

HERE AT STONY BROOK - Nov. 18, 1982 - page 2

A professional prize fighter named Ray (Boom Boom) Mancini landed a large number of punches on the head of a Korean boxer named Duk Koo Kim in a match in November. In the [REDACTED] 14th round, Mancini launched a fierce attack to Kim's head and the Korean boxer fell to the canvas, unconscious. [REDACTED] Soon after, Duk Koo Kim was pronounced [REDACTED] brain dead and millions of fight fans--and opponents---began a serious discussion of how legal fighting might be changed to help prevent ring deaths.

Lyle Hallowell is an assistant professor in the Department of Sociology, here at Stony Brook. He has made a study of violence in sports. Dr. Hallowell, is there any sport more violent than boxing?

INTERVIEW HALLOWELL: Causes of violence
Methods of prevention attempted
Possible ways to improve conditions

control

THEME UP AND UNDER

That's it for another Here at Stony Brook. I'm Al Oickle. Until next time, [REDACTED] so long, everybody.

X XXXX

A professional prize fighter named Ray (Boom Boom) Mancini ~~kn~~ landed a large number of punches on the head of a Korean boxer named Duk Koo Kim in a match in November. In the ~~ix~~ ~~ix~~ 14th round, Mancini launched a fierce attack to Kim's head and the Korean boxer fell to the canvas, unconscious. ~~ix~~ Soon after, Duk Koo Kim was pronounced ~~ix~~ brain dead and millions of fight fans--and opponents---began a serious discussion of how legal fighting might be changed to help prevent ring deaths.

Lyle Hallowell is an assistant professor in the Department of Sociology, here at Stony Brook. He has made a study of violence in sports. Dr. Hallowell, is there any sport more violent than boxing?

INTERVIEW HALLOWELL: Causes of violence
Methods of prevention attempted
Possible ways to improve conditions

THEME UP AND UNDER

That's it for another Here at Stony Brook. I'm Al Oickle. Until next time, ~~ix~~ so long, everybody.

x xxxx