U Police Will Carry Guns

In a surprise move late last night, the SUNY Board of Trustees approved a plan which would allow University Police officers to carry guns while on the job.

The decision was the culmination of months of work—starting with a proposal by the university's Task Force on Campus Safety and ending with the Trustee's decision.

"Finally, we will be able to protect this campus adequately," said Public Safety Director Gary Barnes. Barnes cited, in support of his claim, the recent incident in which a student allegedly shot at a University Police car with a pellet gun. Officers are instructed to stay away from the scene when a weapon is involved. "If we don't have guns," Barnes said, "how can the officers stand up for law and order and live to tell about it? Those guys [in the pellet gun incident] looked like sissies!"

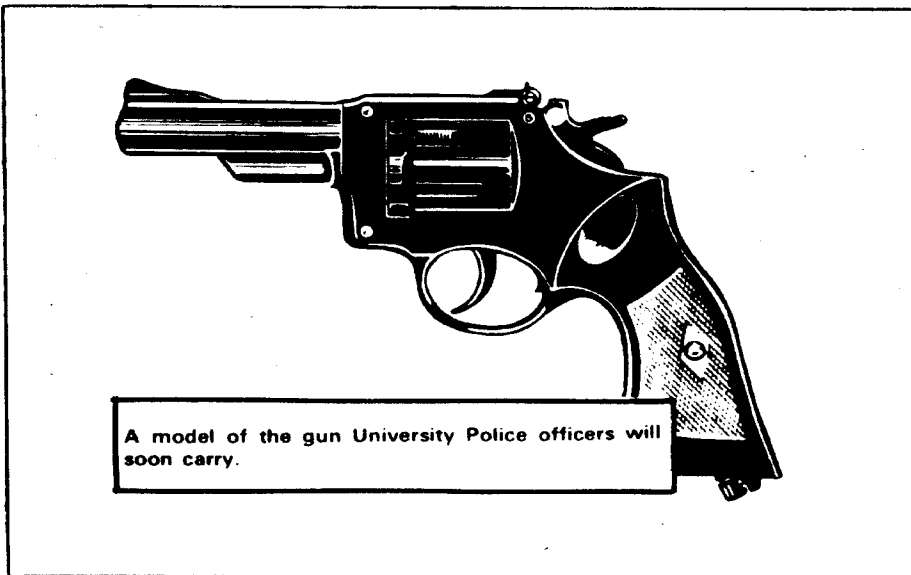

A community relations officer in the department, who requested anonymity, was the only member of the department who opposed the decision. "The thought of a shoot-out on campus frightens me," he said. "We'll have to replace so many broken windows; shot-at cars will have to be refinished and repainted; I'll have to become religious again; we'll need a line item in our budget for gun cleaners, bullets and holsters (to go with our nifty hats)...and then there are the dead bodies..."

The decision for officers to carry guns began with a month-long investigation by the university's Task Force on Campus Safety. The task force's report, including opening remarks by Barnes, was submitted to Fred Preston, vice-president for Student Affairs, and Bob Francis, vice-president for Campus Operations. Both Preston and Francis, who were out of the country on an Admin Brothers World Tour, could not approve the report. A work-study student, who was delivering mail to Preston's office, approved the report himself and stormed into University President John Marburger's office with a gun.

A week later, the Stony Brook Council received the report (with Marburger's signature on it). No one knows what transpired between the confrontation and receipt of the report by the Council. Marburger's office declined comment; the alleged work-study student, who intelligently requested anonymity, would only say "we need guns on this campus in responsible hands, don't we?"

The Council, not wanting to get involved, sent the report up to Albany. "It'll probably get lost in the mail," said a student Council member.

The Trustees have ordered that wide-barrelled guns and high-power rifles be delivered to the Stony Brook campus immediately.

In an attempt to quell concern over the danger of using guns, Barnes said, "Don't worry. The officers will carry guns but they will not be permitted to fire them. I intend on holding onto the bullets in my desk drawer." One officer, who requested anonymity, said he knew of a "surefire" (ha-ha) way to beat the system. "I'll just go out and buy some bullets," he said.

Barnes said he is confident the decision was a smart one. "Guns will make for a safe campus; if used by trained officers, there's no need for concern. After all, I used to work at Kent State and we never had trouble with

Psych Dept Protest Silverstein Tenure Reversal

By John Burkhardt

Nineteen faculty from the psychology department held a demonstration in the Administration building Wednesday to protest the Personnel Policy Committee (PPS) recommendation that Assistant Professor Brett Silverstein be granted tenure even though the psychology department voted against him.

Brett Silverstein

Statesman Sunil Matta

According to Professor Marvin Levine, the faculty were holding their regular weekly meeting, when, at about 4:30 PM, someone telephoned and said that the PPC had just decided to overrule them. "We were furious," Levine said, "We don't like to bust our backs for years running an academic department only to be told that our opinions aren't worth anything."

Arnold Feingold, chairman of the PPC, admitted that he had never seen the committee overrule any department's recommendation before, but said the psychology faculty shouldn't take it personally. "It was just a misunderstanding," he said. "They clearly underestimated Brett Silverstein's value to the university community."

The psychology faculty, who were unable to locate the PPC's meeting room, went to the administration building and rallied outside Provost Homer Neal's office, chanting slogans and telling passers-by that "We're not going to stand for being ignored."

Silverstein showed up after a few minutes and briefly addressed the group, beginning with the same words he spoke at a demonstration in his favor three weeks ago. "I wasn't going to show up at this," he said. "I didn't think it'd be proper. But finally, I just said, 'What the hell, what am I going to say when I'm 50. I never went to my own demonstration?' I just had to show up."

"Last month I thanked everybody for showing up," he continued. "I guess I don't have to tell you I'm not grateful today." Silverstein growled, making faces at the other faculty and sticking his tongue out at them.

The demonstrators—several of whom later said Silverstein's remarks and the faces he made were inadequate as a scholarly contribution to the demonstration—immediately voted to deny Silverstein the podium. Silverstein, Psychology Professor Dana Brammel and Associate Professor Ronald Friend immediately protested the decision and demanded reasons why, but the other faculty refused to answer, saying that the decision process was confidential and that it would not be proper for them to discuss it. Several were willing to talk about it privately afterward, though. "Were running a prestigious demonstration here, and Silverstein will have to perform like the rest of us if he wants to have his say," said one professor, who wanted her name withheld.

The department chairman, who also requested that his name not be used, said that in sticking his tongue out, Silverstein only vaguely followed the tenets of mainstream psychology, and added "I'm sick of his pinko talk anyway."

Silverstein, Brammel and Friend then set up a counter-demonstration and were immediately joined by Mitch Cohen, a member of the Red Balloon Collective, who deserted the other protest. Cohen, who was also one of the organizers of the demonstration in favor of Silverstein last month, said he had totally opposed Wednesday's faculty demonstration from the start. A former student who has been on campus since the early Vietnam-era, Cohen said he joined the demonstration because he loves protests and hasn't been able to get enough since the 60s ended.

1983-85 Undergraduate Bulletin Distribution

The 1983-85 Undergraduate Bulletin will be distributed on campus starting on April 4 to freshmen, sophomores, juniors, and first-semester seniors.

Distribution for commuting students will take place in the Orientation Office, Room 102, Humanities Building, 9:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. from April 4 through 22, and 9:00 a.m. to 11:00 a.m. from April 25 through May 12. Each student will be given one copy upon showing his or her I.D.

Resident students on the Main Campus will receive their copies at their quad offices when they pick up their housing applications, beginning April 4. Residents of Stage XVI will pick up their copies in the Complex Office.

Students registered in the Undergraduate Evening Program may pick up their copies on Monday through Thursday evenings between 5:30 p.m. and 7:30 p.m., from April 4 through May 12, in the CED Office, Room N-201, Social and Behavioral Sciences Building. They also must show I.D.'s.

After May 12 the 1983-85 Undergraduate Bulletin will no longer be available free to continuing students. After that date it will be sold for $2.00. Further information about buying the Bulletin will be available from the University Publications Office.

