Wharton: SUNY Is Best Kept Secret

Statesman: Cory A. Goldberg

SUNY Chancellor Clifton Wharton shown here during student newspaper conference held last week in Albany. The press conference dealt with the major issues of the SUNY systems as a whole. Wharton discussed his new "multi phase rolling plan" in depth at the conference.

By Laura Craven

SUNY Chancellor Clifton Wharton said that he has always believed that SUNY is one of the state's best kept secrets. He maintains that SUNY is not fully appreciated by the state of New York and that students should proctize the effects of a SUNY education.

At a conference last week Wharton maintained that the goal of the SUNY system is academic excellence and to improve the academic quality of SUNY as a whole.

Wharton emphasized the importance of "building the system as a system." He said that there are advantages for SUNY schools to work together, not to lose individuality, but that there would be more power within the system as a system collectively than as separate entities.

SUNY Budget

Wharton said that the state university prepares a budget request to the state based on campus requests. But, formal approval must come from the SUNY board of trustees and later be approved by the state legislature.

This year, Wharton said, the budget was prepared on an assumption of no tuition increase for next year. He included that the budget came from each campus individually on a mesh planning. He said this was the first time this was done and it is unusual.

He called the plan a "multi-phase rolling plan." The plan spans a five year time horizon. Each campus had to prepare a budget for the next five years on projections. He said that each campus had to do more than in the past, but that is part of his multi-phase rolling plan.

The plan consists of intra campus changes as well as inter campus changes.

Intra campus changes included that the campus government would decide if it wanted to reduce or eliminate certain programs and use that money to strengthen remaining programs. The inter campus phase includes campuses trading certain programs within the SUNY system.

Wharton said that there is or must be a dramatic or major change in the mission of many campuses.

'It costs money

to be good'

-Jerome Komisar

SUNY Vice Chancellor Jerome Komisar said, "It costs money to be good." He claimed that SUNY is a high quality institution and that the diversity of programs, range and quality of a SUNY education is difficult to match.

Response Time Slowed Due to Poor Ventilation

By Ellen Lander

The Stony Brook Volunteer Ambulance Corps is experiencing a two to three minute delay in response time, said Brian Loughlin, vice president for personnel. Much of this delay, he said, has been attributed to poor ventilation in the crews' quarters.

Loughlin said the air conditioner in the crew's has been out of operation since last April, despite numerous attempts to repair it. Loughlin explained that the quarters, which is located on the first floor of the Infirmary is a bunk style room where crew members of the longest shift of the day await "in house" for calls. This shift lasts for 8 1/2 hours during the week, 12 hours on the weekend, and handles an average of one to two calls per night.

Loughlin said the six by three foot air conditioning unit, located in the rear of the room, is the only source of circulated air. There are no windows or vents, and the air becomes stuffy and stale, he said. "Putting it bluntly," Loughlin said, "the room smells like an old sock." Currently there is only a small fan circulating air in the room.

Mark Teitelbaum, president of the corps, said that conditions in the room were so bad that some members of the corps who were on the midnight shift during the second week of the semester were operating not from the Infirmary, but on an "on-call" basis only. Teitelbaum explained that members who were "on-call" would respond to a call where ever they were— at home, in class, etc. The members were kept alert with a page that they carried at all times. However, the "on-call" system resulted in a two to three minute delay in response time, Teitelbaum said.

Loughlin said the air conditioner first broke down in April. The most vital part, the compressor, needed to be replaced. Since the unit was still covered by a warranty, the corps was unable to replace it.

However, the warranty ran out later that month, about a week before the unit broke down again. This time, Teitelbaum said, workers from the Physical Plant came to look at the unit. The corps officers were recommended by the workers to purchase a new condensor. The condensor cost about $700 and after it was installed, the machine still did not work. Teitelbaum said that after the Physical Plant workers took another look at the air conditioner, they were informed that the new condensor was ruined by a blockage in a line and that a whole new unit would have to be purchased. A new unit would cost about $1900, Teitelbaum said, and almost half that was already spent on new parts.

Kevin Jones, director of the Physical Plant said that he is not responsible for the air conditioner because it was installed by the Infirmary and not by the university. "We can't be responsible for every air conditioner that gets installed on campus — we just don't have the manpower," Jones said. He added that he sent workers to look at the air conditioner in the crew's quarters "as a courtesy to them." He said that the ambulance corps members were informed of what was malfunctioning and were told that if they would purchase the equipment needed, his workers would install it. "We told them where to buy the parts, the price of them and the specifications."

"We're contemplating taking some sort of action to force the issue if something is not done soon," said Teitelbaum, "to clear up what we feel is an unhealthy situation."

"All we want," added Loughlin, "is a safe livable conditions."

Reforms Pledged After Halt of Hunger Strike

Belfast, Northern Ireland - (AP) - Britain's top official in Northern Ireland pledged yesterday to implement prison reforms for all inmates now that jailed Irish nationalists have ended their hunger strike.

The violence-torn province was reported quiet. But police reinforcements were on the streets of Londonderry, Ulster's second largest city, where marches by the mostly Catholic supporters of the hunger strike and counter-demonstration by followers of hard-line Protestant leader Rev. Ian Paisley were scheduled.

