THEME UP AND OUT

AFO           The State University of New York at Stony Brook is observing its 25th anniversary this fall. It was just a quarter century ago that 144 students enrolled in the new campus on Long Island---then situated in Oyster Bay. As part of the silver anniversary observance, President John H. Marburger and Provost Homer Neal gave major addresses last week at an Academic Assembly.

Hi, everybody, this is Al Oickle. I'm with the University News Services, here at Stony Brook. Today on the program called "Here at Stony Brook," we will hear some of what Dr. Marburger and Dr. Neal had to say to the faculty and to the greater campus community. Later, I will conclude an interview on the subject of economics in an interview with Professor William Dawes of the Economics Department, here at Stony Brook. ~~Sue~~ Sue Risoli will be along later to give us a run-down on some of the campus events open to the public, and she will be talking with Michael McHale, <sup>assistant</sup> ~~xxxxxxx~~ director of the Admissions Office, here at Stony Brook.

THEME UP AND OUT

AFO           Several hundred faculty gathered at Stony Brook on a bright autumn day reminiscent of the first days of the new State University campus on Long Island 25 years ago. The faculty were here at Stony Brook to review that quarter-century and to consider some goals for the years ahead. Provost Homer Neal explained it this way.

THEME UP AND OUT

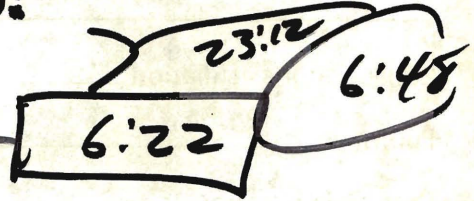

AFO LIVE Last week we talked with Professor William Daves of the Department of Economics, here at Stony Brook. We defined such complicated matters as recessions, inflation, depressions and Reaganomics. This week we conclude this lesson in practical economics by talking about what's happening and how the laypeople can try to make some sense out of it all. we start w/A report by President REAGAN!
