Candidates Speak on University Issues

By John Buscemi

In the race between incumbent Ferdinand Giese and Neal Capria for the office of Suffolk County Legislator, several of the issues pertain directly to the university. The candidates have both taken stands on:

- The proposed university sewer plant.
- The plan that would allow students to vote in either their campus community or in their home towns.
- A proposed dental clinic to be constructed on campus.
- Controversy regarding the parking fee at the Health Sciences Center.

"As far as the sewer plant is concerned," Giese said, "I've certainly been involved with that for over 14 years...right now they have the discharge into the harbor. We're working it out with the state, the state has agreed to have it on a recharge basis on the university for the university itself. And then, of course, the county will pay the bill but the state would in turn, pick up the tab."

Capria also endorsed the plant's construction. Giese and Capria also agree on the student voting issue. Asked if students should be allowed to vote in their campus community, Giese said he was "absolutely in favor of it. I've said that many, many times. They go out and they buy food and everything else, they've got to pay taxes. All right, true, they're not making a salary. In some cases, they are. But I'm saying they're students but then again, I don't see any reason why the students shouldn't be able to vote."

"There's no question about it, the students should be allowed to vote on the campus," Capria said. And for Incumbent Suffolk County Legislator Ferdinand Giese said he believes that students should have the right to vote in their campus communities. He also has been involved with the creation of a university sewage plant for 14 years.

Neil Capria, vying for the position of Suffolk County Legislature, believes, like his opponent, that students should have the right to vote in their campus communities and also endorses the construction of a sewage plant. Unlike Giese, Capria believes that a dental clinic should be constructed on campus.

CEAS Seeking to Double Faculty in Four Years

The SUSB Senate's final version of a plan to limit enrollment in three College of Engineering and Applied Sciences (CEAS) courses was sent to University President John Marburger Friday, just two days after the SUNY Board of Trustees agreed upon a proposal that would reduce the deficiency of CEAS faculty by about one-half.

The trustees' action promulgated Stony Brook's plans to nearly double engineering and computer science faculty within the next four years. The proposal to increase spending — by 14 percent to $1.1 billion — and give Stony Brook the largest share — $170 million — would, if approved by the governor in January, add 81 additional faculty members to Stony Brook, 28 of them in CEAS. Last year, according to Acting CEAS Dean Stewart Harris, CEAS employed about 75 full-time faculty and the equivalent of about 20 additional positions in part-time faculty. That amounted to a deficiency of 54 faculty members, Harris said.

The trustees' spending plan may, however, run into some snags. One source close to Marburger, who has requested anonymity, said that it is very unlikely that the increase would be approved. Aides of Gov. Hugh Carey, in a Newsday interview, said they are sympathetic to the need for more engineers, but that money will be in short supply because of federal cutbacks and because private schools will also be seeking additional funds.

The deficiency of faculty, and subsequent overcrowding problems that the enrollment limit seeks to solve, has been caused by a general problem in hiring faculty in the past because of budgetary limitations, Harris said. The school must also compete with industry, which is in need of engineers. Harris said that both the region and state are short on engineers, and the demand will continue.

And, it seems, Stony Brook has assumed a disproportionate share of the increased interest in engineering. According to Harris, one-fourth of the 1,250 additional undergraduate engineering majors in New York State were in Stony Brook.

"Stony Brook has really responded to this demand much more than any other school," Harris said. SUNY Buffalo, which, like Stony Brook and SUNY Binghamton was targeted by the trustees for an increase in its engineering budget also accounted for about one-fourth of the increase.

The proposal to increase Stony Brook's output of engineers may have been prompted by complaints from local businessmen, who are facing a shortage of engineers and technicians, according to a recent Newsday article.

Also cited as a reason to improve the engineering school was the desire of university officials to bring the school among the highest rated in the nation. "We're not in the top 10," Harris said, but "we have a good chance to be if we get the resources" needed.

"I'm optimistic in the sense that there are a lot of obstacles that could have occurred at this point in time and haven't yet," he said. "There are still a lot of obstacles to overcome."

Acting CEAS Dean Stewart Harris said that university officials want to bring the engineering school among the highest rated in the nation. "We're not in the top 10," Harris said, but "we have a good chance to be if we get the resources" needed.

Congress Facing Budget Problems

Washington — Congress, not in a mood to raise taxes in 1982, will have to come up with a massive new tax in 1983-84 or perhaps delay the B-1 bomber or MX missile, Senate Finance Committee Chairman Robert Dole said yesterday.

"We're going to have to have some massive spending cuts or some massive tax increases" to fulfill President Reagan's promise of a balanced federal budget in 1984, Dole (R-Kan.) said on NBC's Meet the Press program.

Domestic programs such as food stamps and school lunches cannot absorb much more in cuts, Dole said. In response to a question, he said putting off the B-1 bomber and MX missile — the backbone of Reagan's defense buildup — is "a possibly, particularly on the B-1."

Dole said he is becoming more convinced that there will not be any tax increase in the 1982 fiscal year which began Oct. 1.

"I haven't ruled out any tax increase in 1982, but the prospects are rather dim," he said. "It's more and more difficult to get any consensus on increasing taxes, starting with the President, I might add, on down."

Congressional budget writers begin drafting a binding spending outline this week while still awaiting word from the White House on what specific course of action it wants. Dole said he expects a decision from Reagan within the next 10 days.

"Until we get the direction or some agreement from the President, we're sort of floundering around," he said. "The sooner we get on with it, the better."

White House Spokesman David Gergen said Saturday that Reagan has not accepted the conclusions that higher taxes are necessary or that the administration will not be able to balance the budget by 1984.

Treasury Secretary Donald Regan conceded yesterday that 1982 tax revenues will be lower than what the administration anticipated but said he is still opposed to any tax increase this year.

"It's the Congress that's going to have to come through with some more budget cuts..." Regan said on CBS' Face the Nation program. "To the extent they don't do it, we may have to raise taxes in the years 1983-84."

A draft report prepared for the House Budget Committee estimates, that without further spending cuts or tax increases, the federal deficits could reach $89 billion in 1982, $120.7 billion in 1983 and $133.2 billion in 1984.

Stockholm, Sweden — Swedish authorities said yesterday "there will be some other reason" than the Soviet bureaucracy keeping a skipper aboard his grounded submarine but they dismissed the possibility of using force to end the stalemate off the Baltic coast.

Lt. Cmdr. Pyotr Gushin poked his head out of the sub's turret yesterday for a breath of fresh air, but the 35-year-old skipper was still refusing to come ashore for interrogation despite instructions from the Soviet Embassy here to cooperate with Swedish officials.