"There are certain reforms which can be introduced. We will now try to se what we can do about them," Northern Ireland Secretary James Prior told reporters at Norwich, England, before departing early yesterday for Belfast.

Ten Irish nationalists, mostly members of the outlawed Irish Republican Army, starved themselves to death at Belfast's Maze prison during the seven month protest that ended Saturday when the six remaining strikers ended their fasts.

The prisoners were demanding five prison reforms that the British government to grant on grounds that it would legitimate the Irish Republican Army's bloody campaign to oust the British from the mainly Protestant province and unite it with the Irish Republic to the south.

However, Prime Minister Margaret Thatcher held out the possibility that some reforms would be initiated once the hunger strike ended.

Prior's remarks Sunday made it clear that Britain will not treat guerrillas from the mainly Catholic IRA and its allied Irish National Liberation Army differently from jailed Protestant guerrillas. Nearly one-third on the 1,500 people jailed for terrorist offences in the province belong to Protestant paramilitary organizations.

"We'll be looking at a policy of reform which will apply to all prisoners," Prior said. "It's important to get it right...I'll be moving this week — but not today."

He did not elaborate on what reforms were being considered.

Sinn Fein, the IRA's legal political wing, stepped up attacks on the Roman Catholic Church hierarchy and pledged that "the struggle against the British government will not end."

Announcing an end to the seven month old fast on Saturday, Finn said the Catholic Church had "robbed" the nationalists of their propaganda weapon against the British by convincing families of the hunger strikers to order medical intervention.

NEWS DIGEST

International

Jerusalem — Prime Minister Menachem Begin's government adopted a plan yesterday for altering Israel's 14-year military rule of occupied Arab territories by bringing in civilians and eventually Palestinians.

Cabinet Secretary Arieh Naor described the move to reorganize rule of the West Bank and Gaza Strip as a "confidence building measure," apparently to encourage Palestinians to join US mediated negotiations between Egypt and Israel for autonomy in the occupied areas.

The plan is an administrative matter and does not need legislative approval.

Although few details of the plan were disclosed, Naor said that beginning Dec. 1, Israeli civilians will handle such functions as education, health and agricultural development.

Later, Palestinians will assume senior positions in managing these affairs, he said.

Lebanon — Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's fundamentalist Islamic regime warned Iranian landlords Sunday they would be "prosecuted severely" and their property confiscated if they rented to government foes, Tehran Radio said.

The state-run radio broadcast a statement by revolutionary prosecutor Hussein Tabrizi ordering landlords to screen prospective tenants for "counterrevolutionaries" and report anything "unusual."

Miami, Florida — Despite the Missouri Supreme Court's refusal to hear his case, a cancer victim seeking to locate relatives whose bone marrow might save his life says he is clinging to a last, slim hope.

Jim George, a 33-year-old computer consultant, is a victim of myelocytic leukemia, a nearly 100 percent fatal form of cancer. Born in a home for unwed mothers in Kansas City, Missouri, and adopted soon afterward, he said his natural relatives may be able to save his life with bone marrow donations.

Last year, Missouri Juvenile Court Judge Gene Martin rejected George's petition seeking his birth certificate and the identity of his parents. On Friday, the state Supreme Court refused to hear George's appeal.

Washington — A Senate committee appears ready to remove the last obstacle to President Reagan's nomination of C. Everett Koop as surgeon general.

Koop's admirers and detractors predict that the Senate Labor and Human Resources Committee will approve the nomination despite earlier controversy over his vocal opposition to abortion, his views on the role of women in society and his lack of experience in the field of public health.

Tupelo, Mississippi — A showdown between the "Coalition for Better Television" and sponsors of television shows containing sex and violence is off — at least for a little while.

The Reverend Donald Wildmon, chairman of the coalition, said yesterday that it will be January or February before his fundamentalist group tries for a boycott of certain advertisers. The Tupelo, Mississippi minister gave no reason for the delay.

Washington — Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger said the President's plan for deploying the MX Missile and developing the B-1 bomber will close the "window of vulnerability" to Soviet attacks. Weinberger said placing missiles in existing, but, reinforced, silos would provide "far greater" protection from attack than missiles housed in new shelters — as previously proposed.

Dallas, Texas — Pathologists yesterday identified the body buried in Lee Harvey Oswald's grave as that of the suspected assassin of President John F. Kennedy ending 18 years of speculation and court battles.

"We both individually and as a team have concluded beyond any doubt — and I mean any doubt — that the individual buried under the name Lee Harvey Oswald in Rose Hill Cemetery is Lee Harvey Oswald," said Dr. Linda Norton, head of the pathology team.

The body was exhumed at Rose Hill Burial Park here after Oswald's brother, Robert, dropped his opposition to the procedure.

Ithaca, New York — Negotiators working to prevent a walkout of 950 service and maintenance workers at Cornell University now face a strike deadline of midnight tonight.

Similar deadlines of midnight tomorrow and 4 PM EDT Sunday were both extended during a weekend of negotiating and union meetings.

Sunday, United Auto Workers spokesmen said that agreement had been reached between the university and the workers on procedures for grievance, discipline and discharge. However, the union said no deal had yet been struck on the size of pay hikes.

Albany, New York — Next year's college freshman may find that the principal student loan which helped put their older brothers and sisters through college just isn't available to them, according to top New York state education officials.