Stony Brook Student Achieves Unaided Flight

By Jim Shorts

"It's an achievement that will finally put Stony Brook on the map...in the class of the truly great institutions of our day. It's real good." This is what President John Marburger had to say about the event of that day, the event in which a Stony Brook student maintained flight for about 30 seconds, considered the greatest scientific and technological achievement since the invention of the Atari Video Game System by many noted scientists here.

"I've been experimenting with the idea for over a year now; but before today I hadn't quite gotten the arm motions synchronized," said Cleft Wright, a super-senior religious studies major, of his achievement. "How do I feel? Well, when I forget about my chronically red belly from a year of failure I'm on cloud nine....After a lifetime of poverty I finally have done something for mankind...for the advancement of science...for myself...and for my mom." Wright added that his Moonie faith was an added inspiration in his quest for higher altitudes.

Stony Brook's scientific power elite seemed shocked, to say the least. Distinguished Pompous Professor Emeritus of Physics, Pan Am Yang Ying, said, "Was velly fine," and smiled broadly.

Polity officials were inspired as well. When sought for their thoughts on the occurrence, President Adina Finkelstein and Treasurer Belina Anderson were seen at the top of the Student Union flapping their arms frantically, but to no apparent avail. However, Statesman Editor-in-Chief Glenn Taverna was seen urging them to run off the edge of the building to attain a stronger undercurrent.

When asked why he didn't partake in the proposed migration, Secretary Barry Ritholtz said, "Flight? Man, I've flown....I've soared with the eagles." Executive Director Robin Rabii said it was the most ridiculous thing he had ever seen and that he was going to suggest to the Polity Council that flight be banned among its members.

'Small' Things Come in 'Little' Packages, No?

By Bob Wire

Noticing the trend towards last names synonymous with 'small' and citing reasons such as, "I just wanted to be like one of the boys," Public Safety Director Gary (U.S.) Barnes has decided to change his last name to "Trivial."

Barnes, a.k.a. Trivial, said that he was struck by the idea walking around his office one day. "It was amazing. One day after dictating an hour long speech to Assistant Director Herb Petty and Community Relations officer Doug Little on the new commuter care registration plan, I woke them up and we discovered together that their names were synonymous with small." That day, he said, on his short lunch break he drove a blazer down to Barnes and Noble bookstore and bought a thesaurus. He immediately turned to the word "small" and adopted the name that best suited him,

"Trivial."

Barnes and Noble had no comment on whether the name change would affect them.

The change of his name is only a tiny part of a major change he hopes to implement in the department. Trivial said he will advise all his officers to change their names to something synonymous with small, or at least adopt one for office use. He has made a list of the officers' options, including: Trifling, Minute, Modest, Unpretentious, and Of-low-or-minor-status.

The new names will also be used for their campus duties. "We're making up a bunch of new name tags for the officers to wear on their Dudley Do-rights, uh, I mean trooper hats. They'll be water-proof, too, so they don't have to cover them with plastic when it rains,"

Trivial said.

The concept of the small synonyms was egged on by high level officials in administration too. "The people on the floors above ours in the administration building noticed how low our offices were to the ground," Petty said, and was immediately patted on the back by Trivial.

They were also pushing for the name change because it reflected the department well. "It gives the public an understanding of the small size of our....responsibilities—you know, with the students being so good lately and staying out of trouble," Trivial said.

No one would confirm nor deny the rumour that fourth floor resident Provost Homer Neal was considering changing his name to Homer Nealing-and-I-still-have-to-bend-down-to-get-through-my-office-door.

Polity to Deal Drugs

By Quay Lude

The Polity Senate Monday approved a plan sponsored by Secretary Barry Ritholtz to raise funds for the organization's dwindling reserve fund. As of the Fall 1983 semester, Polity will be dealing drugs.

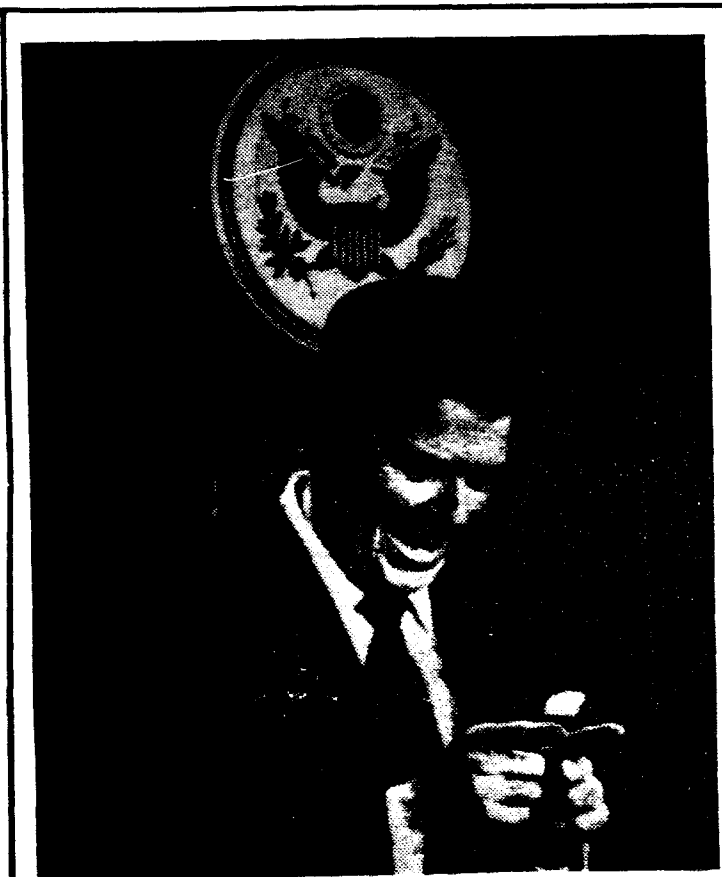

After the meeting Ritholtz, who had just returned from y'know?"

considering proposals from various marijuana disbursement firms, said, "I think that...um...I mean...well...uh...what was the question again?" He looked thoughtfully into his coffee cup, and then said, "Hey, check this out, man. All the grounds are going around in, like, a circle, y'know?"

Ritholtz then ate half of a large Domino's pizza, drank four Pepsis, and fell asleep on the couch, exhausted by his efforts on behalf of the student body.

In other actions, the Polity Senate voted to expand its policy of requiring all organizations connected with the student government to adopt "Polity" into their names. In addition to the already-accepted "Polity SAB" and "Polity Ambulance Corps," we will have serving us such organizations as the "Polity Hospital," the "Polity Press," and the student government itself will change its name to "Polity Polity."

Under the new nomenclature, the Council members will have their names legally changed. President Adina Finkelstein will become "Adina Polity." Vice-President David Gamberg will become "David Polity." Secretary Barry Ritholtz will become "Barry Polity" and acting treasurer and Sophomore Representative Belina Anderson will become "Belina Polity." Anderson also said that she will soon be running for school mascot.

Last week House Speaker Thomas P. (Tip) O'Neill said that Ronald Reagan "is the biggest prick in Washington." When asked to respond the President stayed silent, but held his index fingers two and a half inches apart saying, "I think that Nancy will verify this."

A plan sponsored by Polity Secretary Barry Ritholtz to raise funds for the organization will involve the dealing of drugs. Isn't he ugly?

Question: Do you always reach orgasm?

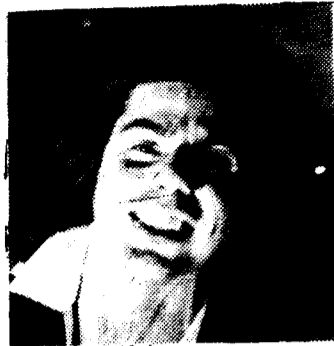

Where asked: In the back seat of Dave's car.

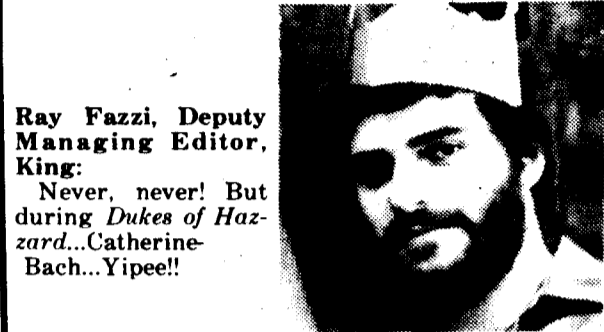

Alan Golnick, Arts Director, Junior:
The last time was when my pin-up poster of Lynda Carter fell off my wall and onto my face.

