

To All Faculty & Staff

Dear Colleagues,

The Provost's Lecture Series in conjunction with the Templeton Foundation is pleased to host a talk by Reverend David Burrell, C.S.C.

Reverend Burrell is the Hesburgh Chair of Theology and Philosophy at the University of Notre Dame. His studies explore comparative issues in philosophical theology in Judaism, Christianity, and Islam. His publications in this area include Knowing the Unknowable God: Ibn-Sina, Maimonides, Aquinas; Freedom and Creation in Three Traditions; and two translations of al-Ghazali: Al-Ghazali on the Ninety-Nine Beautiful Names of God and Al-Ghazali on Faith in Divine Unity and Trust in Divine Providence.

Reverend Burrell will give a lecture entitled: "Judaism, Christianity, Islam, and the Hope for Peace" this Tuesday, January 30, 2007 at 7:00 PM in Harriman Hall, Room 137. This talk is presented as part of the Templeton Lecture Series (<http://www.stonybrook.edu/trust/templeton.shtml>).

Please pass along this information to any students or community members you feel may be interested in attending.