State Education Commissioner Gordon Ambach warned that President Reagan's call for a further 12 percent cut in federal spending could cost the state more than $700 million in the 1982-83 academic year in lost federal student loan guarantees, outright grants and Social Security benefits.

New York — John Hinckley Jr., accused of shooting President Ronald Reagan, describes himself and actress Jodie Foster as "a historical couple, like Napoleon and Josephine, and a romantic couple like Romeo and Juliet."

That assessment came in a letter printed in the current issue of Time Magazine, which said Hinckley wrote to it several weeks ago offering to answer any 20 questions the magazine posed.

Time submitted the questions, asking Hinckley about his past and his travels before the shooting in Washington.

Hinckley chose instead to fill his return letter — atop of which he scrawled "the lovesick assassin" — only with his feelings for and obsession with Foster, now a student at Yale University.

Weather Watch

Compiled by Chris Grassotti, Bob Hassinger and Thomasina Mazzillo

Summary

This weekend's unseasonably cool weather has given way to a warming trend as high pressure drifts off the east coast. As the warmer air pushes northward it may touch off a scattered shower later today or tonight. Showers not withstanding, the next two days will be characterized by mild temperatures and sunny skies. However, don't expect this nice weather to last forever, as colder air now pushing into the nation's midsection should arrive here late Wednesday.

Forecast

Today - Partly sunny and warm with the chance of a late day shower. Highs 70 - 75.

Tonight - Partly cloudy and mild, a passing shower possible. Lows 53 - 58.

Tuesday - Partly sunny, breezy and continued warm. Highs in the mid to upper 70's.

Wednesday - Becoming cloudy and breezy. Temperatures reaching the 70's early in the day, but falling through the 60's by evening.

Arts and Sciences Senate Addresses Problems

By Glenn Taverna

The university Arts and Sciences Senate, a division of the SUSB Senate, held its first meeting of the academic year last Monday. The agenda included a report update by Frank Meyers, convener of deans for the College of Arts and Sciences, and comments by the guest speaker Fredrick Preston, vice-president for Student Affairs.

Preston addressed the Arts and Sciences Senate on improving the faculty-student relationship, increasing faculty activities and responsibilities, expanding student service throughout the university. "It's one of my desires for the Student Affairs division to become much more actively engaged with... the faculty community," Preston said. He concluded his address with three proposals: to make sophisticated, and effective student services available to all students; to develop creative programming outside of the classroom for faculty members; and to engage in 'crap detecting', whereby unnecessary university bureaucracy is removed in order to minimize student frustration.

According to the annual report of the activities for the Arts and Sciences Senate, the senate includes 66 faculty members from the College of Arts and Sciences. Thirty of the senate's members represent various departments and programs and the remaining 36 members are elected. The entire senate also serves on the SUSB Senate, the university student-faculty governing body.

Myers followed Preston and addressed the senate on problems facing the College of Arts and Sciences. One problem he mentioned was declining enrollment. "The preliminary indication is that the enrollment picture is not very good," Myers said. "It is quite possible that we are not doing as well as the other three [major] university centers." He also said that a decline in enrollment may have a direct affect on the allocation of resources to the university.

The second problem Myers addressed was weekly excellence reports. He said that departmental chairmen are required to prepare a weekly report detailing how the different departments function and rank with respect to one another. "We are engaging in wasteful activity," Myers said. He added that there is no way for a department to make an intelligent assessment within five days as to where they stand.

Myers also addressed the problem of equipment replacement money. He said that equipment replacement money will be allocated to the different departments of the College of Arts and Sciences in the near future, but the money cannot be used for the purchasing of computer-related or intelligence-related equipment. "This puts a great restriction on the utility of the money," Myers said. He said administrators from Albany cited two major reasons for the restrictions. First, the university already has more computer memory than it needs and should use that up before requesting new equipment. Second, Albany purchases equipment on bonds, and if the university doesn't need new equipment, than Albany can use that money to pay back outstanding bonds. "These restrictions are mindless and only set us back," Myers said.

Former Drug Addicts Tell Their Story at SB

Statesman/Eric Ambrosio

Hugh Cassidy, former interim director of Public Safety, coordinated the lecture seminar on drug abuse.

By Kim Neely

A lecture seminar on drug abuse was featured in the Stony Brook Union Auditorium Saturday morning. The seminar, coordinated by Hugh Cassidy, former interim director of Public Safety, included John Olsen, head counselor of the Houppauge Alba-Neck Halfway House, a voluntary program for drug abusers, and other former drug addicts.

This was not Alba-Neck's first seminar on drug abuse. They already have lectured at schools in the Islip district and at St. James Roman Catholic Church, where Cassidy and his wife participated. Cassidy said that drug use on Long Island is growing in epidemic proportions. He said that three out of four people use marijuana and three out of eight are frequent users. Cocaine, uppers, and Heroin, to name a few other drugs, are used regularly by 34 percent of Long Islanders. He also said that drug abuse is not a poor people's problem—most drug abusers are middle class citizens who are able to afford drugs for recreation.

