CONVERSATIONS UNLIMITED - MONDAY, JAN. 6, 1986

INTRO UP AND UNDER

Hi, everybody. Welcome to the second half of our fifth annual review of the year just ended. Like the others, we have changed only the identification of the year, and so we call this attempt to review the year's happenings, "Did Civilization Advance in 1985?" This is a sometimes serious, sometimes light-hearted review. We make no claims to having all the considered judgment in the world. As we pointed out last ~~wek~~^{week}, our listeners may be better qualified than we are to say what is important and what is not in the grand scheme of life. Knowing that won't stop us, however. We intend to consider the events of 1985, big and little, and try to bring them into a perspective that makes some sense.

With me for the fourth year in a row are two faculty members at the State University of New York at Stony Brook. Dr. Bruce Hare is assistant professor of sociology whose research interests cover education. Dr. Judith Wishnia is assistant professor in social sciences, an historian and active in Stony Brook's Women's Studies Program.

Joining this panel is Mitchell Horowitz, managing editor of the campus newspaper at Stony Brook, called Statesman. Mitch is a ~~sophomore~~^{sophomore} English major from New Hyde Park, N.Y.

Last week, we went over some of the subjects in education, health, politics and other fields. Today, we'll start off by reviewing what I'm calling human values. That's a way to bring under one title many subjects that deal with how we live with each other and how we treat each other. Let's start off, panel, by reviewing what happened in the way of terrorism.

Dr. Hare? Dr. Wishnia? Mitch Horowitz?

We'll take a short break now. When we return, we'll be talking about what I call "War and Peace." Stay with us, please.

BRIDGE MUSIC UP AND UNDER

Hi. I'm Al Oickle, and I'm at the State University of New York at Stony Brook, where we are conducting our annual review of world events for 1985. With me are Professors Judith Wishnia and Bruce Hare and a student newspaper editor, Mitchell Horowitz. We're going to turn our attention now to what I call "War and Peace." Let's begin this final segment of our marathon, panel, by reviewing the 1985 winner of the Doublespeak Award.