The boat ran aground in a restricted area of the Baltic Sea on Tuesday night, about 9½ miles from the Karlskrona naval base, a key defense installation.

Gushin has maintained all along that he is awaiting instructions from his naval home base at Kaliningrad, Swedish officials said. One theory put forward by the Swedish press is that he is kept on board while being interrogated by Kaliningrad via radio, and that the Soviets want their investigation to take precedence over Sweden's demand for a thorough explanation of what the sub was doing poking around in Swedish waters.

Warsaw, Poland — Challenging the Polish Parliament and national union leaders, local Solidarity unionists planned new strikes and vowed yesterday to continue wildcat protests now idling some 250,000 workers across the country.

Prosecutors in the Baltic port of Szczecin began a criminal investigation of local Solidarity leader Marian Jurczyk for a speech he gave calling legislators and the government "traitors to Polish society," the official PAP news agency reported yesterday.

It was the first reported investigation of a senior Solidarity official in the union's 15 months of existence.

Cape Canaveral, Fla. — A $2 million, quick-fix water system - designed to keep space shuttle Columbia from being damaged by its own launch-pad shockwaves - was hooked up yesterday during a countdown notable mostly for its smoothness.

Space agency officials remained optimistic about a Wednesday liftoff, despite temperamental weather conditions. The mission - a rocketship's first return to orbit - is scheduled to last 83 revolutions, or five days, four hours and 10 minutes.

The Columbia is making its second test trip into space and NASA engineers have worked for six months to apply lessons learned from Columbia's April 12 through April 14 maiden mission.

La Junta, Colo. — Speculation that an automatic pilot computer may have contributed to last week's crash of a B-52 jet bomber was dispelled over the weekend by an Air Force spokesman.

Capt. Richard Morallo of Strategic Air Command (SAC) headquarters in Omaha, Neb., said the B-52 which plowed into rangeland during a simulated bombing run Friday, was not equipped with such a computer and that no B-52 can be computer-piloted.

Morallo's statement retracted an earlier statement by Sgt. Bob Murray, a public affairs officer at SAC headquarters. He had said Friday that bombers are routinely piloted by on-board computers during simulated bombing runs so the crew can concentrate on the attack.

Murray said that it would have been standard procedure for a flight computer to be controlling a bomber when it crashed.

But Morallo said Murray probably got the bomber confused with newer FB-111s.

Hempstead — Teachers on strike against four Catholic high schools on Long Island have voted to accept a new contract and go back to work — provided one last point is resolved.

Robert Gordon, lay faculty association president, said the strikers voted 65-21 to ratify a two-year contract with the Diocese of Rockville Centre, containing raises of 10 percent in each year. But Gordon said the ratification is conditional on an agreement with the Diocese on the way four laid-off teachers will be able to return to work.

Agreement on the contract had been stalled for two weeks over the refusal of the Diocese to hire back 10 teachers who had been "permanently replaced" during the strike. Gordon said the Diocese has agreed to hire back six, and to offer the first available openings to the remaining four.

New York — Police said they seized three tons of marijuana with an estimated street value of more than $4 million in two weekend raids in New York state.

More than two and one-half tons of marijuana worth an estimated $3 million on the open market was confiscated Saturday in a morning raid at a home in the Ulster County Town of Gardiner, state police said. Arrested were Mark Wallace, 36, of Gardiner and Jeffery Devor, 34, of nearby Kerhonkson.

Troopers said the "high quality" marijuana was found in the basement of Wallace's home. He was charged with first-degree criminal possession of marijuana and fourth-degree conspiracy, all felonies.

Devor was charged with fourth-degree conspiracy, misdemeanor criminal possession and misdemeanor possession of cocaine, troopers said.

New York — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin dismissed a Saudi Arabian peace proposal for the Middle East yesterday as "a plan for how to liquidate Israel in stages."

Begin, interviewed in Israel on the ABC News program, Issues and Answers said his nation felt threatened by what seems to be increasing support in the United States and Europe for elements of a plan advanced two months ago by Saudi Crown Prince Fahd.

The Saudi plan originally was dismissed by Washington as representing nothing new, but on Friday the State Department said it welcomed some aspects of the eight-point plan and had "some problems" with other parts of it.

Begin said the Senate's approval last week of an $8.5 billion arms deal with Saudi Arabia did not seriously jeopardize the Camp David peace process in the Middle East or Israel's relations with the United States. He also said Israel would withdraw from the Sinai Peninsula next April on schedule.

But he warned that if the Saudi plan "should never be adopted by anybody, then it would be a great obstacle to the peace process...a complete deviation from the Camp David agreement."

The Saudi proposal calls for complete Israeli withdrawal from all lands occupied in the 1967 war, including East Jerusalem, and for creation of a Palestinian state, before talks begin.

Israel will not withdraw to its 1967 boundaries because the longer-range weapons its neighbors have acquired since then enable them to threaten most of Israel's population, Begin said.

He also repeated the long-held Israeli position that a Palestinian state would be "a mortal danger to our country" and become a base for the Soviet Union.

Weather Watch

Compiled by Bob Hassinger and Chris Grassotti

Summary

Today's weather map is rather bland, with a major storm track lying well to our north, placing us in an atmospheric limbo. Aside from a weakening storm in the central states, the nation is dominated by a high pressure system, so for the next few days we can expect seasonable temperatures and little precipitation.

A weak cold front, which moved through the area last night, will provide just enough of a kick to push the low clouds of recent days out to sea. A more potent cold front, now in Canada, will have passed by tomorrow, giving us a cool, crisp Tuesday.

Forecast

Today - Clouds giving way to sun. Seasonable with highs 60-65.

Tonight - Partly cloudy and chilly with the chance of a sprinkle. Lows 39-44.

Tuesday - Mixed sun and clouds, breezy and cool. Highs 53-58.

Wednesday - Variably cloudy, breezy and continued cool. Highs in the mid-50s.

College Bowl to Test Students' Wits

By Ellen Lander

"You don't have to be a brain, but if you have a solid knowledge of one or two topics and quick recall, you'll be an excellent college bowl player," said Kathy Klvana, student coordinator of the Third Annual College Bowl.

Often referred to as "the varsity sport of the mind," the College Bowl will be sponsored by the Office of Student Activities on Nov. 21-23. Registration is open for teams until Nov. 9. A $1 fee per team will be administered.