Olsen first addressed the audience about his life with drugs. He too, like many others, came to the Alba-Neck Halfway House after everything else failed. He gave some basic facts about drugs and how people abuse them. He said, for example, that when he used speed he could party all night and then come home and whip through his homework. He said he never did any homework well, but he felt as though he did. Drugs gave him confidence and hid him from his problems, he said. Olsen said he couldn't live without drugs and soon took a turn at dealing for which he was jailed a couple of times. Finally, with his mind and marriage both going downhill, he turned to the Alba-Neck Halfway House for help and rehabilitation.

The next speaker, a resident of Alba-Neck, told the story of his life with drugs. He echoed Olsen's comments and emphasized to the audience that drug abuse is a problem everywhere—not just on the streets of Harlem.

The floor was then open for questions. The audience was not too large. The questions ranged from personal questions about the speakers to questions about children and drugs.

The seminar was the first of many for Stony Brook in the future, said Doug Little, public safety officer in charge of community relations.

Financial Aid Director Chosen

John Joyce, director of Financial Aid for the last seven years at Lesley College in Cambridge, Massachusetts, was chosen as Stony Brook's director of Financial Aid on Sept. 21, following the approval of Frederick Preston, vice-president for Student Affairs.

Joyce, 36, will direct the operations of the department, implement new policies and offer guidance on an individual level. He expressed an interest in developing a working rapport with students.

"I hope to be a center for student support in the department," Joyce said. "Financial aid is often seen by students in terms of a federal bureaucracy that impedes and not improves the process [of financial aid]. I would like to help the students in helping the department."

Joyce received his Masters in Education from Boston's Suffolk University in 1978. In 1974 he earned his BA in English and Journalism from Framingham State College.

Joyce said President Reagan's economic policies will have negative consequences for financial aid. "The immediate effects can be seen by changes in the basic eligibility of the the student loan program," he said. As of Oct. 1, only those students below the $30,000 income level are eligible. In general, financial aid will be tightened up considerably.

"Parents and students need to make their elected officials aware if they oppose the policies. Cuts in the economy should not be made at the expense of students."

Opera to Debut Here

An early Verdi opera, Il Corvaro, will make its American debut in December as part of the 1981-82 Symphony Orchestra subscription series at the Fine Arts Center at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. Dates will be announced later.

Presented in concert form by the Long Island Opera Society, the work will be conducted by David Lawton.

The performance will feature the Stony Brook Chamber Symphony Orchestra (formerly the Graduate Orchestra), the University Chorus and a professional cast. Lawton is the conductor and musical director of the Orchestra and Marguerite Brooks conducts the Chorus. The entire production is under the artistic direction of Gordon David.

Informal Lectures Scheduled to Introduce Books

A series of informal lectures on books has been arranged to introduce a new University-Community Fellowship Program at Stony Brook.

Nancy Mullen, of Setauket, who has managed the Corner Book Shop near the Stony Brook campus since 1962, has been appointed the first Fellow. Lester Paldy, dean of the Center for Continuing Education (CED), said the program was created "to develop new relationships between the University and the wider Long Island metropolitan community."

CED is sponsoring the program in collaboration with the Departments of History, English and Sociology and with support from the Stony Brook Foundation.

Paldy explained, "The program will bring to the campus persons whose expertise and knowledge can complement the resources of traditional university departments." Fellows, serving as volunteers, will be provided with office space and staff support to plan programs, meet with students and faculty on an informal basis, and participate in the academic life of the departments in which they reside.

Mullen's office on campus is in the Department of History, Room N337 in the Social and Behavioral Sciences Building.

She has organized "Talks on Books," a late afternoon series that will begin Oct. 15 and bring to the campus people with extensive experience in the publishing industry. This series, Paldy said, will interest authors and potential authors, students, faculty, members of the community considering careers in publishing and others who share these interests.

The series will cover topics ranging from publishing and being published to book production and marketing. Each talk will be given in the Auditorium, Room 101, of the Humanities Building beginning at 5 P.M. Refreshments will be offered at 4:45. Question periods will follow the talks and career opportunities may be discussed.

The fall semester schedule follows:

Oct. 15 - Lewis Coser of Stony Brook's Department of Sociology, whose study of the publishing industry is to be issued this winter by Basic Books, will provide a broad survey of the field. (Coser also will speak on a similar topic at Stony Brook's First Alumni College Day Program, Saturday, Oct. 24.)

Oct. 22 - Laurence Gadd, president of Gadd Books and former managing editor at Grosset & Dunlap, will speak about the role of the editor, the acquisition of books and author-editor relations. He teaches editing in New York

University's Book Publishing Program.

Oct. 29 - To be announced.

Nov. 5 - Al Margolies, vice president of production and design, Viking-Penguin, will speak about how books are manufactured.

Nov. 12 - Dorothy Harris, permissions manager at Doubleday & Co., will lecture on copyrights, contracts and other aspects of the sale of book rights.

Nov. 19 - Panel on the current state of the industry. Panelists, representing the various kinds of publishing houses, will include Christopher Kerr, sales manager at Oxford University Press, and Brenda Marsh, sales manager at St. Martin's Press.

Dec. 3 - George Booth, New Yorker cartoonist and artist, will give an illustrated talk on his experiences in having several books published by major houses.

The series will resume in February after the winter recess.

Meantime, Paldy said, other events will be arranged as others are appointed under the University-Community Fellowship Program. Each Fellow will serve for one year.

