Subject Stony Brook Center for Inclusive Education Opening
Celebration

Please join me for the opening celebration of the Stony Brook Center for Inclusive Education marked by a symposium entitled ACCESS TO SUCCESS (Success in Higher Education and Beyond) on Friday, May 3, from 10:30 AM - 12:30 PM, in the SAC Auditorium. The keynote speaker will be Dr. Freeman A. Hrabowski III, President of the University of Maryland Baltimore County, cofounder of the highly successful Meyerhoff Program, and honored recipient of many distinctions for his contribution to diversity issues in higher education, including the National Science Foundation Educator Achievement Award. Dr. Hrabowski and a panel of Stony Brook University students and faculty will discuss effective strategies for success in higher education and beyond.

The Center for Inclusive Education, located on the first floor of the Melville Library E-1337, will serve as a clearinghouse of information related to academia, with a special emphasis on issues pertaining to underrepresented minorities and women in science, engineering, and mathematics disciplines. The vision for the CIE is to provide this valuable information to a national audience.

As we all know, minority students are very underrepresented in science, engineering, and mathematics fields. This program offers an excellent opportunity to learn about how to recruit, retain, and support underrepresented students in these fields. I hope all of you will attend and participate actively in this special event.

RSVP by calling the SUNY AGEP Office at 2-1387.