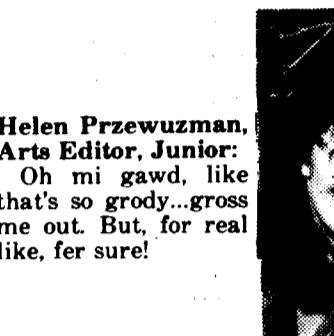

Nancy A. DiFranco, News Editor:
Only when I read D.H. Lawrence.

John Burkhardt, Managing Editor, Senior:
Every time someone asks.

Ray Fazzi, Deputy Managing Editor, King:
Never, never! But during Dukes of Hazard...Catherine-Bach...Yipee!!

Helen Przewuzman, Arts Editor, Junior:
Oh mi gawd, like that's so grody...gross me out. But, for real like, fer sure!

Only when I'm having sex.

Only when in a dark room with a 200mm macro-zoom.

Kenny Rockwell, Photo Editor, Junior:
Yeah, especially if I've got a new jar of Vaseline, and a plastic bag to put my head in.

Geoffrey Reiss, Sports Director, Career Undergraduate:
Only in groups of one.

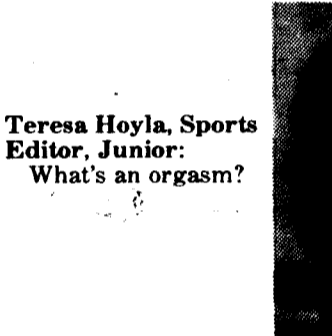

Glenn Taverna, Editor-in-Chief, Junior, President of 'I Love Barry Ritholtz Fan Club':
No, sometimes the phone is busy.

Silvana Darini, Assistant Sports Editor, Senior:
Sure, the gym has great sports equipment, and there's Rebel....

Once I tried, but my arms were too short!! Maybe if Brooke Shields....

Teresa Hoyla, Sports Editor, Junior:
What's an orgasm?

Anthony Detres, Graphics Editor, Senior:
Wait...uh...Give me a few minutes. I'll come up with an honest answer.

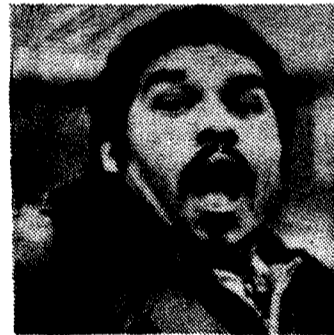

Barry Mione, Sports Editor, Freshman:
Ask my fellow hall-mates on James D-1. They know.

Donna Gross, Assistant News Editor, Junior:
No, but I'm usually nice enough to fake it.

Pete Pettingill, News Editor:
What's an orgasm?

Nancy Damsky, Business Manager, Senior:
Only when fantasizing about Lew Levy.

Mark Neston, Arts Editor, Freshman:
Only when bound securely to a bed of nails while being flogged and whipped by an entire tribe of Amazonian Warriors, none of which is under 6'5".

Elizabeth Wasserman, News Director, Sophomore:
Can virgins do that?

Doctor Ruth, Counselor:
Ov course! But only with the use of contraceptives.

I Was A Teenage Conformist

By Geoffrey Reiss

It's amazing how attitudes can change over time. I remember the fall of 1969 when I was a first semester freshman at Stony Brook—what a different world we lived in. Today's students wouldn't even recognize the campus I knew then. Aside from the sheer physical differences, prevalent attitudes were also remarkably unlike those of today.

You see in the fall of 1969 the anti-war movement was in full swing and waves of feminism began to sweep across the nation. For the first time in American history young people questioned their government's legitimacy.

I was alone in a vast wilderness of hippies, drug using freaks, mal-contents and revolutionaries. I was constantly being criticized for the way I dressed and for the length of my hair. I was frequently singled out and ridiculed by my fellow students—for I was a teenage conformist.

At a time when I should have been happiest I was miserable. After all, Richard Nixon was in the White House and America was finally making progress stemming the red tide in Vietnam—but somehow I didn't feel fulfilled.

I remember handing out leaflets that we had written at our chapter of the Young Republican Club and being harassed by the student government officials. I was dragged before the H Quad Student Judiciary and ordered to let my hair grow. Mid-way through that session the members of the judiciary began rioting over what color placards they were going to use at the rally they were planning and I escaped through a back door and avoided further persecution.

I often wondered if I was the only kid on campus perfectly willing to accept whatever my government wanted me to. I thought that I couldn't be alone in embracing traditional Christian-American values. Yet as I walked around campus it was soon obvious that in a strange way I was a non-conformist. Because that question would have required a lot of thought on my part I quickly dropped it, besides I was late for my ROTC meeting.

Pressures were just as strong from my parents. My folks were members of a trendy clique that considered themselves to be open-minded and liberal. (They were all Humphrey supporters in '68—need I say more?) I can still hear my mother scolding me, "I don't understand why you insist on taking your studies so seriously. Edna Brazel's son Eric is marching on Washington today and you're home studying." My parents couldn't understand that my duty to society wasn't to tear apart our moral structure. The greatest contribution I could make to America was by getting my engineering degree and join the technological workforce that put in overtime keeping the United States number one in the world. It wasn't always easy being called a fascist by my parents and their friends.

Cultural tastes were so different then too. I don't think I'll ever forget the pit I felt in my gut when I returned to my triple one night to discover my Norman Rockwell calendar had been burned by my roommates. Not only that, but my record collection (which had some really nifty Bobby Sherman albums) was also destroyed. My copy of President Nixon's great book Six Crises had been ripped apart. To my complete horror one of my buddies urinated in my penny loafers.

Slowly but surely I began making contacts with others who had similar points of view. It wasn't easy to get together because we frequently had to meet in secret. In the spring of 1970 we formed a better dead than red club. The university repeatedly denied any connection between our organization and the views of the campus community. I have come to expect nothing less from a bunch of leftwing ivory tower dwellers.

As I look back at those years warm feelings of "happy-go-lucky days gone by" don't flash through my mind. I was a troubled person living in a troubled world. Looking at Stony Brook today I realize that I lived 10 years before my time. Conformity and acceptance are the rule again and thank God we are finally understanding that communism, protest and homosexuality are all eating away at the moral fiber of our society.

It warms my heart to see such an abundance of success-minded students at a major university who are enthusiastic to outcast any peer who doesn't tow the line.

The young people today are just beginning to see that all John Wayne stood for wasn't so bad after all. I guess at least at Stony Brook I am seen as a bit of a cult hero, but I don't mind because I am proud to say that I survived one of the most tumultuous periods of history. I can thank my never dying conformity for that.

Admin to Air Dirty Laundry

By Kenny Rockwell

Perhaps you've been wondering why these two towers have been erected; one by the administration building, the other between the Old Chem and Bio buildings. Well, so have the people who've built them. Apparently the university had some extra money it was in danger of not wasting, so the towers were suggested and subsequently built. Now administration is deciding whether they should be used to string the world's longest clothesline—making it an attraction to help lure new students to Stony Brook, or possibly a cable car system which would help whisk students from one area of campus to another. Some have suggested that it is part of an elaborate system devised by one student, Kenny Rockwell, to defraud the present phone company by providing foreign students with a cheap alternative for phoning home. If anyone has any constructive ideas please send them to the Suffolk County Department of Sanitation, Lakeville Road Incineration Plant.

U Police Goes Undercover To Nab SB Sluts

By Syd Onmee

In an effort to curtail the recent wave of prostitution on campus, University Police has implemented an undercover task force with its officers as bait, Community Relations officer Doug Little said.

"Reported prostitution at Stony Brook has risen 300 percent in the last month," Little said. "Professors and students are propositioned on their way to class. In the Student Union. In the Fine Arts Center. A particularly hot spot seems to be the library. We've had reports of librarians who are actually prostitutes dressed in K-Mart drag stalking the stacks.