The program's aim is to provide "more symmetry in the relationship linking Stony Brook to Long Island and the metropolitan region," Paldy said. "While it is widely accepted that a university such as Stony Brook has an important public service mission, it is not usually recognized that we are surrounded by talented persons who could contribute to the academic life of the University if appropriate ways could be found to identify them and create settings in which they could work. This volunteer University-Community Fellowship Program is designed to help make such arrangements possible."

Women's Alliance Holds Conference

Thirty-seven workshops, displays, demonstrations and free screenings will be offered at the sixth annual Women's Health Conference Saturday, Oct. 10, at Stony Brook.

Registration will begin at 8:15 AM and workshops will run from 9 AM to 5 PM. The workshops are sponsored by the Women's Health Alliance of Long Island with the support of the University's Health Sciences Center. All events will be held at the Center.

Up to 10 workshops will be offered in each of four 90-minute periods throughout the day. The women's subjects include stress, death, self-starvation, abuse, smoking, nutrition, abortion and lesbian health care, among many others. A special youth series will cover parental interaction, teenage sexuality, self-help and legal rights.

Stony Brook's Department of Obstetrics and Gynecology will perform pap smears and the School of Dental Medicine will offer oral cancer screenings, all without charge. The Women's Pavillion, a community group, will provide free pregnancy tests.

Registration fees are $5 for Women's Health Alliance members and $10 for non-members. Pre-registration information and printed programs can be obtained by calling the Alliance's Healthhouse in St. James, at 862-6288 or 862-6743.

Proposals To Test At College Level

Norman, Oklahoma (CPS)—More college students may soon have to pass competency tests before they get their degrees.

Just as the controversial proficiency tests have spread on the high school level—a movement largely fueled by parental and college admissions officers' complaints that high school grads aren't well educated—they now appear to be making inroads on the college level as well.

Most recently, a University of Oklahoma faculty committee recommended two weeks ago that undergraduates pass a "comprehensive" final exam in their majors before being allowed to graduate.

Individual departments within the university—not semi-independent testing companies like Educational Testing Service—would write and administer the tests.

The Oklahoma committee also urged a "strict grading policy" to combat a feared slip in the university's academic standards.

"There's been a general feeling that our undergrads are just not adequately educated in a liberal arts sense," said Faculty Senate Chairman Gary Thompson. "Many students are coming [to Oklahoma] with such low competency levels we have been forced to simply ease them through the system. As a result, our academic standards have visibly declined."

There remains some confusion about how many other schools require such tests. The University of Colorado last year decided to allow—but not require—individual departments to give them. But Arts and Sciences Dean Everly Fleischer notes, "I don't think [the option] has been exercised at all. It would take a huge amount of work to formulate and grade such exams."

Harvard and Yale have required comprehensive exams of graduating seniors since the 1920's, although Yale now allows "approved substitutes" like senior theses or field work. Administrators at both schools were unsure if any other colleges required competency tests, however.

The Oklahoma proposal seems to have raised surprisingly few student protests. Student newspaper reporter Gary Smith observed that, "a lot of students seem to favor it because it'll add more prestige to the university. In years to come, you can say 'I went to Oklahoma' and be proud."

Dr. Robert Calfee of Stanford's School of Education offers a dimmer view. "It makes even less sense than does high school testing."

Any such exam would either be "much too little or much too late," Calfee asserted. "You'd be imposing a standard that's impossible to use fairly. As a yardstick for competency, it's just plain dumb."

Who Will Teach Us?

In the last year the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences has seen many professors and instructors leave the university for one basic reason— money.

Outside the university more money is available and valuable faculty are tempted to leave. Many professors have said a graduating student can make more than a professor with 20 years of experience.

SUNY Chancellor Clifton Wharton is aware of the problem yet has no concrete answer.

This problem, however, is real. Students are supposed to learn and become the technologists for the future. They need people to pave the way. This problem is a serious problem, and larger to the SUNY system. Something must be done.

The state ruling on maximum salaries are too low. They can not compete with the pay scale industry.

Not only are the salaries too low, but some of the equipment at Stony Brook is as old as the university itself. Yet our tuition goes up, and our faculty goes down. Should this be?

With Stony Brook being the facility that gets more money for research than any other in the SUNY system, why are we letting researchers leave? Who is getting hurt the most? Not those in SUNY Central— just us students. Those at SUNY headquarters should realize that this is going to hurt SUNY in the long run.

Awareness

To the Editor:

Each year Long Island exports to other parts of the country a precious product—the well educated graduates of our schools and universities who seek what appears to be greener pastures.

Long Island's importance as an economic entity and home of millions is often underrated and overlooked, not only by outsiders but also by Long Islander's themselves.

Too few recognize that the Island's population rivals that of several states, that it accounts for a major part of the industrial output in the state, that Suffolk is New York's leading agricultural county, that Long Island's universities rank with the best in the nation and its beaches, state and national parks, fishing and boating facilities provide recreational opportunities second to none.

Part of the problem is that all this magnificence is in the shadow of a great metropolis and there is a tendency to treat Long Island as an appendage to New York City rather than as a region unto itself with its own unique assets and needs.

Perhaps it is time for Long Islanders to initiate some of that home town spirit so alive in our smaller communities and apply it to the Island as a whole.