According to Student Activities Director Kayla Mendelsohn, up to 32 teams, each consisting of four members, an alternate and a coach will be able to sign up. A limit of one graduate student per team will be enforced.

College Bowl which is similar in format and material to the old television show, It's Academic, is a battle-of-wits-versus-time tournament. Each match will have two teams competing against each other in an effort to answer questions correctly in the least amount of time. "The games are really a lot of fun," Klvana said, "and it's not that time-consuming."

The question matter will range from mathematics to science, from nursery rhymes to literature, from current events to just plain trivia. "You don't have to know something about everything," Klvana said, "but if each team member knows a lot about a specific subject, the team will be terrific."

The matches will be presided over by a newly purchased $500 lock-out system. The system, utilizing a buzzer and light device, enables the judges to choose the player who answers the question first. There will also be a panel of judges comprised of faculty members, a scorekeeper and a timekeeper.

The first day of the tournament will be single elimination of teams. The next day will be the quarter and semi-finals, narrowing the competition to two teams. The following evening, these two teams will battle in the finals.

Five people who competed in the weekend-long college bowl intramurals will be chosen by the panel of judges to compete in Stony Brook's All-Star Varsity Team in the regional finals to be held at William Patterson College in New Jersey. According to Mendelsohn, last year's All-Stars competed in the regional finals at Philadelphia's Temple University. Although the Stony Brook team didn't advance to the national finals, the regional contest was chosen for a WCBS radio broadcast, hosted by Art Fleming, of television's game show, Jeopardy.

Mendelsohn said that the questions, prepared by Reader's Digest magazine, are "top secret" and will be kept in a safe until the tournament.

"Some RAs (resident assistants) in different buildings and people from the (Stony Brook) Union have gotten together and made up teams, Klvana said. "We want to get a lot of people involved."

Could You Be Worthy?

He was the last major leaguer to hit over 400. He played for the Boston Red Sox. Can you name him?

She's the only woman to win three Academy Awards for Best Actress. Who is she?

The sun's surface is often marked by sunspots. Are sunspots hotter, colder or of the same temperature as the rest of the sun's surface?

These are some examples of the types of questions that the participants of Stony Brook's Third Annual College Bowl, to be held on Nov. 21-23, will be faced with.

For a visual demonstration, the Office of Student Activities is hosting a simulated College Bowl Tournament tomorrow in the Stony Brook Union's fireside lounge between 12 noon and 1

PM, where faculty and staff will be pitted against students. Various questions will be exemplified and the new $500 lock-out system, which enables judges to choose the player who answers the question first by utilizing a buzzer and light device will be tested, said Student Activities Director Kayla Mendelsohn.

Are you wondering if you would be a worthy candidate for Stony Brook's College Bowl? The answers to the above questions are Ted Williams, Katherine Hepburn and colder, respectively.

If you didn't answer any of the questions correctly, don't despair. According to College Bowl Student Coordinator, Kathy Klvana, "No one is expected to know everything, and you'd be surprised with what your brain has stored up."

Polity to Hold Senate Meeting Tonight

Agenda Includes: Discussion of Calendar Proposals, Committees and RA, MA Rankings

Statesman Darryl J. Rotherforth Polity Senate Pro-tem David Berenbaum said that the proposed 15 week calendar "will give more time to enjoy what Stony Brook has to offer."

By Karen Greenblatt

The Polity Senate will meet tonight at 8 PM in the Stony Brook Union to propose the acceptance of the 15 week semester. The agenda will also include the discussion of the formation of Residence Life and Constitutional committees and Resident Assistants (RAs) and Managerial Assistants (MAs) selection rankings. In addition, officers will be elected to the Budget Committee.

The calendar proposal is that of a 15 week semester that would begin prior to Labor Day and end before Christmas. Senate member Dave Berenbaum said "this allots the same number of lecture hours with more time to do the work."

The calendar proposal is that of a 15 week semester that would begin prior to Labor Day and end before Christmas. "This allots the same number of lecture hours with more time to do the work," said Senate Pro-tem David Berenbaum. "The present 13 week semester gives professors and others more time to do research, while the undergraduates must pay with less work time. A 15 week semester will give more time to enjoy what Stony Brook has to offer." Commuter Senator Babak Movahedi also favors the 15 week semester. He said that since the referendum to adopt a 15 week semester passed by a 2-1 margin, the Senate is obligated to also pass it.

The formation of committees within the Senate will also be covered. Proposals to form a Residence Life Committee and a Constitutional Committee to amend the present Polity constitution will be discussed. Movahedi said he favors the formation of a Constitutional Committee because there are problems with the present constitution. He said the proposal would pass if "some senators pressure other ones. However, many senators are new and are not familiar with the present constitution."

As proposed by Berenbaum, the formation of RA-MA selection ranks will also be discussed. This would "guarantee students the right to choose their staff," Berenbaum said. In the past some RHDs have not allowed student input and have simply chosen to rehire their staff, he explained. He would like to see a campus-wide survey that would allow students to voice their grievances.

Commuter Senator Babak Movahedi also favors the 15 week semester as opposed to the current 13 weeks.

Hearing to Release Medical Records Postponed

By Mitchell Wagner

The hearing on the motion to show cause in the case brought by the estate of undergraduate Sharon Grossman has been postponed until Nov. 12 in order to give both parties additional time to prepare their case. Should this motion be sustained, the university, the University Hospital and the other litigants in the case would be required to turn over Grossman's medical records to her family and lawyers, the firm of Reichenbaum and Silberstein.

Grossman, an undergraduate, died Oct. 18, following an allergy inoculation she received at the Infirmary Oct. 6. John Mehrling, the doctor who administered the injection, is also a litigant in the motion to show cause.

Jerome Silberstein, the attorney representing the Grossmans, said he requested that the university release Grossman's medical records. He said he was originally given permission to see the records, but the university then demanded $1.50 in payment per page, which would have amounted to "several hundred dollars," Silberstein said. Finally, the university told Silberstein that he could not have the papers. It was, Silberstein said, a "very rapid turnaround."

The family then filed a motion to show cause, which would require the university, the hospital, the Stony Brook Volunteer Ambulance Corps, the Infirmary and Mehrling, to show why they should not be required to turn the records over to Silberstein. The date of the hearing was set for Oct. 28, at the Supreme Court of the County of Queens.

According to Silberstein, Gloria Ott, an employee of his law office, went to the Infirmary to serve the papers and was kept waiting for two hours. She was told, Silberstein said, that the doctor who had the authority to accept the papers was in a meeting. When she saw the doctor, she was told that he did not have the authority to accept the papers.

