon monoxide, confusion and fainting will most likely be present, leading to unconsciousness and death.

Although gas stoves do not lead to carbon monoxide poisoning, they can be fatal when used as a heating source. Many people have sealed their homes tightly for energy efficiency, and in most cases, there is little exchange with fresh air. If a gas range is left on, it can deplete all of the oxygen in the air, causing death.

All we need to do is use common sense and proper safety rules to prevent deaths from carbon monoxide poisoning.

Between the insecurity of childhood and the insecurity of second childhood, we find the skydiver. Skydivers are found everywhere: in bars, under bars, behind bars, looking through bars, in trouble, in debt, in love, and in the air.
Skydivers come in assorted sizes, shapes, and weights in states of sobriety, misery, and confusion. Girls love them mothers worry about them. Unemployment Checks support them.
And then by some coincidence, they manage to get along with other. The skydiver is laziness with a deck of cards, a millionaire without a cent, bravery without a smile.
The Skydiver is a composite: sly as a fox, has the brains of an idiot, the energy of a turtle, the sincerity of a liar, the appetite of an elephant, the aspirations of Casanova, the stories of a hero. When he wants something, it is usually free jumps, more money, a good piece of tail. He dislikes ASO's, getting up early, small planes, hot shot pilots (who never hit DZ), the week before his payday, his girl's father's curfew, and legs (that is a landover). He likes girls, women, females, and all members of the opposite sex.
No one can think of you so often and write so seldom. No one can get so much fun out of your letters, old jumpsuits and sex movies.
The skydiver is a magical creature: you can lock him out of your house, but not out of your heart.
You can take him off your mailing list, but not out of your mind.

Selling in Dorms OKed by Courts

Sales companies can invade dorms and make their pitches almost at will from now on, if two recent court rulings stay in effect.

A federal judge has said Pennsylvania State University cannot ban group sales presentations in its dorms because the restrictions violate students' free speech rights.

The decision, coupled with a similar ruling earlier this summer against the State University of New York-Cortland, may have far-reaching implications for dormitories across the country which try to restrict dorm sales and solicitation.

Pennsylvania officials had argued they had the authority to bar group sales meetings in the dorm rooms because the meetings disturb other students.

But U.S. District Judge Malcolm Muir has now ruled that the "free flow of ideas resulting from attendance at group commercial demonstrations and solicitations is a constitutionally protected right," and ordered the school to lift its restrictions.

In the New York case, university officials had also insisted their ban on commercial dorm sales was necessary to insure student safety and security.

In July, however, U.S. District Judge

Neal McCurn ruled "a blanket restriction on commercial speech is a particularly overbroad and inappropriate means of protecting students from commercial abuses."

But, McCurn added, while the school could not ban commercial sales meetings and demonstrations, it could place restrictions on the time and place the meetings and held.

Furthermore, the judge said, the school was only obligated to allow demonstrations and meetings, and could ban actual sales of products in residence halls.

Both suits involved AFS which recruits students on campuses nationwide to help sell its product. "Usually, they ask a student if they can have one of their sales reps hold a sales demonstration in their dorm room," says Lee Upcraft, Penn State's manager of residential life.

"Fortunately, the law only applies to schools in the two federal court districts involved," says Gary North, housing director at the University of Illinois, and former president of the Association of College and University Housing Officers. North says colleges should have the right to restrict such meetings "to prevent things from getting out of hand."

Indeed, at Penn State the number of dorm sales meetings "is building each day as the word gets out (that the school cannot restrict them)," says Upcraft. "We're probably having at least three or four a day on campus now," he laments. "It may soon reach a point where it's difficult to maintain a good study environment."

Prof Bites Off More Than He Can Chew

Marquette, MI—A Northern Michigan University military science instructor has been fired from his teaching post for biting the head off a live chicken during class and then drinking the blood of the slaughtered fowl, all in an effort "to get students' attention."

The incident occurred September 1st as Sgt. Maj. Jimmy A. Powell was lecturing his leadership training class for new Reserve Officers Training Command recruits (ROTC).

"Apparently [Powell] had the whole thing planned out in advance as a way to get students' attention during their first day of class," says Col. Donald Taylor, head of the military science department.

After introducing himself and lecturing students for several minutes, Powell left the room and came back carrying a live chicken.

"According to the students, he was just walking around with the chicken, explaining things like what happens if you attend class out of uniform when all of a sudden he extended the neck of the chicken and bit it off," Taylor says.

Then, as horrified students looked on, Powell held the chicken up over his head and let the blood run into his mouth.

"I was shocked and disgusted when I heard about it late that afternoon," Taylor says, "I checked all the facts and concluded that there was absolutely no justification for what had been done, and that it simply could not be tolerated."

The following morning Taylor met with university officials and decided to relieve Powell of his teaching post and reassign him to nearby K.I. Sawyer Air Force Base.

"Nobody had any knowledge this thing was going to happen," Taylor explains. "[Powell] had taught a number of classes like Land Navigation and Marksmanship for over a year, and we'd never had any trouble with him before."

Other faculty members have expressed "shock and revulsion" at what happened, says Faculty Senate Chairman Roger Barry, a NMU chemistry professor.

"But," Barry adds, "we do think Col. Taylor handled the whole thing quickly and properly."

Powell's case is now being reviewed by U.S. Army officials, Taylor says, who may take additional action against the 40-year-old career soldier.

"He still doesn't understand why I and other university officials have reacted so strongly to what he did," Taylor says. "He still feels it was an acceptable technique to get students' attention."