Local business and industry might do well to look first on Long Island when recruiting executives and technicians. Our schools and universities might make a greater effort to employ teachers and administrators from the local area rather than importing them from out of state.

Island is good for us as individuals. Taking pride in our Island and working together to build its identity is an important factor in insuring our future prosperity.

Kenneth P. LaValle

(Editor's note: The writer is the New York State senator from this district and the chairman of the Senate Higher Education Committee).

In short, we can do a great deal to help ourselves by realizing that what is good for Long

COLLEGE NOTES

Freshman Less Idealistic

Washington, D.C.—Is money everything? Is social idealism dead? Well, it maybe, at least in this year's college freshman class. A newly-released study by the National Center for Education Statistics indicates clear evidence that today's incoming college freshmen are more economically pragmatic and less socially idealistic in their career planning than their predecessors of a decade ago.

"There's no question students have become more conservative," said Dr. Samuel S. Peng, chief architect of the study, which observed the educational and occupational plans and activities of 1980 high school seniors and sophomores.

Among other things, the study revealed a dramatic shift of preference in expected college majors. In a similar 1972 survey, social science (including such fields as history, sociology, psychology and social work) was the most popular option, chosen by nearly a fifth of all college-bound seniors. In the 1980 study, business ranked in a class by itself, the choice of 22 percent of future collegians.

Engineering came in second at 10 percent while social science preference was more than sliced in half, to a mere eight percent.

"Students are quite aware of what fields are economically 'safe' these days, Peng said, "and are eager to take advantage of the fact."

Just as revealing, Peng noted, is the study's tabulation of student "life goals." While most goal preferences remain similar between the 1972 and 1980 surveys (success, a happy family life, good friends, etc.), "having lots of money" jumped a full 12 percent in import. "Working to correct social and economic inequalities" dropped a corresponding 14 percent.

"It's very clear," Peng asserts, "that today's incoming collegian is much more interested in making as much money as he can, and that this may indeed be the prime purpose in getting an education. Times have changed decidedly from a decade ago."

Peng's study team plans to follow the same group of students through its freshman year to see "how much the college experience may change their attitudes and themselves. This has never been attempted before. It should prove fascinating, to say the least."

Profs Push Own Books

College Park, Maryland—More than 100 professors and instructors at the University of Maryland have required their students this fall to buy books that the teachers themselves wrote.

Prices for the self-authored texts range from $2.25 to $38.95. The worst offenders, according to a list compiled by the Maryland Book Exchange, are business and management college instructors. Thirteen instructors required students buy 16 of their books.

"I think the potential for a conflict of interest is there," academic affairs Vice Chancellor William Kirwan told the Diamondback, the Maryland student paper.

The problem is hardly a new one on any campus. When in 1977 some 60 University of Massachusetts-Amherst instructors assigned their own texts, a protest led to a "Textbook Trust Fund" clause in the 1978 faculty employment contract.

Under the plan, royalties from books authored by UMass teachers and assigned to UMass students would go into a special scholarship fund.

Three years after the agreement, however, the trust fund has yet to be established formally, according to the faculty president.

Insatiable Appetite

Chicago, Illinois—If you know five women on campus, one of them probably tends to "pig out" periodically on food, feel guilty about it afterward, and then punish herself by crash dieting or even inducing vomiting.

It could be she's fallen victim to bulimia, an emotional disorder which, according to a new study, has reached near-epidemic levels among female university students. At one time or another, 15 to 20 percent of the women attending college have had it, the study estimates.

The disorder—its literal translation is "insatiable appetite"—makes its sufferer engage in episodic, manic eating binges. Those binges, according to Dr. Craig Johnston, director of the Anorexia Nervosa Project that conducted the study from Chicago, usually trigger depression and guilt. The victim will likely take a laxative or even make herself throw up to purge what she has consumed.

A siege of merciless crash-dieting may follow, Johnston said. The individual will then go on another eating spree.

The affliction has much in common with the more widely-publicised anorexia nervosa. Yet bulimia is more difficult to detect, Johnston said, "because most women afflicted maintain their normal weight, in contrast to the drastic weight loss anorexia produces. There's no obvious emaciation."

"Once a young woman gets involved in this vicious cycle, she definitely needs psychiatric help," Johnston stressed, noting bulimia can have devastating effects on vital body chemicals and the urinary and intestinal tracts. The doctor blames the increasing frequency of both bulimia and anorexia nervosa on "the cultural pressure to be thin in America. It seems to be a basic ingredient in our social ethos: If you're not skinny, then you're not with it."

Most women "lack sufficient competition channels in our society insofar as career and activities go," Johnston speculated. "Thus the challenge to be thin and beautiful is one of the few channels open to them."

Johnston shuns publicity over his group's ongoing research, largely because he fears being deluged by more requests for help than he can handle—an indication of how widespread the disorder has become.

No Discrimination

Austin, Texas—After a year of politicking and threats, sororities at the University of Texas have finally consented to pledge not to discriminate against students on the basis of race, creed or national origin.

The controversy dates from last fall, when Texas Student Publications (TSP)—the university group that publishes a number of student publications on the Austin campus—voted to require all students groups to sign the pledge to treat members fairly. Groups that refused to sign the pledge, TSP warned, would be kept out of the university yearbook, The Cactus.