Silberstein said that normal procedure is to immediately accept or refuse the papers. It was, he said, as though they were "afraid" to take action on them at all.

"Before we came to court, I was told by the lawyer for the Ambulance Corps (Stanley Gewanter) that they were not opposing the motion," Silberstein said. Then attorney Michael Baranowicz was retained by the Corps' insurance company, Indemnity of North America. According to Gewanter, the other firm is acting as "attorneys of record" in this case.

Baranowicz said that his firm has "no comment on the Sharon Grossman case."

Silberstein said that Baranowicz asked him whether Silberstein would try to show "gross negligence" on the part of the Ambulance Corps. "There is going to be a bombshell," Silberstein said.

"Preliminary investigations on my part reveal serious departures from accepted procedure," said Silberstein. "There is no question about that."

Weekly Exterminations Seen As Solution to Roach Problem

By Lisa Roman

If you're one of those people who become disgusted every time you see a creepy crawly roach climbing around your room, then you're in good company. The Polity Hotline has received an influx of calls regarding the overabundance of cockroaches on campus, and numerous written complaints which have been filed.

If you're waiting for an answer, look no further. "There is really nothing that can be done but the weekly extermina-tions," said Hotline Coordinator Steve Kohn.

Stage XII has filed the most complaints regarding the roach problem, Kohn said. Other colleges with complaints on file, he said, include O'Neill, Whitman, Mount, Douglass, Hendrix and Kelly A. Kohn said that the general procedure is for students to notify their quad office to have their rooms exterminated. "It's really up to the students," Kohn said. "If one person keeps his room really clean, and the one next door doesn't, then you are still going to have roaches."

Kohn said that Physical Plant Director Dave Thomas had been very helpful in reducing the population of cockroaches. "He has been working right next to us to try to solve the situation," Kohn said. Kohn also said that students who try to take care of the problem themselves do not get great results. The best thing to do, he said, is to "check with the quad offices and make sure that the extermination is being done."

Legislative Candidates Speak on University Issues

obvious reasons. They spend eight to 12 months of the year at that particular location depending on how long they stay on campus.

The candidates differ on whether a dental clinic should be built here. Giese is against the plan but Capria is very much in favor of it. "I think that (opposition to the building) is a professional paranoia on the part of the dentist. It's the old, 'I got my degree and I can practice dentistry and I don't want anybody else to.' The more dentists we turn out, the more lawyers we turn out, the more doctors we turn out, it only benefits the community."

Both Giese and Capria are vehemently opposed to the parking fee at the Health Sciences Center. "I have been writing constantly on that issue because I feel that it should be eliminated," Giese said. Capria said that it is "absolutely absurd that state money is used to put up a hospital that is there to serve the public at large, and then we turn around and charge the employees and the people who use the hospital a fee."

Giese, 67, is currently serving his second term as Suffolk County Legislator, and has been nominated by the Republican, Conservative and Right to Life parties. He is an active participant in community organizations such as the Suffolk Civic Association and the Carriage House Players, and worked for 50 years in banking and exporting.

Capria, 38, has been a lawyer for nine years and has been a member of the Brookhaven Town Council since 1978. Nominated by the Democratic and Liberal parties, he is an executive committee member of the Three Village Civic Association.

Supervisor, Council Seats to be Filled

Henrietta Acampora (R-C)...

In other races in this area, Republican Henrietta Acampora, Democrat John T. Fath and Right to Life candidate John Ray are vying for Brookhaven Town supervisor, a $34,882-a-year position.

Acampora, 59, who has been the town clerk and also has the Conservative Party endorsement, said that the key problem facing the town is how to deal with solid and liquid waste and that a new townhall should be built.

Fath, 35, a lawyer and former assistant district attorney, blames the Republican-controlled town board for the steep town tax increase this year. He said that the Republicans have not kept their promises about dealing with solid and liquid waste. He said that the town should complete its reassessment program to eliminate inequity. However, he does not support full-value assessment.

Ray, 32, a teacher, criticizes the current Republican leadership for letting government become too expensive. He said he will cut spending by 10 percent by eliminating some departments and having others assume their work. He opposes construction of a new town hall.

Nine are vying for three seats on the town council. The six council members, with the supervisor, make laws, hold hearings, and manage the towns' financial matters. Winners of the four-year terms will receive $19,700 a year.

Vying for those positions are Marguerite Felice, George Fuhrmann, Eugene Gerrard, Arthur Giove, Anthony Losquadro, Roger Quinn, Edward Reynolds, Gloria Rosenblum and Donald Zimmer.

ROTC Given 500 Names; Students File Complaint

By the College Press Service

Along with an increasing number of student protests against military recruiters' access to school records, two University of Northern Iowa students say they have formally complained to the federal government about UNI's release of a list of about 500 students to an ROTC recruiting officer.

Sophomores David Burrow and Kris Baughman say they filed a formal complaint on August 28. However, the federal agency to which they complained — the U.S. Dept. of Education's Family Educational Rights and Privacy Act Office (FERPA) — had not yet received the complaint a week later.

Both Burrow and UNI Registrar Robert Leahy say the trouble started last April when Lt. Col. Michael Bartelme, a ROTC officer at the University of Iowa, asked for a list of UNI students with grade point averages over 2.9. Leahy forwarded the listing of each student, the student's GPA, and other directory information to Bartelme, who in turn sent letters inviting the students to join Army ROTC and apply for a ROTC scholarship.

"We just got a little suspicious" that ROTC had gotten what Burrow considered private information because "the letter said something like 'since you have such a good grade point average,'" Burrow recalled.

UNI rules about the privacy of student records say "directory information can be given out only for a legitimate educational interest, and can't be given to a person who is not a part of the university," according to Burrow.

Registrar Leahy says the Iowa ROTC officials are also UNI officials because UNI has just established a ROTC branch on its campus.

"But Lt. Col. Bartelme is not employed by this university," Burrow asserted. "He works at the University of Iowa, not here."

As Leahy recalls it, the UNI Board of Regents had not yet approved establishing the ROTC branch when he released the student records to Bartelme, but that the Faculty Senate had already approved bringing ROTC to UNI. "About five days before the regents were to vote (on the ROTC issue), I helped assist" Bartelme with the student records, Leahy said. "Everyone knew the regents were going to approve it anyway."

He decided to give Bartelme the records even though the regents hadn't voted yet "because the deadline for applying for the scholarships was two days before the Board of Regents was to vote," he said.

