SAVE THE DATE

Last semester, CELT initiated a series entitled "The Many Faces Of Problem Solving." Dave Ferguson facilitated the first session on the implications of current research in cognitive science for the learning and teaching of problem solving. Since we have a growing number of Stony Brook faculty and Teaching Assistants with interest in problem solving, we are continuing the problem solving series this semester.

On April 5th 12:30 - 1:30 at CELT (E1337 Melville Library), three Stony Brook faculty members will facilitate a session on "Approaches to the Learning and Teaching of Problem Solving." Gary Halada of the Department of Materials Science and Engineering will discuss "Processes for Teaching Engineering Design." Gary Mar of Philosophy will discuss "Strategies for the Teaching of Logic." Tom Sexton of the Harriman School for Management and Policy will discuss the "Case study Approach." To Register for this seminar please go to www.celt.sunysb.edu and click on 'Activities for Spring 2001'. Any questions please email rreaganr@notes.cc.sunysb.edu or call Rita Reagan Redko @ 2-1057. A lite lunch will be provided.

Also, we would like to bring your attention to the CELT Conference on "Critical Reasoning and Problem Solving" to be held at Stony Brook on June 22. 2001. For further information, check out the CELT Web site at www.celt.sunysb.edu.

A Poetry Reading By Robin Becker, Associate Professor in English and Women's Studies at Penn State University

Reading from her latest book "The Horse Fair" which is part of the Pitt Poetry Series from the University of Pittsburgh Press, Becker asks questions about citizenship and participation in the marketplaces ? of bodies, of ideas, of objects ? in which we function. She investigates how individuals marginalized by gender, religion, and sexual preference negotiate public and private spheres while inventing sustainable communities.

Robin Becker's fourth collection, All-American Girl, won the 1996

Lambda Literary Award in Lesbian Poetry. For an essay and long poem, she won the 1997 Virginia Faulkner Prize for Excellence in Writing from Prairie Schooner magazine. Becker has received fellowships from the Bunting Institute of Radcliffe College, the Massachusetts Artists Foundation, and the National Endowment for the Arts. Her poems and book reviews have appeared in publications including American Poetry Review, Boston Globe, Gettysburg Review, and Ploughshares. During the 1998-1999 academic year, she was a visiting scholar at the Center for Lesbian and Gay Studies of the City University of New York.

"The Horse Fair is a moving, soulful, fluid meditation on being a

Jew as this century closes. Robin Becker is a generous, compassionate, incisive guide through mysterious and heartbreaking terrain."- Carole Maso, Novelist

Part of the Women's Studies Department "Women History Month" celebration. Co-sponsored by the Humanities Institute and the Poetry Center at SUNY Stony Brook. For more information about this event, please call Adrienne Unger at 631-632-9983.