While the Texas Interfraternity Council (TIC) signed the pledge, the school's Panhellenic Council initially refused. Subsequently the TIC, following the sororities' example, threatened to boycott the yearbook as a protest against the pledge requirement.

The TIC said it would publish a rival yearbook if sororities were excluded from The Cactus.

Sororities at Texas are not registered student groups, a status dating from the mid-1960's when they voted against adhering to certain university mandates, including those involving non-discrimination. It was long suspected that the sororities' refusal to obtain official standing was racially motivated.

Council Director Evelyn Bennett disagrees, insisting that prejudice is not a dominant problem in sorority life. "It can be a factor," she conceded, "but it's only a small part of the overall situation." Bennett added that race had nothing to do with the council's initial opposition to the non-discrimination pledge.

"We were miffed because we weren't consulted on the matter at all. [The publications board] simply said 'We're passing it.' It was clearly a 'We'll show 'em' kind of attitude."

The sororities ultimately decided to sign the pledge anyway because they wanted to be in The Cactus so much, Bennett explained. Signing the pledge, however, hasn't changed race relations at Texas much. There are 17 sorority chapters at the university, three of them exclusively black. None of the sororities or fraternities at Texas is integrated.

"Texas is a little behind in racial relations," admitted Interfraternity Council President Chris Bell. "But I don't think there's any current tension. Black students don't want to fight. They want to talk things out."

Women Runners Favored In Cross Country Meet

Battling illness and injury, the Patriots Men's Cross Country Team found it rough at recent invitational cross country meets. After a last place finish out of four teams at the Trenton State Invitational Tournament Sept. 27, the Patriots improved, finishing fourteenth, out of 15 schools athlete New York Institute of Technology Invitational Tournament Saturday.

Leading the Patriots at the Tech meet was Freshman Blake Cambey who finished 51st, with a time of 28:18. Moving up from his sixth place team spot, was another Freshman, Chris Hawks, finishing the five mile course in 30:14 in 78th place. Not too far behind was Adam Rich and Steve Mullaney taking 82nd and 87th place with times of 30:26 and 30:33, respectively. Also scoring for Stony Brook was Jim Brandon, finishing 92nd with a time of 31:32 and Paul D'Elisa placing 100 with a time of 33:48.

The team is looking forward to Saturday, when they will host along with the women's team an invitational meet at Sunken Meadow State Park. Prior to the College race, an open 5,000 meter cross country run will be held. It will take place at noon and the entry fee is $4.00.

The Stony Brook Women's Cross Country Team took third at the New York Institute of Technology Invitational Tournament held at New York Tech Saturday. Out of Division I, II and III schools competing for the title, the Patriots took first among the Division III teams. Placing first and second in the race was Division I, Fordham University and Division II, Adelphi University.

The competition was a three mile race, with the top ten women receiving medals. Stony Brook's Donna Lyons, came in ninth with a time of 19:40. She was the only Patriot to receive a medal. However, the Stony Brook team received a trophy for their performance.

Stony Brook came in 12th out of 18 schools, at last week's Trenton Invitational.

Volleyball Team Loses In Playoff Competition

By Laurie J. Reinschreiber

An injury to Lauren Beja, the starting setter of the volleyball team upset the Patriots during the Invitational Tournament they sponsored this weekend.

The first round was a round robin tournament consisting of six teams, of which four made it into the playoffs.

In the round robin Stony Brook defeated William Patterson College, 15-8, 15-7 and Kings Point College, 15-4, 15-8. They were beaten by the University of Vermont, 10-15, 15-7, 12-15; East Stroudsburg State, 15-10, 15-9 and Mansfield State, 15-6, 15-10.

In the playoff competition Stony Brook was defeated by Mansfield and East Stroudsburg State defeated University of Vermont. East Stroudsburg was the finalist after they beat Mansfield State.

"My starting setter was injured and did not play at all. I had Carol Tompkins filling in for her and the team just had to get used to it. It was a change we had to get used to, if we had the starting line up in there we could have done better," said coach Teri Tiso.

Tiso added that Tompkins "did real well" as did Betsy Muniz who came into the game for the first time this season. "She did really well for coming off the bench, I was pleased with the way she hung in there," Tiso said.

Janet Byrne was elected to the All-Tournament team. "She is our team leader, she and Tompkins provide the leadership," said Tiso.

Torre, Coaches Get Axed

New York— New York Mets Manager Joe Torre and his entire coaching staff were fired yesterday General Manager Frank Cashen announced.

Torre, who became the seventh manager to fall under the ax this season, was advised Sunday morning of the Mets decision, Cashen said.

Cashen said he made no decision about Torre's replacement other than he wanted to name a replacement before baseball's winter meeting in early December.

"We decided to go in another direction next year," Cashen said. "I have no replacement in mind, and I will talk to more than one candidate."

Cashen said the Mets would hold an organizational meeting next week, then attend the league championship series and the World Series, during which time he would speak with the candidates. Cashen said he gave Torre the option of deciding whether he would manage the Met's last game of the season yesterday.

"I knew he would want to be on the bench for the last game. That's the kind of guy he is," Cashen said. "To say he took it like a pro would be an understatement. I have a great deal of admiration for Joe, and I'm sure we will remain close friends."