Leahy contended that the subsequent controversy was unwarranted because he was helping arrange financial aid, not military recruitment. "The students saw it as a recruitment letter, and it was a scholarship letter." It had been approved by the school's vice president for academic affairs, he added.

But Leahy said he's willing to listen if the government wants to talk to him about it. "If they decide we should have waited five more days, that's fine. In the future, we wouldn't do that."

A statement like that is all Burrow wants. "We want a statement that says, the registrar did act wrongly," he said.

In Washington, D.C., Pat Ballinger, director of the Education Dept.'s FERPA office, said such statements are the usual punishments in cases of improper disclosure, though the government could impose an "ultimate sanction" of "termination of federal education funds." Typically, she said, if a school improperly discloses private student records, "we'll try to call the school first, and attempt informally to change their practices. We don't like to come in as the heavy-handed feds."

Ballinger said that with the advent of military registration, "we get a lot of questions from schools" about what information they should or should not give out to military recruiters. The answer is generally that "the school can release (directory information about the student) to the recruiters, but it's not required to. It's their choice," she explained.

Under the federal Privacy Act, a school must post "public notice" of the items it considers to be "directory information" about the student. A student then has 15 days in which to inform the school that he or she does not want that information released. "It's one of the few instances in the law in which a person's silence is consent," Ballinger pointed out. She says that "a very, very small percentage of students respond" to the public notice by barring the school from releasing the infor-

Unfair Scholarships

In last Wednesday's issue of Statesman, we reported on the institution of a SUNY-wide system of honors scholarships. These scholarships would award up to $2,000 in aid to go toward tuition or housing. In order to be eligible to receive a scholarship, a student must have had at least a 93% average in high school, have ranked at least in the top five percent of his junior class, and have received either an ACT score of 28 or an SAT score of 1250.

Public university systems are designed to allow underprivileged though deserving students a chance at a college education. A merit scholarship such as the one outlined above is well in keeping with that spirit. However, the catch is that SUNY Binghamton expects to give out five scholarships, SUNY Albany, four, and SUNY Buffalo, 20. Stony Brook expects to give only one scholarship. The reason for this is the method by which the funds will be obtained. Each university center is expected to solicit funds from the community, and the total will be matched by the state. However, since donations to colleges come mainly from alumni, and Stony Brook is too new a university to have many wealthy alumni, the scholarship program suffers.

For this reason, the program should be changed to be more fair to the newer universities. Students should not be made to suffer because their university is too young.

Curriculum 2001: Education for the 21st Century

By Clifton R. Wharton, Jr.
(This is the first of two articles excerpted from remarks delivered to Teachers College of Columbia University, March 21, 1981, and to the SUNY Faculty Senate on April 10, 1981, by the SUNY chancellor. It is reprinted from the News, State University of New York, September 1981.)

Future Curriculum: Suggestions

Whether we talk about science and technology, the humanities, or internationalism, the future is now. What worries me is that all too many of our educational institutions appear not to have noticed.

Over the last decade and a half, we have been progressively undercutting the meaningfulness of the bachelor's degree by eliminating basic course requirements in mathematics and the sciences, in foreign language study, and in the humanities. This has taken place for a number of reasons, but what is notable is that it has happened at a time when the direction of social change should have been dictating more science, more foreign language and area studies, and more humanities requirements, not fewer. Everything around us tells us that the 21st century will be more global, requiring knowledge of historical trends, cultures, religions, traditions, and languages of non-Western as well as Western nations. It will be heavily industrialized with great demands for scientific and technological literacy. Its interests and issues will be more complex and more competitive, demanding the analytical and synthesizing skills of the humanist.

We are already behind the times in too many areas, and society is not likely to suspend change and innovation to give us an opportunity to catch up. What is more, developing institutional competences in new disciplines or greatly strengthening competences in existing areas are not actions that can be accomplished overnight. Building a good department of chemical engineering, a good department of African languages, a good department of philosophy or comparative literature takes years under the best of conditions. Moreover, higher education's present poor funding prospects may destroy such departments in a few years.

Form, Sequence, Timing

The explosion of knowledge in many scientific and other fields really means that we need more urgently than ever to rethink the traditional time frame of higher education. A moment's reflection makes it clear that one simply cannot cram into an arbitrary four-year period the same fraction of available knowledge in any given field—or combination of fields—that one used to do 20 or 30 or 40 years ago. Moreover, the range and depth of knowledge that is required to produce today's "educated citizen" and productive employee is far, far greater than what can be acquired in a four-year period. This self-evident fact leads to several questions: How realistic is the four-year baccalaureate? Why not a five-year degree—or a three-year one? Is the baccalaureate even meaningful anymore? I think you could argue with some persuasiveness that today's LL.B. or M.B.A. is actually the equivalent of what a B.A. used to be—at least in terms of comparative employability, prestige, and so on. For many employers, it appears to reflect today's level of mastery which is comparable to yesterday's bachelor's degree.

Given the almost dizzying increase and turnover of knowledge in so many fields, too, it may well be that curricular format is even more challenging than curricular content. Our structure—the four-year bachelor's program, followed by graduate or professional study—has evolved for a number of social and historical reasons, many of which no longer obtain. At least in the immediate future, however, cultural inertia, institutional rigidities, and personal economic circumstances are probably going to work against any full-scale restructuring. We are going to have to think more and more in terms of an undergraduate curriculum that prepares the individual for a lifetime of learning: a curriculum that will serve as the foundation for a lifelong education including both formal, degree-oriented learning and various complementary activities of updating, revision, and, if you will, knowledge-servicing or educational maintenance. Like your automobile, your personal word-processor, or your video disc-player, your undergraduate education is going to need periodic overhauls to keep it viable. What will be demanded, therefore, is a basic curriculum that a computer hardware specialist might call highly compatible with future developments.

Content

What elements of the undergraduate curriculum will enhance its compatibility with future developments and social and technological change? Let me specify a few that seem to me warranted, though I would not by any means claim that these exhaust the possibilities.