"Some of the confrontations have been downright bizarre," Little said. "Just yesterday, a woman came up to one of my men in the Administration building and asked if she could see his instrument. He said he was sorry, but University Police officers don't carry guns. [In a recent development, though, the officers have been granted guns— see related story on page 1.] 'try the sixth precinct in Coram,' he told her."

Little said the all-male task force begins rounds today hoping to get "picked up." The university has been divided into four quadrants, he said, with an undisclosed number of plain clothes officers assigned beats in addition to the department's regular patrol.

"All one of these tramps has to do is try and hit on an undercover officer," Little said. "He'll slap the cuffs on her and haul her down to headquarters. Believe me, she'll find the experience arresting."

While Little declined to speculate who or what is behind Stony Brook's prostitution renaissance, a key University Police official said the notorious Purina sisters — Adina, Belina and Farina — are prime suspects. "These three are wanted by the FBI in 36 states for an array of sordid endeavors," the official said. "In California, they infiltrated the student government at UCLA where they extorted activity money to fuel a black market baby-selling ring. They are wanted in other states for insurance fraud, bigamy, prostitution, writing bad checks and impersonating nuns. Once detected, they always manage a quick escape. Not one of them has been caught in 11 years."

Advanced Credit Program for 1983-84

Our Master of Science degree, which normally requires two years in residence and 48 graduate credit hours, can be earned in one year by students who:

- will have completed the requirements for a graduate or professional degree in any department of the State University of New York at Stony Brook by August 1983;
- complete 30 graduate credit hours in the Harriman college in fall and spring semesters 1983-84;
- complete a paid summer internship in 1984 in a government or non-profit organization.

The purpose of this program is to enhance the analytic and managerial skills of students specializing in a particular academic or professional discipline, thereby opening new opportunities for employment in the public and non-profit sectors.

Take A Good Book to Bed

Now that the end of the year is almost here, a survey by the Office of Student Affairs has found that a majority of the Class of 1986— "at least 50 percent," according to one spokesperson from that office— are still virgins and that many of the other half "have not enjoyed themselves to the fullest extent." Well, in an attempt to help those who haven't enjoyed themselves (either by still being virginal or non-orgasmic), the university will begin including Alex Comfort's The Joy of Sex in freshman orientation packets.

The book was published almost a decade ago with the intent to 'free' people from their sexual inhibitions; the intent still holds. However in Comfort's ideology— based on the need for love as an important part of the relationship— one must try and imagine love being a part of all campus sexual encounters. How many Thursday and Friday night couples are seen "the morning after" at Pancake Cottage struggling just to make casual conversation.

Past Is Seedy for Bob the VP

Bob Francis gazed out the window of his office in the Administration building and uttered a sigh of discontent. "I'll always miss my rowdy childhood in Iowa. Stony Brook takes some getting used to."

Stony Brook's vice-president for Campus Operations has come a long way since his birth in the high corn fields in 1954. "Bob was always a womanizer," his mother, Luella, said. "Always had six or seven girlfriends at the same time. That's what broke up his first marriage. He wanted to get the girls' attention."

Mrs. Francis said her son posed for several women's magazines in the early '70s. "You name the magazine, he's been on the cover. Farmgirl, Plane and Field, The Wheatie, The Corn Flake. They sold well. And why not? My Bobby, he's a real looker. And built, too. The 'Ken Doll' appeal is what one editor called it."

"Those magazine spreads of Bobby's brought in good money, especially when we had those bad corn harvests on the farm," Mrs. Francis continued. "Those were the happiest days of his life if you ask me. Everything was going fine until he met that singer." Mrs. Francis is referring to Connie Selleka, the recording and film star her son married in 1974. His bride took the stage name Connie Francis and they moved to California so she could further her career and he could break into modeling. But one July night, while Francis was tucked away in a Las Vegas motel with a blonde and his wife was headlining at the MGM Grand, their love bubble burst.

Connie was having a late dinner at Howard Johnson's after an evening's performance. But her all-you-can-eat for $3.99 fish fry dinner turned to terror when she choked on a Herring bone and lapsed into a coma.

She was hospitalized for almost a year, then sued the restaurant and was awarded $2 million in damages.

Francis, meanwhile, established himself as a top Los Angeles model and sued Connie for divorce, citing "irreconcilable differences." They parted in 1976, then Francis married "10" actress Bo Derek, the blonde in the Las Vegas motel two years earlier. Their marriage turned out to be anything but a "10," Derek alleging that Francis was an alcoholic, physically abused her and had an affair with The Falulous Moolah, a women's wrestling champion. Derek and Francis were divorced in 1980.

"After that I decided my life needed stability," Francis said. "So I came east looking for a job as a vice-president for Campus Operations at a major university."

He met Roxie Tilton, a New York model, in 1981, and they married the following year when Francis was chosen over 2,000 other applicants for his position. "Now I have everything," he said. "A loving wife, a comfortable home and a good job. I'm amazed at where I am today. After all, I only had one year of modeling school."

Every once in a while, Francis says, he sees an attractive woman that takes him back to Iowa. "There's this well-stacked redhead, and does she...well, forget it. If I want to remember Iowa, Roxie and I usually just have some wine. Those were my vintage years."

Meet the Beatles

The Beatles
Banana

by Mark A. Weston

Who the hell do these kids think they are? In today's music scene, it seems, anybody out of England can start a band and rack in millions. Even untalented inept musicians like these insects of the human race who call themselves accordingly: The Beatles. With the release of their debut album Meet The Beatles, The Beatles have proven that almost any trash sells.

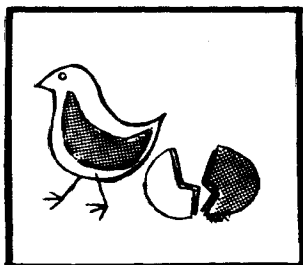

Songwriters John Lennon and Paul McCartney combine their talent (HA!) in a 12-song piece of shit that you shouldn't take the risk of damaging your phonograph needle on.

Songs like "I Wanna Hold Your Hand," "I Saw Her Standing There," "This Boy," "Little Child," "I Want to Be Your Man" and "Hold Me Tight," show the listener what a bunch of assholes these wimps really are. They can't decide if they're heterosexuals, homosexuals, pedophiliacs or just plain sexual deviants in general. Give me a break! This drivel leaves you feeling like you're knee-deep in mud; slowly sinking. After a listen to this, quicksand just might be a welcome sight.

Just because these chaps are from England (Liverpool no less) they think they can automatically sell their product. Keep dreaming, you bloody twits!

Who wants to listen to an LP nowadays? EP's baby— that's where it's at! Get with it! Feed us this a little at a time. This senseless garbage kinda makes you wanna puke.

The Partridge Family
Anal Records

At long last there is now a group that tells it like it is. The Partridge Family. You got it, the seemingly innocent little cutie pies cut through all that sugar and spice bullshit and released an album full of pure unadulterated red-hot steamy sex. Although the average listener may not realize the pure meaning of the songs, (some people wouldn't see it if it hit them in the face) nonetheless it's still there.

David Cassidy, the heart throb that plays Keith on the hit show, and lead vocalist of the group, belts out such songs as "I Woke Up In Love This Morning," "One Night Stand," and "24 Hours A Day." These songs describe what it's like waking up after an all-night, action-packed escapade of wild, kinky, raucous SEX. Twenty-four hours— whew! Dave must be Superman. Even I can't keep it up for 24 hours! It's no wonder he sings "Love Is All I Ever Need." Most people need oxygen.

Let's not forget about mom and Laurie (Shirley Jones and Susan Dey.)

These broads are often the subjects of these masterpieces. Oh heaven! Incest— I love it!

Today's audience needs this kind of action. The Partridges are just the guys to do it.

Polity Secretary Barry Ritholtz was such a smash last week at Tokyo Joe's with his one-man exotic dance review that he'll be back tonight for another show. Tickets were still available yesterday, so, girls, better catch Barry while you can. Student Activities Board (SAB) officials said next week it will be Dr. Veal and the Pork Chops.

