

Thinking About Retirement?

You may have recently received a letter or an e-mail notice from human resources regarding the actions taken by the SUNY Board of Trustees to authorize SUNY's participation in the 2010 early retirement incentive programs. The decision to retire is a personal one best made by the individual after thorough consideration. Each member's situation is unique and while it may seem similar to that of co-workers, it may contain elements that only pertain to that individual member.

Those considering this important life event will benefit by attending the pre-retirement workshops offered by the hospital benefits office as well as those the chapter will be offering. The UUP workshops will provide valuable information including eligibility for health insurance, dental and vision benefits, and maintenance of membership in UUP during retirement. To attend one of these chapter workshops scheduled for Sept 1 & 2, RSVP to the chapter office 444-1505.

Most importantly, those considering retiring under one of these incentive programs are best advised to speak with a representative from their retirement system—NYSERS, or NYSTRS, or for those in the optional retirement program (ORP) a representative from the company that manages your retirement account, such as TIAA-CREF, ING, VALIC, or MetLife.

For those who will be retiring soon, your UUP brothers and sisters wish you well as you embark on this new stage of life and we thank you for your years of service to Stony Brook University.

President's Message

"In order for workplace bullying to exist, it must be permitted or promoted." Joel Neuman

Workplace bullying was the topic of our April academic lecture series presentation (see page 3 for Colleen Kenefick's article). Dr. Neuman, Associate Professor at SUNY New Paltz, defined workplace bullying as repeated actions and practices that cause humiliation, offense, and distress. These actions, which are directed to one or more employees, by one or more other individuals, within an employment relationship, are unwanted by the victim and may interfere with job performance and/or cause an unpleasant working environment.

Unfortunately, some of our chapter members have reported that they have experienced bullying at the hands of their co-workers and/or supervisors.

Workplace bullying behaviors include but are not limited to the following: public professional humiliation; accusations regarding lack of effort; damaging rumors about skill and ability; constant criticisms; assignment of meaningless tasks; name calling; criticism in front of others; devaluing with reference to age and other characteristics or attributes; preventing access to opportunities; withholding of needed information; setting impossible deadlines; repeated reminders of blunders; setting the target up for failure and repeated failure to return phone calls, memos or e-mail.

Perhaps you see yourself or a colleague, supervisor or co-worker as a perpetrator or victim of these behaviors. These behaviors should not be found in staff/faculty working in a world class institution. Behaviors such as these are not tolerated in great places of employment.

A recent survey of School of Medicine faculty conducted by the Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) showed that faculty here are afraid to express their opinions about the medical school for fear of retribution. These survey results were widely distributed and reported in the press. If a similar survey were conducted in your department or school, would the results be the same?

If we profess to live up to our vision and to stand by our values of integrity, compassion, accountability, respect, and excellence these situations cannot be tolerated. Even the Joint Commission has addressed the issue of bullying. As of January 2009, hospitals accredited by the commission must have a code of conduct that defines acceptable behaviors and sets up a process to manage unacceptable behaviors. The commission recommends a zero tolerance policy for disruptive behaviors.

UUP chapter leaders will continue to work with management to review current policies and address this insidious issue. If you would like more information from Dr. Neuman's presentation, please contact the chapter office. Most importantly remember this, according to Dr Neuman, in order for workplace bullying to exist, it must be permitted or promoted. None of us at any level of this organization should tolerate these behaviors. We must put a stop to them.

In Solidarity,
Kathy Southerton

Academic Lecture Series

On April 9, Dr. Joel H. Neuman addressed UUP members at the second Academic Lecture Series for the 2009/2010 academic year. Dr. Neuman is an Associate Professor of Management & Organizational Behavior and Director of the Center for Applied Management at SUNY New Paltz. His topic, Aggression and Bullying vs. Civility, Respect, and Engagement in Academic and Health Care Settings: Creating & Sustaining a Great Place to Work, was well attended with numerous questions following his lecture.

Dr. Neuman began by reviewing the history of workplace violence and particularly its role in the academic and health care environment. According to the Department of Justice, 48% of all non-fatal injuries from violent acts against workers occur in the health care sector. The International Labour Organization found that violence in the health care sector may constitute almost a quarter of all violence at work worldwide. Nurses are particularly vulnerable to physical violence in the workplace.

He then examined the dimensions that workplace bullying can take for the individual including threats to professional status and personal standing, isolation, overwork, destabilization, and obstructionism. In August 2007, Zogby International conducted a random sample finding that 37% of employees have experienced or witnessed bullying in the workplace. Neuman and Keashly found in their study of Veteran Administration facilities that 36% of respondents reported they experienced aggressive events either daily or weekly.

Creating and sustaining a great place to work focuses primarily on peer involvement and the organizational response to workplace aggression and bullying. Peer involvement requires making decisions about the degree of involvement and the immediacy to either interrupt a specific incident or prevent any future incidents. The power of the coworker is important because coworkers often provide creative responses to bullying, create and maintain powerful social norms and dynamics, and give social support to reduce stress and anxiety.

This workplace bullying behavior has financial consequences that impact the organizational bottom line. Turnover and absenteeism, lost productivity, legal costs, disability costs, bad publicity, and sabotage or theft all cost an organization significant sums. A workplace policy on this issue should state the organizations' values and position, provide examples of unacceptable behavior, explain how the policy will be enforced, outline potential consequences, and ensure due process.

The Academic Lecture Series is funded by NYSUT's Local Action Project. Look for announcements in the fall for next year's speakers.

COALITION OF LABOR UNION WOMEN (CLUW)

Dear Sisters and Brothers:

The Coalition of Labor Union Women (CLUW) is a nonpartisan organization within the union movement. CLUW was formed in 1974 and is endorsed by national unions. A number of concerned union women, including myself, are organizing a local chapter of the CLUW in this area. We extend an invitation to you and other members of your union to help us launch this new CLUW chapter. We also would appreciate your help in sharing this information with as many active and retired workers as possible.

The basic goals of CLUW are to promote affirmative action in the workplace, strengthen the role of women in their unions, organize the unorganized women and increase involvement of women in the political and legislative process. CLUW local chapters educate members, keep them up-to-date and provide a support network for women in unions. The primary aim of CLUW is to unify all union women in a viable organization to determine our common problems and concerns and to develop action programs within the framework of our unions to deal effectively with our objectives.

While working women have overcome many obstacles with CLUW's involvement, there is still much work to be done. With your help, we can use our collective strength to make a difference right here, right now. Meetings are held every last Thursday of the month. Please come, join, and make a difference.

Thank you for your cooperation in helping to create the Stony Brook chapter of the Coalition of Labor Union Women. For additional information regarding organizing meetings, please contact me at your convenience at llj\_126@hotmail.com or Tina Maria Manning at Tina\_Manning9@yahoo.com