- We need to strengthen the general science requirement for lower-division undergraduates. Every student should at least have a summary exposure to the history of science and the scientific and technological "base," if you will, of our society. Unpopular as it is likely to be initially among undergraduates, we need more thorough general preparation in mathematics as well.
- Just as almost every college or university has some sort of orientation to library research (often carrying degree-credit), I think colleges and universities should set up required orientation to computer courses. They would familiarize students both with the range of things computers can accomplish and impart basic skills for using such things as computer data retrieval systems, telephone interfacing, and computer-assisted instruction. If you could overcome the initial psychological resistance, a computer orientation course really ought to include learning at least one practical computer language such as COBOL or BASIC.
- I will argue strongly for the reintroduction of meaningful foreign language competency as a requirement for the bachelor's degree. By "meaningful" I mean just that: a language competency that can be used for communication—whether personal or business. In addition, we need to expand very significantly our institutional capacities in non-Western languages. I realize that not every college or university can be expected to develop strong departments of Eastern Europe or Oriental languages. On the other hand, colleges and universities have to work together so that U.S. students can, in one institution if not in another, acquire communication skills in what I'll call the "emerging tongues" of the world community. In the world of the 21st century, being unable to communicate intelligibly with the Third World will be as much of a disadvantage as being unable to communicate with the West would be in the mid-20th century.

- We need something like a basic course in world history and culture: a serious and nonethnocentric version of the old Western civilization requirement, whose biases are painfully evident in its very name. Among other things, such a course would give undergraduates an understanding of the historical substructure of current international relations, as well as a genuine exposure to non-Western humanities, arts, literatures, and philosophies.

Conclusion

You could probably think of your own potential requirements for a curriculum for the 21st century. What is important is that we recognize the need for curricular modernization and begin working together to accomplish it.

We have to revise our undergraduate core curriculum because if we do not, people will go elsewhere for the knowledge and skills they need to survive and prosper. The growth of educational programs within private industries and corporations is firm evidence for this. If the State University of New York and our sister colleges and universities intend to remain society's central institutions for the preservation, creation, and transmission of knowledge, we are going to have to make sure that the knowledge we provide is that which society needs and wants.

Perhaps the way to begin is by asking a series of questions:

- How will approaches to curricular modernization differ among the various kinds of campuses (university centers, community colleges, arts and science colleges, etc.) that make up the State University? What might the various approaches have in common?
- In an era of scarce resources, how can the State University shape a new course for the future—and is it possible to reconcile such a departure with the major initiatives that SUNY has recently identified as "Priorities for the New Austerity"?
- In framing a curriculum for the 21st century, what new patterns of form, sequence, and timing will be most appropriate? How will two-year institutions mesh with four-year institutions and graduate centers? How can periods of study be compressed, lengthened, or integrated into other ongoing activities such as careers, leisure time, etc.?

Obviously, these questions are only a beginning. Indeed, I welcome responses and comments as part of a dialogue throughout the University community, and I encourage the widest possible participation by all of you who feel that the University's future is as important as its past and present. The future is, after all, at the heart of the challenge posed by "Curriculum 2001: Education for the 21st Century." It is a challenge no educator or institution can afford to ignore.

Nevertheless, the number of inquiries about military and government access to student records has increased since military registration began in July 1980, according to both Ballinger and Trudy Haydn, a privacy expert with the American Civil Liberties Union in Washington.

The Selective Service System initially toyed with the idea of using student records to track 18-year-olds who failed to register, recalled Joan Lamb, a Selective Service spokeswoman. "It was discussed as one of many ways of acquiring" a list of 18-year-olds, she said. "But we haven't gone any further with that. We have no intentions of trying to secure school records," she explained. Instead, "we're waiting for a bill to get out of Congress" that would allow Selective Service access to Social Security numbers as a way of finding non-registrants.

Lamb emphasized that Selective Service is an independent agency which has nothing to do with military recruitment or ROTC, which are administered by the U.S. Dept. of Defense.

Burrow, for one, understands the difference. He classed his opposition to giving student records to ROTC not as part of the resistance to military registration, but as an anti-ROTC effort. He said he's been part of the two-year effort to keep ROTC off the UNI campus. As vice president of the student government, he's helped pass "five or six" student government resolutions against allowing ROTC on the campus.

Until last spring, the Faculty Senate had also voted against ROTC. In a change of heart, however, the Faculty Senate approved ROTC, which was finally sanctioned by the regents in April. ROTC officially begins on the campus this fall.

Public Downplay Of Kennedy Denied

Cambridge, Ma. - An official of Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government emphatically denied the university is attempting to publicly downplay the Kennedy name in order to raise more funds for the school.

"We absolutely and unconditionally state there will be no attempt to change the name of the Kennedy School of Government," said Ira Jackson, the school's associate dean.

Harvard's 1981 course catalog contains the acronym "HSG-Harvard School of Government," a change from the "KSG-Kennedy School of Government" listing of previous years.

The change led to widespread speculation - including some by Sen. Edward Kennedy's staff - that Harvard might be deliberately minimizing the former president's connection with the school in an effort to lure conservatives to contribute to an ongoing $10 million fund-raising drive.

The Harvard School of Government was officially renamed the John F. Kennedy School of Government in 1966.

"The catalog change to HSG was simply a style change," Jackson insisted, "so the abbreviation would conform to those of other schools listed, such as Harvard Law School [HLS] and Harvard Medical [HMS]. It doesn't suggest or imply any change in the Kennedy name, which is quite visible and quite proudly displayed in the catalog."

Jackson noted "there has been a dramatic increase in donations for the school" ever since the Kennedy name was added.

"It's just logically impossible and politically impossible to change the name," said H. James Brown, a professor at the Kennedy School. The only real issue, he claimed, is one of clarity.

"If you're at Harvard," said Brown, "you refer to it as the Kennedy School. If you're away from Harvard and you mention it, they don't know what you're talking about... they think it's an entirely separate university. Even my kids get confused," he laughed.

Student Health Plan Excludes Abortions

Princeton, N.J. - Student fees at Princeton University will no longer be used to fund abortions, according to a new compromise adopted by the school's Trustee Committee on Health and Athletics.

Under the university's existing system, one dollar out of each Princeton student's mandatory health care fee is diverted to finance student abortions - a policy that has aroused lengthy controversy among administrators, students and faculty members. The new plan takes money from the school's permanent health service endowment, thus avoiding involuntary student funding of abortions.

"A lot of students have objected to providing even $1 for abortions," said Director of Health Services Louis Pyle, Jr., who stresses his staff only refers students to private physicians and clinics. The cost of an abortion is fully covered by the university's insurance program.

"The initial suggestion was simply to rebate the $1 upon a student's request," Pyle relates. "But the administration felt this would set a bad precedent for the overall comprehensive student fee. They felt if we made this kind of refund, someone else could object to paying a fee for contact sports, a Christian Scientist could object to the entire health care fee, and so on."

"Conversely, our healthcare endowment was provided by individual and family donors years ago, with no restrictions as to its usage," said Pyle.