Before We Put You In Charge Of The World's Most Sophisticated Nuclear Equipment, We Put You Through The World's Most Sophisticated Nuclear Training.

It takes more than 16 months of intensive training to become a fully qualified officer in the Nuclear Navy. You begin with four months of leadership training. Then as a Navy officer you get a full year of graduate-level training unavailable anywhere else at any price.

Navy training is based on more than 1900 reactor-years of experience. Right now the Navy operates over half the nuclear reactors in America. And the Navy's nuclear equipment is the most sophisticated in the world. That's why your Navy training is and must be the most sophisticated in the world.

As an officer in the Nuclear Navy, you have decision-making authority immediately. You get important management responsibility fast. Because in the Navy, as your knowledge grows, so does your responsibility.

Your training and experience place you among the country's most qualified professionals. (No surprise that most of the men who operate the reactors in private industry started in the Nuclear Navy.)

It takes more time and more effort to become an officer in the Nuclear Navy. But the rewards are greater, too.

The rewards can begin as early as your junior year in college. Qualify, and the Navy will pay you approximately $1000/month while you finish school.

After four years, with regular promotions and salary increases, you can be earning as much as $37,400. That's on top of a benefits package that includes medical and dental care, and 30 days' vacation earned every year. More responsibility, more money, more future. So, if you're majoring in math, engineering or the physical sciences, and you want to know more about a future in nuclear power, fill in the coupon.

Today's Nuclear Navy is an opportunity like no other in the world.

Polity Wizard - A Monkey's Uncle

If you saw The Wizard of Oz on TV last month, you were no doubt enchanted by following the yellow brick road to the magic of Oz with Dorothy, the Tin Man, Scarecrow, cowardly Lion, Wicked Witch and her evil Flying Monkeys. But did you know that a high-ranking Polity official was in the 1939 classic film?

Low Levy — former Polity Executive Director, rye bread tycoon and child actor — played one of the Wicked Witch's (Margaret Hamilton) menacing monkeys when he was six years old. "It was my first role, and my last," Levy, now an administrative associate at SUNY Oswego, said. "I had several things going for me. I needed little make-up, and I was just the right size. After all, many actors in The Wizard of Oz, most notably those who played Munchkins, were children."

Levy said getting the role was a matter of being in the right place at the right time. "When I was young, I had a habit of scratching myself and peeling bananas with my feet. The movie's casting director spotted me and shouted, 'That face! I've got to have that face!' Luckily, I was wolfing down a banana at the time.

"I had a terrible time learning to fly," Levy recalls. "Especially with Toto (Dorothy's dog) clenched between my teeth. A couple of times during rehearsal, I dropped him in mid-air."

Although he said it was "a thrill" being in the movie, Levy has turned down countless movie and television offers since then to devote his life to politics. "It's a way for me to do something for society, to help people. Besides, all the offers I get are to play monkeys. For years, Universal was after me to play Cheetah in the Tarzan movies. And NBC wanted me to play Greg Evigan's chimp in BJ and the Bear. They figured I would be easier to train than an ape. But I refuse to be type cast. Perhaps if the right role came along, I would be interested. Nobody is going to make a monkey out of me."

Crawford: Screen's Queen Bitch

It would be paying Joan Crawford a great compliment to call her a bitch. For she is not simply a woman turned sour by divorce, the death of her younger daughter and the constant state of war she is engaged in with her older daughter Veda in Mildred Pierce. Crawford in the title role is an Absolute Bitch: even when she tries for affection, which isn't very often, that cold, nasty mannerism of hers creeps through. Crawford is doing more than acting. She has little personality to create because that energy, that fierce power seems to evolve naturally from her. "Mildred Pierce" quite probably will be her ultimate acting triumph. She is a personality all her own, larger than life and in the final analysis, a marvel to behold.

In the screen adaption of James Cain's novel, Crawford plays a woman who makes success the hard way, building a chain of restaurants known as Mildred's literally from nothing. She tries to buy Veda's love, showering her with gifts and eventually marries a socially prominent parasite (Zachary Scott) just so she and her daughter can have "the good life."

But Veda (Ann Blyth) is an ungrateful crumb. Early in her struggle for material wealth, Mildred works as a waitress during the day and bakes pies as a side line in her home at night to earn the money to pay for her daughter's piano lessons and buy her nice clothes. One day a package arrives in the mail for Veda. It is a fancy dress that her mother has waited on tables and baked pies to be able to afford to buy her. Modeling it in front of a mirror, Veda remarks, "It's very cheap material. I wouldn't be seen dead wearing it."

Veda's reign of terror, which includes lying to her mother about being pregnant in order to collect a larger divorce settlement after a brief marriage, leads to a mother-daughter confrontation that lets Mildred know exactly where she stands. Shocked that her daughter would lie for money, Mildred asks, "Money is all you care about, isn't it, Veda? What can that check give you that I can't?"

"Do you really want to know?" Veda asks. "With this money I can get away from you. With your stinking greasy kitchens and your knives and forks. All right, mother, so now you know."

"Veda!" That's about all troubled Mildred can take. She's given her daughter everything — clothing, furs, jewels and even a car for her eighteenth birthday, and all Veda wants to do is get away from her. Mildred's reaction is Crawford at her best.

"Veda! Give me that check," she says.

"Not on your life...." Veda snaps.

"I said hand it over!" Mildred commands, as she grabs the check from her daughter and tears it to shreds.

Somewhat bewildered after Veda smacks her across the face, Mildred tells her daughter, "Veda! Get out. Pack your things before I throw them on the street and you with them. Veda, get out of here before I kill you!"

Crawford rattles off that scene with such ease, such pure hate that she is bound to win an Oscar for "Mildred Pierce." Ann Blyth as Veda sinks her teeth into her role as well, but her despicable actions make her more of a monster as compared to her domineering mother. Both ladies are deviations from what is commonly considered humanity, but the character of Veda is slightly less credible because of the unlikelihood of ever encountering such a number in reality. She is also less intriguing than Mildred because Veda can explain her behavior by being the product of a bitch. But what motivates Mildred to give so much to her daughter when she gets so little in return? That is the mystery of Mildred. Not that she is run-of-the-mill herself, but less overblown and carried away than Veda. Can you imagine running into either in the supermarket? "Give me that cents-off coupon. I said hand it over."

While "Mildred Pierce" is built mainly on confrontations, the screen version adds a murder-mystery twist not found in the novel. After Mildred comes crawling back to Veda, literally, Veda becomes so chummy with her mother's second husband that she believes he will divorce Mildred and marry her. When he tells her "no," a new word for Veda, she, being Veda, shoots him to death.

In a last-ditch effort to win Veda, Mildred tries to cover up her daughter's shame by confessing to the police that it was she, not Veda, who pulled the trigger. Do you believe that Mildred is still looking out for that rat Veda? Is it motherly love? The police don't believe Mildred for a minute.

Joan Crawford is holding on to something in "Mildred Pierce." She desperately wants the love of her daughter at any cost. Could it be that "Mildred Pierce" is the story of Crawford's life, and that is why she is so believable? Crawford has been unable to bear children and has adopted. It's been rumored that her relationship with her adopted daughters is much like that between Mildred and Veda. "Mildred Pierce" quite possibly could be Crawford living out her frustrated life on the screen. Poor Joan.

It's difficult to be moved emotionally by the stormy saga of the two bitches, Mildred and Veda. You will probably want to spit in Veda's face and throw Mildred off a cliff. But you will also be startled by the awesome presence of the great Joan Crawford. When she tells Veda to get out of the house or "...I'll kill you," remember one thing: Joan Crawford is just the woman who could do it.

Is There Life After Funerals?

by John Burkhardt

Fashions, hobbies like hot-tubs, roller-skating and jogging come and go all the time, but a handful of human pursuits always remain popular. For example, although almost no one does it a second time, everyone dies sooner or later. Unfortunately, like every other human pursuit, death is subject to the high cost of living. Just ask anyone who's priced funerals lately.

Finally, though, there's an alternative. If you've died recently, plan to in the in the near future, or just can't resist a bargain, check out Long Island's first drive-in, self-service mortuary. Designed for quick service, Fallow's Stiff-Stoppe is conveniently located at the intersection of Route 110 and Bagatelle Road in Melville. Stiffs are welcomed from 9-5 on weekdays, and leave in the next morning's trash.

