HERE AT STONY BROOK - Monday, April 25, 1983

THEME UP AND OUT

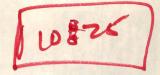

The Soviet Union has, in some ways, replaced the mystical Far East as a land of mystery. Although the Iron Curtain has been lifted somewhat, Western world still knows the U. S. S. R. only through glimpses and best guesses.

Hi, everybody. This is Al Oickle. I'm with the Office of University News Services at the State University of New York at Stony Brook and the name of this program is "Here at Stony Brook." Today we will be talking with two people who can offer Americans some special views of the mysterious European-Asian country known as the Soviet Union. First we will chat with Lazar Gosman, the noted Russian violinist who came to this country to live in 1977 and to Stony Brook to teach in 1982. Later in the program, Lester Paldy will tell us about a series of talks this spring, here at Stony Brook, by three ranking officials in the Soviet Mission to the United Nations. We don't promise to life the Iron Curtain much, but we hope you'll stay turned for some interesting glimpses.

THEME UP AND OUT

Lazar Gosman spent the first 50 years of his life in Russia. When he left, in 1977, he and his wife, Eugenia, brought with them the $70 each that the government allowed. Behind them they left the home they had spent 20 years making comfortable and pleasant, and their careers---she's a language teacher, he's a violinist. Professor Gosman, it was not a decision made quickly or lightly, was it.

MORE

HERE AT STONY BROOK - April 25, 1983 - page 2

INTERVIEW GOSMAN:	- Leaving Russia - Why? How?
	- The friends left behind.
	- The friends in the U.S.
	- Immigration to U.S., St. Louis, Stony Brook
	- What's ahead? - New Home
	- Naturalization
20:00	- Dec. concert at SUSB

THEME UP AND OUT

Lester G. Paldy is dean of the Center for Continuing here at Stony Brook. And he is so much more. He is a military veteran, a physics teacher and an activist for peace. Nearly two years ago, he was the driving force behind the efforts that resulted in the formation at the State University of New York at Stony Brook of a group a place known as the Arms Control, Disarmament and Peace Studies R sources Center. The Center has sponsored nearly a score of public lectures since then. Now, this spring, the Center has arranged what may be its most important series. Three officials from the Soviet Mission to the United Nations will be at Stony Brook in the next few weeks to talk about Soviet policies and views on arms centrel, disarmament and peace. The other day, Dean Paldy stepped by my office to talk about the series. As telephones rang and typewriters buzzed, we discussed the series, here at Stony Brook.

TAPE OF AFO/PALDY

THEME UP AND UNDER

HERE AT STONY BROOK will return next Monday at 6 o'clock on WUSB-FM, 90.1. We've lined up some interesting guests for the entire month of May. I hope you will join us. Until then, this is Al Oickle. So long, everybody.

to Mcttanico Jub?

HERE AT STONY BROOK - Monday, April 25, 1983

THEME UP AND OUT

The Soviet Union has, in some ways, replaced the mystical Far East as a land of mystery. Although the Iron Curtain has been lifted somewhat, Western world still knows the U. S. S. R. only through glimpses and best guesses.

Hi, everybody. This is Al Oickle. I'm with the Office of University News Services at the State University of New York at Stony Brook and the name of this program is "Here at Stony Brook." Today we will be talking with two people who can offer Americans some special views of the mysterious European-Asian country known as the Soviet Union. First we will chat with Lazar Gosman, the noted Russian violinist who came to this country to live in 1977 and to Stony Brook to teach in 1982. Later in the program, Lester Paldy will tell us about a series of talks this spring, here at Stony Brook, by three ranking officials in the Soviet Mission to the United Nations. We don't promise to life the Iron Curtain much, but we hope you'll stay turned for some interesting glimpses.

THEME UP AND OUT

Lazar Gosman spent the first 50 years of his life in Russia. When he left, in 1977, he and his wife, Eugenia, brought with them the $70 each that the government allowed. Behind them they left the home they had spent 20 years making comfortable and pleasant, and their careers---she's a language teacher, he's a violinist. Professor Gosman, it was not a decision made quickly or lightly, was it. HERE AT STONY BROOK - April 25, 1983 - page 2

THEME UP AND OUT

20:00

INTERVIEW GOSMAN: - Leaving Russia - Why? How? - The friends left behind. - The friends in the U.S. - Immigration to U.S., St. Louis, Stony Brook - What's ahead? - New Home - Naturalization - Dec. concert at SUSB

Lester G. Paldy is dean of the Center for Continuing back tion here at Stony Brook. And he is so much more. He is a military veteran, a physics teacher and an activist for peace. Nearly two years ago, he for the was the driving force behind the efforts that resulted in the formation at the State University of New York at Stony Brook of a group, a place known as the Arms Control, Disarmament and Peace Studies REsources Center. The Center has sponsored nearly a score of public lectures since then. Now, this spring, the Center has w arranged what may be its most important series. Three officials from the Soviet Mission to the United Nations will be at Stony Brook in the next few weeks to talk about Soviet policies and views on arms control, disar mament and peace. The other day, Dean Paldy stopped by my office to talk about the series. As telephones rang and typewriters buzzed, we discussed the series, here at Stony Brook.

TAPE OF AFO/PALDY

THEME UP AND UNDER

HERE AT STONY BROOK will return next Monday at 6 o'clock on WUSB-FM, 90.1. We've lined up some interesting guests for the entire month of May. I hope you will join us. Until then, this is Al Oickle. So long, everybody.

THENG UP + OUT RERECTION D