Jets to Play Bills

Orchard Park, NY — Both the New York Jets and the Buffalo Bills will find out if recent successes are real tonight when they meet in the Nation Football League.

The Bills success goes back to the second game of the season. After losing to Miami in the season opener, Buffalo has won their last three games.

The Jets success is more recent. After dropping two of their three opening games, New York rallied last week to beat the Los Angeles Rams in overtime. For a team that was expected to be one of the best in the American Football Conference, the win signalled a new beginning after a slow start.

"It gives us an emotional lift," said starting offensive tackle Mary Lyons, "We showed everybody we could come back," added defensive lineman Mark Gastineau.

Bills Coach Kay Stephenson admitted his team "has a monumental task this week."

The loss of talented running back Freeman McNeil, who separated a shoulder against the Rams and will be out eight weeks, won't make things much easier for the Bills. Stephenson said.

"They can still throw a bevy of backs at you," he said. "They're fortunate in that they have a great, great group of running backs."

Jets Coach Joe Walton said he will count on Scott Dierking, Johnnie Hector and Bruce Harper. "It'll be more of a situational substitution," he said. "I hope to keep them moving out and try to take advantage of what each individual can do for us."

Despite the loss of a valued performer like McNeil, Walton insisted he's not going to change his philosophy. "We're not going to change our system," he said. "We believe in our backup people." Walton said he's impressed with Buffalo. "They've played very well and they've played with a lot of emotion," he said.

"Above all, what scares me most is their defense," he added. "We're a little banged up on offense right now." Along with McNeil, offensive guard Stan Waldmore is out of the game for the Jets and wide receiver Wesley Walker is listed as questionable.

Stephenson called the Jets "a very physical football team with tremendous talent. "It's hard to say they have better talent than the Los Angeles Raiders," he said, "but it's tough to think of anybody having any better talent." He said he wasn't fooled by the Jets relatively slow start. "We're only four games into the season," he said. "The Jets are one of those teams that could end up 14-2. I don't think there's any major defect on that football team."

The team came up with a 98 percent serving average. Defense was led by senior Denise Driscoll and Anita Hirtz.

The team's next contest was against Nassau Community College. They easily defeated Nassau with identical scores of 15-9. Kuhlman had the most killshots for the team in this match with 11, followed by Laura Felker with six and Kehoe, who had five. Lambert again led the team in assists with one and Kohlman had the most blocks with four. Stony Brook's last match, the toughest yet, was against Southampton College. Here the Patriots won the first set 15-6 and lost the second 15-12. The third set ended in a 15-4 victory for Stony Brook. In a strong defensive effort, Lambert, Kehoe and Felker combined for seven killshots apiece. Lauren Beja again came up with the most assists, with 13. She was followed by Lambert, who had 10. Beja also led with three blocks, followed by Felker, who had two. Defense again was commanded by Denise Driscoll and teammate Adrienne Springer. The team had a 93 percent serving percentage.

When all the matches had been played, Stony Brook came out on top of two division II schools and had retained their home invitational title, previously won last year. The final scores left Kutztown in second, Nassau in third and Southampton and Pace bringing up the rear. The tournament improves Stony Brook's record to 7-3.

Patriot Air Attack Overcomes RPI's Lead

By Michael Borg

The Stony Brook Patriots won their third game of the season in come-from-behind fashion Saturday as they overpowered Division III Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (RPI) 23-19. Although RPI dominated in the war of the trenches, 252 yards to 133 yards, Patriot Quarterback Ray McKenna completed 18 of 29 for 202 yards with two interceptions and a 50 yard bomb to Fred Knechtel for a touchdown.

RPI got on the scoreboard first on a 10-yard bootleg run by quarterback Wood. RPI converted the extra point on Patria's kick. Later in the first quarter, SB's Jorge Taylor romped into the end zone on a seven-yard run. Mike Quirk's extra point made the score even at seven.

Just eight seconds into the second quarter, McKenna unloaded his only touchdown of the game, a 50 yarder to Fred Knechtel. Quirk followed the the extra point to put the Patriots ahead 14-7. RPI scored with 1:08 remaining the half on a Wild to Bruhn 19-yard pass, the kick was so good and the Patriots held a 14-13 halftime lead.

RPI took the lead in this see-saw game in the third quarter when Patria, who plays both running back and placekicker, scored on a four-yard pass. The attempt at two-point conversion failed, making the score 19-14 in favor of RPI.

In the fourth quarter the Patriots defense took charge. Blitzing Safety Rich Valdes tackled Wood in the end zone for a safety, putting the score at 19-16. Later on in the quarter Chris Clay intercepted an RPI pass at the Stony Brook 24-yard line. The Patriots then began a nine-play, 76 yard touchdown drive, capped by a one-yard run and a Mike "Thunderfoot" Quirk conversion, leaving the final score 23-19 in favor of Stony Brook.

Patriot Ray McKenna had a good outing as quarterback, but he also had an equally good outing as punter. McKenna had seven attempts, averaging 41 yards per kick, with the longest being a 64 yarder.

Stony Brook had 19 first downs, 133 yards on the ground and 202 in the air for a total of 335 yards on the afternoon. RPI matched SB with 19 first downs, they had 252 rushing (Patria with 22 rushers for 99 yards) and 100 yards in the air. RPI committed five fumbles losing three of them.

Stony Brook is home next week to face Division III Trenton State in their first home Division III game.