While Cashen declined to speculate on Torre's successor, speculation centered on Jim Frey, deposed this season as Kansas City manager, and Dick Williams, who managed the Montreal Expos earlier this year.

Cashen said he began to think of a managerial change during the strike in mid-season, "but I really made up my mind 10 days ago."

Dolphins Left Unbeaten

Miami— The New York Jets and Miami Dolphins battled to a 28-28 overtime deadlock. The tie left the Dolphins unbeaten.

Richard Todd's fourth touchdown pass of the game knotted the score with a minute and nine seconds to go in regular play. The strike was a 36-yard pass to wide receiver Bobby Jones.

On the final possession of the overtime, the Jets moved from their own 35 to the Miami 30 in the deepest penetration by either team in the 15 minute extra period. But Jet place kicker Pat Leahy missed a 48-yard field goal attempt on the last play.

The Dolphins have a 4-0-and-1 record. The Jets are 1-3-and-1. They had won six straight games over the Dolphins.

Miami starting quarterback David Woodley suffered a back injury late in the first quarter when he was hit by Defensive Linemen Mark Gastineau and Joe Klecko. Don Stork, a nine year veteran, replaced Woodley, who did not return to the game.

Runners Take Off in 10K University Run

By Laurie J. Reinschreiber

The 121 racers took off at about 9AM yesterday to commence the second annual University 10,000 meter run sponsored by Statesman, WUSB FM and the Alumni Association. The course of the race was two times around the loop.

Thirty-eight minutes and 27 seconds later Kevin Manghen crossed the finish line in front of the Stony Brook union. Manghen is a transfer student from Suffolk County Community College. This was his first time in a race and he felt it was "very nice".

Placing 27th was former high school star and number one women contestant, Regina Rogers. Rogers is 19 years old and has been running for six years. Her goal is to competively run sometime in the future.

"The first time around was long, but the second time was short," said 12-year-old Robert Martin who placed 16th overall. In his age category Martin took first place, but for Martin this is nothing new, he had been running and winning races all over Suffolk and Nassau counties for some time now.

Second place in the race was David Smith, a Computer Science faculty member, with a time of 38:42. Smith ran the race last year as well and was not as successful. He credits his accomplishment this year to "being a bit fitter." Smith was followed by a Stony Brook student, Dave Chan whose time was 39:08.

Leslie Hickox, a member of Stony Brook's Physical Education department and coordinator of women's and co-ed intramurals participated in the event. Hickox placed 72nd overall. Her career as a runner began in California in 1974 when the students in the class she was a Teaching Assistant (TA) for talked her into it. "I have not stopped running since," said Hickox.

Ninety-eight runners completed the course, at 10:10 AM eight-year-old-William (Rocky) Mathews, the final racer crossed the finish line. Rocky was the youngest runner and he said he had "a good time" and would like to run in more races.

Eight-year-old Rocky Mathews was the youngest entrant in the race.

At 9:01 121 runners started the race.

Patriots Fumble in Homecoming Game

By Lisa Napell

In a brilliant display of ineptitude the Stony Brook Football Patriots were defeated 16-8 Friday by a team that hasn't won a game in two years. Rutgers/Newark players were in tears as they left the field after Stony Brook's homecoming game.

Less than five minutes into the first quarter Stony Brook made the first of many fumbles, on their own 23rd yard line. Within minutes quarterback Ray McKenna was running the quarterback option when he was tackled and the ball was taken away by Rutgers and they scored the games first touchdown. The two point conversion was successful and the score was Rutgers 8, Stony Brook 0.

In the second quarter Ray McKenna scored. He ran the ball in from the seven yard line and followed the touchdown with a pass to flanker Terry Russell for two points. The score was 8-8 when the Rocky Point High School Marching Band took the field at halftime.

Stony Brook received in the third quarter. Rutgers made quick work of Patriot offense and as the defense ran out onto the field alumnus Bruce Schoenberg, who played safety for Stony Brook from 1973 to 1975 said, "Stony Brook exhibits a lot of confidence, they know they can win, even though they're not scoring. They're going out on the field confident and ready."

The Patriot defense was on the field for most of the game, but Rutgers kept away from Stony Brook's most powerful players.

"I feel bad because they were successfully able to keep me out of the game," said defensive end Ron Briggins. "I was told by one of their players after the game that in their scouting report they were told to run away from numbers 89, 53 and 2 which is me, Smitty [tackle Billy Smith] and Dino [linebacker Dino Delany]"

By causing Briggins, Delany and Smith to have to chase plays or merely watch the action elsewhere on the field Rutgers was able to effectively cripple a large part of the Patriots salvation, its defense. "Charlie Nichols played a great game," said Briggins. "They ran at him 90 percent of the time and weren't successful." Nichols is the defensive end who plays opposite Briggins.

It was early in the fourth when Rutgers scored again. A 30 yard pass interference penalty was called on the Patriots which put Rutgers inside the Patriot 30 yard line. The penalty was followed by a roughing the passer call which put Rutgers inside the Patriots 10, at first and goal. Rutgers' offense pushed past Stony Brook's defense to score a touchdown and the two point conversion, making the score, 16-8.

The Patriots next game will be October 10 against Rutgers/Livingston at Rutgers.

Statesman/Gary Higgins
Halfback Billy Flynn and the rest of the Patriots lost by one touchdown during the homecoming night game.
