2001 Student-Community Leadership Symposium- "Campus And Community Engagements: Engineering New Partnerships"

On February 13, 2001 from 1:00 p.m.-3:00 p.m. in the Student Activities Center Auditorium, The School of Social Welfare's

Student-Community Development Program and the Office of the Vice President for Student Affairs at the State University of New York at Stony Brook will host the 2001 Annual Leadership Symposium on Student-Community Wellness.

This year's symposium is entitled "Campus and Community Engagements: Engineering New Partnerships" and will focus on the importance of shaping and building the relationship between institutions of higher education and the local business and residential communities for which they exist to serve. Higher education is beginning to recognize the need for a focus and imperative which extends beyond traditional "community service" and embraces the concept of "institutional engagement," defined by the Kellogg Commission as the long-term connection of the resources/capabilities of colleges and universities to the needs and interests of society and our surrounding communities. Institutional engagement requires viable university-community partnerships.

This year's panelist speakers will include Dr. Lattie F. Coor, President of Arizona State University's main campus, Dr. Carl V. Patton, President of Georgia State University, and Dr. Norman Brown, Board of Directors Chair for the Points of Light Foundation. Contact Fred Preston, VPSA, for more info.

Study Circles, "Working Together To Shape The Future Of Our Communities." Volunteers Are Needed To Facilitate Discussion.

Reply to Andrew Collver, Professor Emeritus of Sociology
Andrew.Collver@sunysb.edu or tel. 751-5320.

Residents of communities along the north shore of Brookhaven Town will assemble for five evenings, April 16-May 18.in groups of 10-15 in five or six locations: Three Village, Port Jefferson-Port Jefferson Station, Mount Sinai-Miller Place, Rocky Point-Sound Beach, Shoreham-Wading River, and northern Longwood School District. Facilitators will be expected to bring out constructive ideas from all the participants without imposing their own views, and to summarize what has been said without bias or distortion. A full day of training will be given on a preceding Saturday so that facilitators will be prepared to play their part successfully, and a debriefing meeting will be held on a Saturday following the five sessions.

The organizer, Philip Lynn of Stony Brook, says: "Study Circles are small discussion groups that provide a simple way to involve community members in dialogue and action on social and political issues. They lead to positive change and help to build the bonds that are essential to creating healthy communities." The study circles movement is quite active throughout the U.S. (See <http://civic.net/ACF/SCRC.html>.)

Assessment Workshop at CELT

This Spring CELT will offer three workshops having to do with learning and teaching. These workshops will be offered by Pacific Crest, an educational consulting and publishing company working to improve the quality of educational outcomes by focusing on five key processes: teaching, learning, mentoring, curriculum design, and assessment. The first workshop is February 27th @ 3pm at CELT (E-1337 Melville LIB)

Title: Understanding the Difference between Assessment and Evaluation

Description: As the role of assessment draws increased interest and attention within the higher education community, there is the need to distinguish assessment from evaluation and clear up misconceptions that may exist. In this workshop, participants explore both processes in detail, including examining key similarities and differences. The resulting common basis of understanding helps to avoid misinterpretations that can lead to problems and provides the framework for viewing and enhancing various components of a course. Participants also gain valuable insights into why students react differently to different types of feedback.

For more information and to register please visit our web site at www.celt.sunysb.edu and look under calendar. Any questions please contact Rita Reagan Redko at 2-1057 or rreaganr@notes.cc.sunysb.edu