A quick tour of the shop in advance shows you exactly what you'll be getting. And, by the way, it's not much. The Fallows ask their customers to first have a complete memorial service elsewhere, so all they offer is cheap, discreet disposal in a serviceable coffin (Glad, Hefty or the ever-popular No Frills Brand.) If you know where to get the services at a good price you're not offended by their methods, it's the only place to go. They don't offer embalming, but say that their clients can take care of this themselves by eating heavily for a few days and reading all the labels to make sure they ingest lots of BHA and BHT.

The Fallows say disposal ala the trash-man is the cheapest way to go, and that headstones and gravesites are simply impossible to offer at a savings. They recognize, however, the need some people have for a physical memento of the occasion, so the Stiff-Stoppe will soon feature a crematorium and offer a line of empty peanut butter jars suitable for storing ashes.

As an introductory offer, stiffs can get two cremations for the price of one the first weekend just by saying "Broiling Beats Frying."

I don't recommend using it, though, because they plan to run the crematorium off old engine oil, so it'll probably be impossible to roast a good marshmallow.

Become A Chef of Gourmet Sex

The book classifies itself as a "gourmet guide to love making;" if it were a cookbook, boy would its users be satisfied. Let's begin with the first section, appropriately entitled "Starters." It discusses the basic ingredients. Basically, that includes an able-bodied man and woman.

It also dispenses with a few myths. Ever hear the old joke that women have trouble judging distances? It's because they are always being told that six inches are 12. Sorry guys...bigger is not always better. Comfort writes, "Smaller ones work equally well in most positions." The same goes for women too.

Ever hear a man brag that "he just went on and on all night?" Hal "Multiple orgasm comes easily to many if not all women...With men it's more complicated...Some can do it daily (multiple orgasms). Others can't get a second erection..." Comfort clarifies.

The next section, called "Main Courses" tells what could be done with the basic equipment. With the baseball game of sex play, stealing second and third bases includes a lot of handwork. For this example, Comfort writes, "In mutual sex good handwork is never superseded. A couple who can masturbate each other really skillfully can do anything else they like." (He also writes, "a good mouth kiss leaves its recipient breathless, but not asphyxiated." Remember that!)

positions have been classified? "Couples often start by trying the lot, but nearly inevitably end up with one or two, going back to the book for special occasions," Comfort elaborates. One problem—most positions require the active use of both hands. As a result, they can't be done because one must hold the manual to keep checking the step by step instructions.

"Sauces and Pickles" is the book's section for such special occasions. Boy, it's amazing what can be done with a big toe (and you thought a vibrator would do the trick), ice or a motorcycle (which shouldn't be attempted on a public highway).

Comfort decided that "the first night is a special situation we needn't handle here," in the final section, "Problems." He only explains that it doesn't usually involve the blood, sweat and tears that grandmothers warn about. You sure about the sweat?

And also, "it shouldn't hurt her more than it hurts a vain young miss to get her ears pierced." And for those men who have had their ear(s) pierced— it just doesn't seem likely that men would be able to empathize. It's similar to imagining a man having a baby.

For those who don't have the time to read another book (especially with finals approaching) the illustrations are enough to get started with. A variety of positions (just a fraction of the multitudes), attire and equipment are illustrated. But, those you'll have to see for yourself. So, let this be an educated campus. Learn to be a gourmet in bed (or wherever you so desire) and not just another fast-food glutton. And, because Comfort doesn't feel children are conducive to a free relationship (and they interfere with college), remember the birth control.

Smurfalert

It has come to our attention that millions of impressionable children around the country, and even many Stony Brook students, are buying and bringing into their home little creatures called smurfs. These little blue plastic things seem like cute little people to those who do not know the truth. These plastic things even have had television propaganda specials in their rather successful attempts to deceive not only children, but also future American adults. The horrible truth is that they are creatures from an extremely hostile alien world, who have significantly altered their appearance and body metabolism in order to make themselves look harmless and inanimate, while in fact they are just waiting until their numbers are so great in our homes and car dashboards that they will be able to conquer us without even a fight. Their ultimate goal is to use the weak members of the human race as food and fuel, the strong as slaves, the women for rape, and our planet as their new home in place of the planet which they destroyed quite by accident when someone lit a match one day in a place quite like New Jersey.

It is the firm belief of us here at Statesman that the public should be made aware of this, our nation's most serious hidden crisis. New smurfs should never be bought, and any in people's possessions should be stored in kerosene, and sliced into small bits with a razor blade.

Second Best Sexual Experience

To the Editor:

I never believed your letters were true until something happened to me that was the second-best sexual experience of my life. I am an undergraduate attending a major Long Island state university, and I put myself through school delivering pizza part-time to the campus. One night I got to work, expecting an ordinary night. Little did I realize that I would be delivering more than pizza!

I was supposed to deliver a large pie with extra cheese and anchovies to one of the suites on campus. When I got to the door I was greeted by Fifi, a small French exchange student with long blonde hair and pert breasts. I couldn't keep my eyes off her firmly rounded ass as I followed her into the suite room. I told her the pizza would come to $6.43. She said, "Gosh, I only have six dollars." Then she smiled and licked her lips. "Can I blow you for the difference?"

I smiled back at her as my 18-inch pink steel heat-seeking muff missile sprang to attention. "Here's your pizza," I said, as I reached down to free Big Wally from his wicked confinement. "And here's the pepperoni!"

Fifi quickly slipped out of her jeans. She wasn't wearing any panties. I buried my face in her golden blonde honey pot, and the man in the boat stood up to greet me as I

Those Fucking Squirrels

To the Editor:

Why do animals always wait until you drive by, just to run out in front of your car? I mean, like, you will be driving along a long country road at night where you can see five miles ahead of you, and right as you come up to a certain part of the road where, say, a fucking squirrel runs out in front of you, and there's not much to do but flatten it. Do these animals hang out with their animal friends by the sides of the road just to play chicken; just to see how close they can come to a car without getting run over? Or maybe they just like to watch the fat old ladies try to not run over them by swerving into a tree? Anyway, they spend enough money on things no one cares about, so why don't they do some research on this?

Who's 'Editor'?

To the Editor:

Who is the 'editor' anyway? The staff box lists photo editors, assistant editors, Editor-in-chief, but no fucking EDITOR! Is that why you have to print these letters, instead of having the 'editor' answer them personally?

Major Discovery

To the Editor:

I have made an important discovery. For years people have wondered why rabbits hop so often, even when they have no place to go. Well, as most people know, rabbits eat a lot of cabbage, and are also very light creatures. Well, what happens when you eat a lot of cabbage? You fart a lot. Right, the rabbit eats the cabbage, digests it, then its up, up and way. It's amazing how you can look at two things for so long, and only years later realize the connection.

Foreign Students Given the Boot

By Phil & Connie

It was announced earlier this morning that the entire foreign student population of Stony Brook would be deported from the United States by the end of this month. The announcement came in a special press release from the Stony Brook News Service, the university's main information service. The action undertaken by the United States Immigrations and Naturalization Service came after a joint request from the Office of Student Affairs and from the Office of the Vice-President for Campus Operations.

The Office of Student Affairs stated that the unprecedented move came as a part of a grand strategy to provide more seats in the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences (CEAS).

The move is expected to now leave about 850 vacant places in CEAS that could be replaced by American students. "Shucks, I know it's not fair," said a spokesman for the Office of Student Affairs, "But you got to think of Americans first and then the gooks...uh sorry—I mean International Students."

The deportation of students is apparently confined only to Stony Brook and other SUNY schools. The Office of Foreign Student Affairs in Stony Brook announced that all F-1 Foreign Student Visas and I-94 Entry Permits will become null and void by midnight of April 16, 1983. "It's shocking isn't it?" said Lynn King Morris, head of the Foreign Student Advisors Office, with a sad smile. "It's very sad. I guess I'm going to lose my job and I guess I got to go home to Wisconsin now."