The ample fund, which amounts to "at least 20 times the $1 per student abortion fee," Pyle says, will go to improving the birth control program at the health center as well as to reimbursing students for abortion expenses.

Pyle hopes the solution will satisfy all parties. "Word leaked out on this early, and the initial response from the Right-to-Life people was that this was a satisfactory solution." Pyle asserted that Princeton University is ready to withstand all pressures created by its abortion decision. Though the school remains ready to talk about funding mechanisms, it "will in no way back off from comprehensive care, including pregnancies."

Superman, also known as mild-mannered reporter Clark Kent, worked for the Daily Planet. Students at Richard J. Daley City College work for the Daley Planet and D.C. Comics attorney Louise Danbeck said that the Daley Planet infringes on its trademarks in the Superman adventures and the company has sued the newspaper to get it to change its name.

Daley Planet Sued

Chicago, Ill. - D.C. Comics and its parent company, Warner Communications, have sued a student newspaper to get it to change its name.

D.C. Comics, according to attorney Louise Denbeck, maintains that the paper at Richard J. Daley City College, called the Daley Planet, infringes on its trademarks associated with Superman, Clark Kent, Lois Lane, Jimmy Olsen and Perry White, of course, all worked at the fictional Daily Planet in the Superman adventures.

Denbeck said the suit was filed after "we pleaded with" the paper to change its name. With its current masthead, the paper is "diluting and destroying a very valuable trademark," he said.

"I think we're being more adult about this than Warner is," replied Daley Planet editor Rhonda Forrest. "For them to come down on us like that is really nitpicky."

Court Gives State U's Some Budget Relief

Seattle, Wa. - Washington State and the University of Washington, along with other state colleges, won a reprieve of sorts when the state Supreme Court denied primary and secondary schools the chance to escape Gov. John Spellman's budget-cutting axe.

In September, Spellman abruptly announced an immediate 10 percent state budget cut. For the University of Washington, the budget cut translated into a plan to save $33 million by firing 260 faculty members and 420 staffers, and by gradually dropping 4,000 students from the rolls.

Both universities have already declared fiscal emergencies, which means they can fire tenured faculty if necessary.

But UW President William Gerberding estimated that if the lawsuit filed by primary and secondary schools, which sought to escape the budget axe altogether, succeeded, UW's share of cuts could rise to over $60 million.

The state Supreme Court denied the primary and secondary schools' petition to avoid the cuts, although it left open the possibility of further action in lower courts. Lawyers for the schools said that the court's denial means "the dismantling of the state's school system."

On the same day, Gerberding hinted that some legislators are willing to appropriate relief funds for all levels of education. The legislature reconvenes in early November.

Spellman's cuts were an attempt to balance a state budget depleted by severe economic conditions in the lumber industry.

Packers Outscore Seahawks

David Whitehurst threw for three touchdowns as the Green Bay Packers outscored the Seattle Seahawks 34-24.

Two of Whitehurst's scoring passes went to James Lofton — including a 38-yarder late in the third period that put the Packers ahead to stay. Whitehurst also snuck over from the one for another touchdown, and Jan Stenrud booted a pair of field goals in the final two minutes.

Seattle's Jim Zorn threw for two touchdowns in the first half, which ended in a 21-all tie. But after intermission, the Green Bay defense limited the Seahawks to a 54-yard field goal by Efran Herrera.

The Packers are now 3-6, while the Seahawks fell to 2-7.

Cowboys Defeat Eagles

Danny White passed 17 yards to Doug Cosbie and Tony Dorsett dashed 9 yards for another touchdown to highlight a fourth-period comeback as the Dallas Cowboys defeated the Philadelphia Eagles 17-14 in a key National Football Conference game yesterday.

Both teams are 7-2 in the National Football League's National Football Conference East and they meet again in Dallas Dec. 13.

Bills Beat Browns

Joe Ferguson hit Joe Cribbs with three touchdown passes to lead the Buffalo Bills to a 22-13 victory over the Cleveland Browns.

Ferguson hit Cribbs with scoring strikes of 58 and 15 yards to give the Bills a 13-3 halftime lead. His 60-yarder to Cribbs put the game away after the Browns had drawn to within 15-13 on Brian Sipe's touchdown pass and Matt Bahr's second field goal.

The Buffalo Defense sacked Sipe six times for losses and added two points by recording a safety in the third period.

Buffalo is 6-and-3, while the Browns dropped to 4-and-5.

Jets Crush Giants

East Rutherford, N.J. — Pat Leahy's four field goals, Richard Todd's 39-yard touchdown pass to Wesley Walker and a defense which sacked New York Giants quarterback Phil Simms nine times carried the New York Jets to a 26-7 victory yesterday.

Leahy's kicks of 37 and 33 yards and Walker's catch on the first play after the Giant's Alvin Garrett had fumbled a punt all came in the second quarter. They gave the Jets 13-0 lead, all the points they needed to raise their National Football League records to 4-4-1. The Giants are 5-4.

Leahy's field goals of 42 and 38 yards in the second half were sandwiched around the Giant's only touchdown (TD). Beasley Reese's 4-yard run with a fumble by Jets punter Chuck Ramsey.

The Jets' nine sacks, four 71 yards in losses, were one short of their club record. And Darrol Ray, whose first-half deflection prevented a Giants' touchdown on a fake field goal, intercepted Simms and sprinted 64 yards for the Jets' final TD with 4:16 left to play. It was Ray's sixth interception and second touchdown of the season. The beleaguered Simms completed 22 of 35 passes but for only 182 yards. Todd completed 13 of 30 for 207.

Walker made his TD catch as he sprinted down the left sideline into the end zone, several strides behind Terry Jackson. The play came right after Jesse Woodring slammed into Garrett and Jesse Johnson recovered for the Jets.

Terry Jackson also kept another Jets scoring line alive, getting flagged for pass interference against Lam Jones on a third-down incompleting, five plays before Leahy's 42-yarder made it 16-0. The meeting of the cross-river rivals was only the third in the regular season since the National Football League and the American Football League merged in 1970. The Jets have won two of the games.

Giants failed to cross mid-field until two minutes remained in the first half when, on the first play following Walker's scoring catch, Simms passed 30 yards to Johnny Perkins. A 15-yard personal foul against cornerback Bobby Jackson on the play put the ball on the Jets' 34-yard line.

