This is the weekly program - SUNY Side Up

Hi, everybody, this is Al Oickle at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. We'll be talking on this program with six of the many hundreds of people who have been helping prepare the campus for the arrival of 16,000 students this week here at Stony Brook.

As we head into the Labor Day weekend, we can feel the pace on this magnificent campus quicken. The early arrivals have already begun moving into dormitories---the first of more than 7,000 campus residents. Staff members have worked out dozens of ways to help everyone get settled...in their dorms, in their classrooms, and in the major public facilities. ~~such as the library and the~~

~~Fine Arts Center.~~

During the past week or so, I have been very busy ~~meeting~~ talk with many of these people on the telephone. I've talked with people in housing, physical plant, freshman orientation, public safety, the library and the Fine Arts Center. Well, why don't you just eavesdrop for the next few minutes as I talk with them.

INTRO of Barbara Brand

AFO: One of the busiest places at the State University of New York at Stony Brook during the first ~~two~~ week of the new semester is the Frank Melville Jr. Memorial Library. That vast reservoir of resources is prepared to welcome and help newcomers and ~~as well as~~ returning students, faculty and staff. ~~The~~ An information desk will be open ~~to~~ the public in the Galleria, the main concourse during the next week or so. The busiest place in the library may be the Reference Department. I talked with ~~Bar~~ Dr. Barbara Brand, the department head, about a new video display terminal and electronic computer system available to library users.

Almost all incoming students have attended an orientation program prepared by the office headed by Dr. Richard Solo. I expect, Dr. Solo, that the students themselves would tell us that they benefit from such orientation.