Robert Francis, vice-president for Campus Operations and former model (see related story), said that he was very happy that all the foreigners were now going home. "It gives us a very good chance to really clean out Stage XII." He added that the vacant residence hall will be occupied by incoming freshman, engineering and computer sciences students who would otherwise have been denied admission. The Physical Plant has also announced plans to fumigate and renovate the entire area.

There are a few who said that they would miss their foreign friends. "We'll never have anybody left to use as a scapegoat," said John DeRazza, a sophomore in Stage XII. He added, "I guess we will have to start picking on the Polacks and Irish and Italians and other assorted emmigrants from now on."

The reaction from the foreign student populations was very swift. Many of them were reported to have been involved in quick marriages of convenience with Americans to be able to remain here. Others were seen rushing to the United Nations Commission for Refugee Relief to apply for refugee status, and still others were seen making plans to come back by boat or wetback their way back here. "We sure are some persistent bunch of bastards aren't we?" said Kusumakk Sharmoota, an exchange student for a certain Arab Country.

You're such an April Fool if you believed, even for a minute, any of the stories in this issue! None of them are true (except of course for the one about the guns, and the one about Silverstein, and the one about Francis, and all of the stories about Ritholtz). Most of the ads are real (including the one about the new franchise 'Marburger King.' He opened it to help raise money for SUNY to prevent Cuomo's proposed layoffs).

BRIGITTE—One more month and then we're seniors! Soon you'll be a med student and I'll still be a bio major! The times that we've had together have been the very best. Always remember: my car blowing up, red lights, dead animals, megablasts with lots of coffee, number NINE and Z-score, Bermuda memories, the rugby team, pop-art, Ted Ming and his nail, party party, Disco 40, Tainted Love, my stud, Elbow Beach, runaway mopeds, black and blues, the elephant family, "another world" and crying all the way home, SB parties, the fasher, nervous heart attacks, umbrellas inside out (and shirts too), Holy Smokes, Burger King drive-through, "I think I'm in trouble," dissecting the frog, studying (?) in the carrels, apple pies and orange jelly beans, counting calories while eating Grandma's cookies, and of course our own two honeys! Thank you for putting up with me and for being so much fun and such a wonderful friend. Lots of luck on the MCATs! Love—Mary

DEAR F.C.—Best of luck on the MCATs and your interview. Don't freak out on us—we know you'll do waff!! Love—Your "Conquered Girlfriends"

PINK TRIANGLES

This award winning film is a provocative study of prejudice against lesbians and gay men which delves into the very nature of discrimination and persecution. Pink Triangles investigates the plight of thousands of homosexuals who suffered in the concentration camps wearing the Nazi insignia for gay men—the pink triangle.

THE CALIFORNIA REICH

The California Reich is a film that will make your flesh crawl—but it is a film that must be taken seriously. California Reich is an inside look at the American Nazi Party, and it challenges the complacent feeling that "It can't happen here." We are introduced to a number of Nazi party members—some are crackpots, but the disturbing thing is that most of these party members are seemingly normal people—family people—maybe even your next door neighbor. A truly remarkable film. California Reich was nominated for an Academy Award as best feature documentary of 1975.

THE LAST CHAPTER

Narrated by Theodore Bikel, this award-winning film depicts the 1,000 year history of Polish Jewish existence; from its medieval beginnings to the heroic struggles of the Warsaw Ghetto. It is a faithful testament to a way of life and a world gone forever.

This series is Free of Charge and the public is cordially invited

This series of programs depicting the Holocaust, the WW II era in Europe, and the continued existence of racism and hatred in our society is sponsored by the B'nai B'rith Hillel Foundation and the Jewish Association for College Youth (JACY) at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. This program was made possible through a special grant from The Jewish Association for College Youth, a member agency of the Federation of Jewish Philanthropies of New York.

SB Defeats Jersey Generals

By Mike Borg

The Stony Brook Patriot football team beat the New Jersey Generals yesterday in a benefit football game in support of the Psychology Department's attempt to oust Professor Brett Silverstein. Ten thousand screaming fans showed up at the Meadowlands to see the Patriots, behind the passing of All-American quarterback Ray McKenna and the running of the team's Most Valuable Player Jorge Taylor, beat the Generals 27-0.

The Patriots took immediate control of the game. After Mike Quirk's kickoff, the Patriot defense took over. General's quarterback Bobby Scott handed the ball off to Herschel Walker who was swiftly greeted by nose tackle Mike "Fred T." Infranco, for a loss of three yards on the play. Two plays later the Generals were forced to punt from their own end zone.

The Pats took control on their own 45 yard line. After a three yard run by Jorge Taylor, Mark Van Keuren pulled down a 38 yard pass from Ray McKenna. Three plays later, behind excellent blocking by the Pat's offensive line, Taylor went into the endzone for the touchdown. After Quirk's extra point went through the uprights, the score was 7-0.

The hapless Generals did not move the ball past mid-field all afternoon. The Patriots did not allow any first downs and limited the Generals to 48 total yards. General's Coach Chuck Fairbanks was unavailable for comment after the game.

The Patriots were unstoppable with Taylor rushing for 234 yards and two touchdowns. McKenna was 20 for 27 with 350 yards, throwing one touchdown and no interceptions. Patriot Coach Fred Kemp said, "We played real well, both the offense and the defense finally played up to their ability. In all my years here at Stony Brook I've never seen such an awesome team".

Reserve defensive back Larry Elber said, "I told you we are good!" After the game, University President John Marburger commented, "Obviously defeating a professional football team is a big step up for the Stony Brook football program. But then again as defensive end Dino Delany commented, "These days who isn't kicking the Generals asses."

Accident Sends Riding Team To Glue Factory

By Jeanine Redo

The Stony Brook Equestrian Team forfeited their match against Rutgers yesterday when their horses went for the ride of their life. The trailers, who were carrying the horses, unhitched on the Long Island Expressway causing a major traffic jam during the height of rush hour. One trailer unhitched and traveled across the median and into westbound traffic. "There were horses everywhere," said commuter Milton Schmeckle. "I couldn't believe it when I saw this horse coming at me doing 50. It was like something out of the Flintstones!"

The team left the campus at about 5PM with the hopes of completing their triumphant season with a win against first place Rutgers. "Who would believe the horses would split," said rider Moon Angelica. "It's absurd! Like, we were driving along the Long Island Expressway drinking a few beers when all of a sudden, like wow, like fer sure, the horses were gone! When I looked to my left, I couldn't believe it! The trailer was traveling westbound next to a Chevette, and then, like, the Chevette became grody to the max!" explained Angelica.

According to police, "This sort of thing is not uncommon. Last year on the Van Wyck Expressway a tractor trailer full of chickens overturned. There were feathers everywhere. We had to call Frank Perdue in to round up the chickens and put them back in the truck."

The match, which was set to begin at 8AM in New Jersey, would not be rescheduled because, according to captain Joe Fellingham, "It was our own stupidity. Whoever hitched the trailers forgot the pin. The poor horses had to sedated."

Police are investigating the mishap for foul play but at the present, they feel that it was just a case of a screw being loose.

Stony Brook Stuns Hockey World!

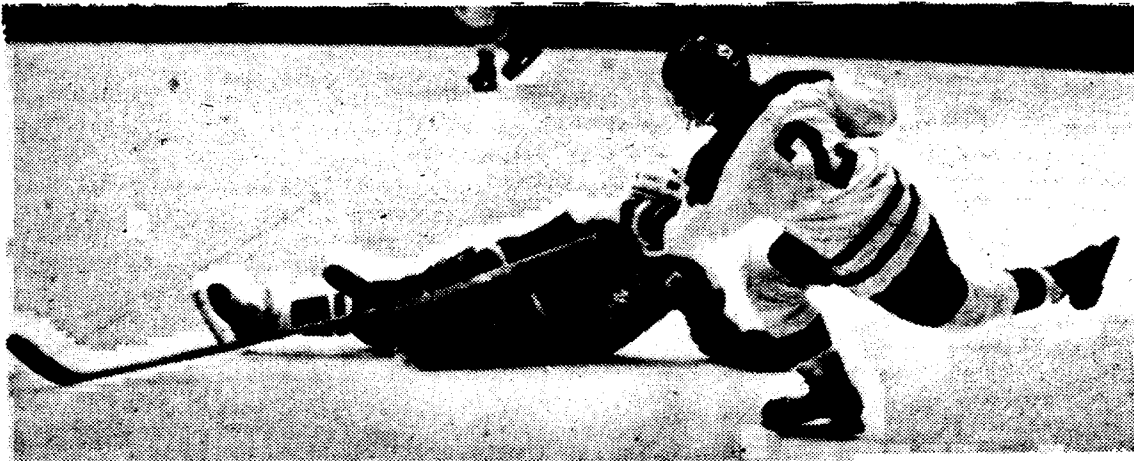

By Teresa L. Moyla

The Stony Brook hockey team defeated the New York Islanders at the Nassau Coliseum last night in the final round of the Stanley Cup playoffs and took away the championship title from the Islanders.