Cardinals Defeat Pats, 27-9

Cards' 11 yard line. At this point the Patriots decided to go for a field goal so Kicker Gus Baco was called onto the field and kicked an 11 yard field goal, making the score for the half 3-0.

In the fourth quarter the Patriots scored their touchdown. With 10:08 left in the game, Left Halfback Jorge Taylor made a three yard run to score. The Patriots attempt at a two point conversion was unsuccessful and the half ended with the Patriots 9 and the Cardinals 0.

Unfortunately for the Patriots, one must add the score from both halves of a football game when tallying up the final score, so although they won the second half the Cardinals won bigger in the first and the actual game score must go down in the history books as 27-9, Cardinals.

Statistically the Patriots offense gained a total of 212 yards; 140 rushing and 72 passing, while the defense let up 425 yards; 255 passing and 170 rushing. The games leading tackle was Defensive Captain Safety Brian Fabricant, he was followed by Linebacker Brian O'Hadley, Defensive Lineman Mike Infranco, Linebacker Gary Gibson and Brusca who was injured in the fourth quarter.

The Patriots next game will be Saturday at home against Norwalk at 1:30 P.M.

Womens Volleyball Team Beats Lehman and Fordham

By Teresa C. Hoyla

The Stony Brook Volleyball team seems to be approaching its goal of entering into the State Tournament as they defeated two more teams Wednesday night. They defeated Lehman College 15-12, 15-11, and Fordham College, 8-15, 15-8, and 15-9.

Coach Teri Tiso said "We had to make adjustments as Michelle Siroky was not there." Her absence was well covered by Lori Horn, who is not an experienced player, but according to Tiso, "She has learned a lot and I'm very pleased with her." Ruth Levine also put in an excellent effort. "She played the best I've seen from her all year," Tiso said.

Some new strategy also helped the Pats to a victory. Janet Byrne and Lauren Beja "worked well together" as they used some new setups that the team had been practicing. Byrne also teamed up with Carol Tompkins to drive some excellent spikes.

"We're spiking out of the middle now, and we're coming out better with more strength in the middle line," Tiso said. She also said that "the individual and team defense had improved."

The team has not played a game in 10 days and although they won, Tiso said they had a "shaky start because the team was not receiving serves well." They managed to attack Fordham well, though, and come from behind and defeat Lehman as well.

The Pats now have a record of 14-7. Tiso hopes this will help push them into the state and regional tournaments.

"I am pleased with their intensity," Tiso said. "They showed a lot of intensity and it's something they need to perform well at the state tournaments."

The Stony Brook Volleyball team has been invited to the Queens Invitational Tournament this weekend.

Lack of Heart Causes Pats' Defeat

By Lisa Napell

Rochester— There were two football games Saturday. The Stony Brook Patriots were at one and the St. John Fisher Cardinals were at both.

During the first game there were 22 jerseys on the field at all times, but only the white and green Cardinal jerseys seemed to have anyone in them. The red Patriot jerseys appeared empty. That is why the Cardinals were able to defeat the Patriots. In the second half, the Patriots finally arrived, and they won. Unfortunately, when the two halves were combined, the Patriots had not come back far enough to compensate and the final score was Cardinals 27, Patriots 9.

While many things help a football club, the club is rendered ineffective when one major ingredient is missing. That ingredient is heart, and it is something the Patriots have in abundance. That's what makes them the ball club they are, and that is what was missing in the first half of Saturday's game.

There was only one hopeful moment in the first half and even that which started out so well came to naught. About halfway into the quarter Cornerback Tommy Brusca made an interception and returned it 20 yards. However, when the Patriot offense took over they failed to score.

Stony Brook's Dino Delany soars high to bat down a pass at the game against Manhattan last week. The Pats lack of heart in the first half of the game this week caused them to lose to the Cardinals.

In the second quarter things went from bad to worse as the previously scoreless Cardinals proceeded to walk over the Patriots as if they weren't there and scored 27 points in 15 minutes. The Cards first two touchdowns were scored on runs of one and 32 yards, respectively, and the second two were scored on 16 and 91 yard passes. Three of the Cards extra point kicks were good and the Patriots blocked the last with only six seconds to go in the half.

Halftime in this game marked more than the rest usually given to each team between halves. It marked the entrance of the Patriots into a new game.

When the game resumed the Patriots took control right from their opening kickoff.

Within the first two minutes of play Defensive End Charlie Nicholas caught a Cardinal punt and ran the ball up to the

Tennis Team Splits Their Two Matches

"We were wiped out in Wednesday's match," Women's Tennis Coach Herb Edelstein said. "However, we crushed our opponents in Saturday's match."

The Patriots lost Wednesday to West Point, 7-0. Stony Brook "played well, but were not able to match up to West Point's ability," Edelstein said. "West Point is an extremely strong team and is ranked as one of the best in the country. Their players are all on athletic scholarships, contrary to Stony Brook," he said.

The Patriots did not let West Point get them down, as they defeated Staten Island College Saturday, 9-0. Staten Island proved to be no competition to the Patriots, and all of the matches were completed within one or two sets. "All of the girls played exceptional; it was a very one sided match," Edelstein said.

The Patriots record stands at 5-4. They will compete against Concordia College Thursday in the last match of the season.

Patriots X-Country Places Eighth

By Laurie J. Reinschreiber

In the New York State Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women, the women's cross country team placed eighth out of nine teams in Division III. Last year they defeated all the teams in front of them excluding Army and Harwick Colleges.

"We were not surprised we had a hint of it at Harwick," said Coach Paul Dudzick. "We improved a lot, but the other schools improved much more than we did."

First place was captured by Army. Host of the meet, SUNY at Binghamton came in second and third place went to SUNY at Oswego.

Donna Lyons ran in first for Stony Brook and 26th in the meet, with a time of 20:06. "This was her best race because of the difficult course, last week she ran a flat course in 20:04. She just keeps on improving all the time," Dudzick said.

Second in for Stony Brook was Captain Elena Naughton. Her time was 21:14 and placed 61st in the race. One second later she was followed by Lisa Zagury, who was third for the Pats and 62nd in the race. Debbie Murphy crossed the finish line in the 63rd position which was fourth for Stony Brook, with a time of 21:17.

"Last year we were confident that this year we would show up in the top three in the States, but we were fooled. This is just a small example of what is going on in women's athletics today," commented Dudzick.

Traditionally on the way home from the New York State Championships, the following years' captain is selected. The 1982 captain for the cross country team is Mary Bianco.

Next weekend, the team competes in the North Eastern Association of Intercollegiate Athletics for Women at Worcester Massachusetts.
