

HERE AT STONY BROOK - Monday, Sept. 13, 1982

THEME MUSIC...under and fade

AFO: "Every argument in our unsettled culture comes eventually to rest at the schoolhouse door. Inside, after all, we are forming the future. The bell has rung again and the wrestling match has begun again."

Hi, everybody, this is Al Oickle. This is the weekly radio program, Here at Stony Brook. I'm with the University News Services at the State University of New York, here at Stony Brook.

That opening quotation was written by Ellen Goodman, the nationally syndicated columnist from the Boston Globe. Indeed, the school bells have rung again during the past week and the schoolhouse doors have opened across the land for another academic year. Here at Stony Brook, more than 16,000 students have begun the Fall semester. On hand to greet them were two vice provosts, the first permanent officers in those roles under an academic reorganization. Today, on Here at Stony Brook, we will be talking with the vice provosts about what higher education is doing these days to help in ^{what} ~~the~~ Ellen Goodman describes as "forming the future." Later, Sue Risoli will present the weekly Stony Brook calendar and talk with Claire Dorgan about a campus program this coming Sunday featuring dancer-choreographer Peter Gennaro, and possibly Gwen Verdon.

MUSIC UP and fade

AFO: The missions of a University are teaching, research and public service. With us today to talk about the goals of higher education in this changing world are Stony Brook's two vice provosts: David C. Glass, vice provost for graduate studies and research, and Graham B. Spanier, vice provost for ~~curriculum and instruction~~ ^{undergrad studies}. We'll meet Dr. Glass later,

MORE

HERE AT STONY BROOK - Sept. 13, 1982 - 2

Dr. Spanier comes to Stony Brook from The Pennsylvania State University, where ^{he} has served as associate dean for resident instruction. He is a family sociologist, demographer and therapist, and has an appointment at Stony Brook also as professor of sociology and psychiatry. Dr. Homer Neal, provost at Stony Brook, said of Dr. Spanier's appointment: "His breadth of experience as a scholar and administrator and his intense interest in undergraduate education uniquely fits the needs of our institution in this most critical area."

2:30

INTERVIEW DR. SPANIER:

- Role of undergraduate education
- Trace changes of recent years:
 - Classical
 - Liberal arts
 - Vocational
 - New liberal arts
- Co-curricular and extra-curricular
- Internships; practicum
- Funding
- New and creative

11:00

AFO: This is the radio program, Here at Stony Brook. I'm Al

Oickle. Today's subject is education, appropriate to the back-to-school season. We've been talking with Graham Spanier, vice provost for

~~undergraduate studies~~
~~and instruction~~ at Stony Brook. Now we turn to David C. Glass, who is vice provost for graduate studies and research, here at Stony Brook.

Dr. Glass is a social psychologist and psycho-physiologist. During the past year he has served as president of the Academy of Behavioral Medicine Research. He comes to Stony Brook from the City University of New York, where he was director of the Laboratory of Biobehavior at the CUNY Graduate Center. Provost Neal has said, "We are looking forward to his leadership in this most central component of Stony Brook's academic activities."

MORE

HERE AT STONY BROOK - Sept. 13, 1982 - 3

INTERVIEW DR. GLASS:

- Role of graduate education
- Trace changes of recent years:
 - Vocationalism
 - Research
 - Liberal arts
 - Older students
- Role of research
- Funding
- New and creative (Biotech Park)

THEME UP and fade

20:00

AFO: Each week, Here at Stony Brook brings ~~_____~~ a listing of special events, open to the public, coming during the next week.

Here to tell us about these events, and to introduce her guest, is Sue Risoli, my colleague at University News Services, here at Stony Brook.

SR: Interview Claire Dorgan

THEME UP and fade

28:45

AFO: Next week, on Here at Stony Brook, we will take a look at the New York State primary elections, scheduled Sept. 23. Joining us for the preview will be Howard A. Scarrow, a professor in Stony Brook's Department of Political Science, and John V. N. Klein, a lecturer in Political Science and former county executive in Suffolk County, on Long Island. With them we will look at some of the candidates and the issues in the primary elections, and even talk a bit about the system of popular elections and how that system functions in our democracy. We'll also have Jacob Javits talking about his Senate career. And on the calendar portion of Here at Stony Brook, Sue Risoli will be talking with Professor Les Paldy about the new Center for Arms Control, Disarmament and Peace Studies, here at Stony Brook. Until next week then, this is Al Oickle. So long, everybody.

XXXXX

THEME UP and OUT