The final score, 3-2, stood for hard work and determination from the Patriots during the tie-breaking seventh game of the series.

Mike Bossy opened the scoring in the first period. After winning the face-off on the left side of Pat goaltender Danny Joseph, Bossy held the puck just long enough to draw Joseph to the right side of the net and then Bossy shot it in the left side 4:04 into the period.

Five minutes later, forward Paul Violino tied the game for the Patriots when he out-smarted Islander goaltender Billy Smith. Violino, after receiving the puck from Kevin Cavallo, skated past the Islander defensemen and headed for a one-on-one with Smith. Violino stopped ten feet in front of Smith, set up for a slap shot and just as Smith was bracing himself, Violino took two steps and lightly pushed the puck past Smith who was expecting a hard shot. "I couldn't believe Smith could be so stupid," Violino said. Smith slapped his stick on the ice after Violino's goal, breaking it in two. After several minutes of swearing referee Bill Chadwick gave Smith two minutes for misconduct. John Tonelli served the penalty. Smith's tantrum gave the Patriots a chance to score a power play goal. Frank Callagy and Scott Sherwood found themselves on a two-on-one break with Clark Gillies during the power play and used it to the best of their ability. Callagy, who had the puck, skated with Sherwood towards Gillies and Smith. Gillies, keeping his eye on Sherwood thinking Callagy would pass the puck to him, was baffled when Callagy slapped the puck to Smith and scored at 18:08 of the period. Smith admitted later that he was still angry at Violino's goal and wasn't concentrating on Callagy's shot. "I hate it when he goes into his temper tantrums," Gillies said, speaking of Smith. The Islanders were not going to let the Pats keep that 2-1 lead, as they came out strong in Joseph saved everyone of the Islander shots, but not before the second period. They took ten shots on Joseph in the first five minutes of the period.

Bryan Trottier took his shot at 16:04. Trottier skated past the Pat forward line and both defensemen, who were all caught up ice and found himself one-on-one with Joseph. He held the puck just long enough to draw Joseph out of the net and shot the puck behind him. Going into the third period, both teams found themselves tied for the Stanley Cup. The tie led to a frustrating third period for both teams. This frustration climaxed when Gillies shoved Pat forward Marty Schmitt into the boards and Schmitt retaliated with an elbow in Gillies' gut. Three seconds later, the two of them were fighting, gloves off and helmets on. Chadwick ejected both of them from the game. "Chadwick should have let them get their frustrations out," Smith commented. The Pats finally got their frustrations out when they scored their winning goal with three seconds left in the game. Captain Sean Levchuck, after getting the puck on a pass from Pete "The Kid" Gordon, took a blistering shot from the blue line causing Smith to dive onto the oncoming puck, along with three other Islanders. Chadwick blew the whistle and when the file of players arose, someone heard a whimper from Smith. "It's in!" cried Levchuck. The Pats were the victors and carried the Stanley Cup around the Coliseum, which was packed with thousands of Stony Brook students who gave up their classes to see the game. Pat Coach Rick Levchuck was proud of his team. "All of the guys deserve this cup", he said. "Some players may be in the press more than others, but all of them did a great job this year." Smith, who once said his son's team could play better than the Patriots, said, "They sure fooled the hell out of me."

Athletic Department Tainted By Drug Charge

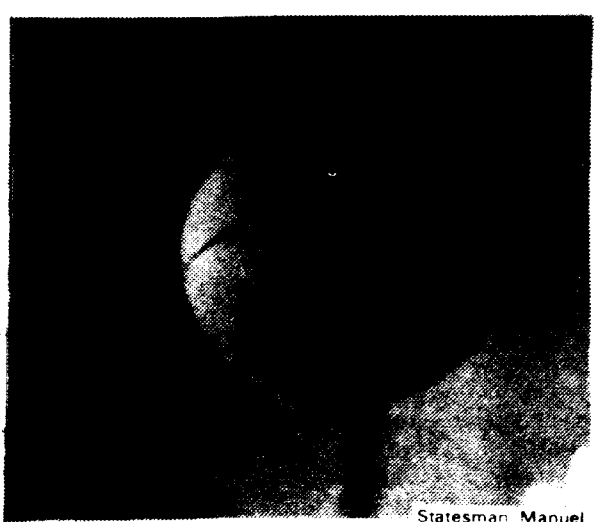

By Geoffrey Reiss

A major drug investigation conducted by the Suffolk County Police department has revealed that there is wide spread use of illegal narcotics being circulated in the Stony Brook department of athletics. Police spokesperson Margaret Green said, "It appears that at least half of the coaches being employed by the University are pushing drugs to their players." An unusual hush fell over the athletic department yesterday afternoon as word spread around the buildings that indictments from a special grand jury were only a few days away. Men's Athletic Director John (The Big Cheese) Ramsey was attending what his secretary termed "A special emergency meeting of the NCAA being held in Bogata, Columbia." Other officials at the department remained silent as to the scandal, but one men's head football coach who wished to have his name withheld commented "These high and mighty cops just don't understand sports. How the hell am I supposed to motivate a bunch of kids to play ball without drugs?" One coach echoed those thoughts by saying, "People don't appreciate the role amphetamines play in sports. Sure everybody practices hard, but if you don't time your drugs correctly you don't stand a prayer." Suspicion of extensive drug use came about as a result of a freak accident which occurred in February during a men's swim meet. An All-American swimmer split his skull open during a race when he unsuccessfully attempted to expand the pool with his head. He apparently miscalculated his dosage prior to the race, and continued to kick his legs long after he had run out of room to swim in. As he was carried out of the pool in a semi-conscious state his legs were still kicking furiously. University officials are now conducting their own investigation to determine just how extensive this reported drug use is. One theory is that Stony Brook is the hub of a SUNY wide drug ring that includes as many as a dozen campuses state wide. It is unfortunate that University officials would allow such a situation to ever evolve. A amateur athletics holds an esteemed place in the sports world. Seldom is sport as pure as it is when it takes place in the amateur arena. It is incredible that - oh screw it. Enough of this high holy shit. Let's face it-I'm pissed off because they wouldn't give me a piece of the action. I've kept my mouth shut for a long time on this one-but do I get any reward? Hell no! They could have bought me out. I would have come pretty damn cheap, but instead I get stuck sounding like an embittered Howard Cosell writing this expose. The hell with this and the hell with writing about sports. They are all a bunch of fags anyway.

Some Really Interesting Stuff About Basketballs

By Ernest Hemingway

It was a good basketball. The basketball was good. I remember when I was deep-sea fishing off Key West with Manuel. The sweet salt spray was whipping in our faces. The sweet salt spray was sweet. Manuel said he thought it was a good basketball. "It is a good basketball," he said. I agreed with him that it was a good basketball. "Yes, it is a good basketball," I said. Every year in Madrid they have the Running of the Basketballs, in the Plaza de Basketballs. The basketballs run through the streets toward the Basketball Court. They fill the streets. The streets are full with basketballs. The basketballs fill the streets. I remember watching the basketballs fill the streets. Manuel was with me. He asked me if I remembered deep-sea fishing off Key West. I said I did. "Yes," I said. "I remember deep-sea fishing off Key West." "Do you remember I told you the basketballs were good?" "Yes," I said. "It is a good basketball." I remember it well.
