SERVING THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK AT STONY BROOK AND ITS SURROUNDING COMMUNITIES

Assembly Candidates Face Off in Ballroom

By Patricia Hall

The New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG) sponsored a debate Wednesday night between the two candidates running for the New York State Assembly in the Fourth District, Laetitia Bradley (D) and Robert Gaffney (R). It was held in the Union Ballroom and was attended by approximately 30 people, most of whom were students.

The debate focused on several issues that are of primary concern to the Fourth District (which includes Stony Brook, Port Jefferson, Setauket, Mt. Sinai, Miller Place), such as the Shoreham Nuclear Power Plant, taxes, the environment and the proposed $400 tuition increase for Stony Brook.

On the issue of Shoreham, owned by the Long Island Lighting Company (LILCO), both candidates agreed that the plant should not be opened. Gaffney said he would oppose Shoreham "for no other reason than the safety aspects," citing that there is no sufficient evacuation plan. Gaffney also said that he thinks "LILCO will collapse financially before they get that plant on the line."

Bradley said that she has been opposed to Shoreham for the last 10 years and that the "whole thing is a gross disaster." She also said that LILCO has "no competent management."

As an alternative to Shoreham, both candidates support the use of the Marcy South power line, a high-powered transmission line that could bring 20,000 megawatts of power to New York from hydro-electric power originated in Canada. Although there is controversy as to where these power lines would be located, Bradley said the Marcy South proposal is the "only alternative there is to Shoreham." On the Marcy South proposal, Gaffney said that although he also recognizes that it does have ramifications, it is "something that has to be done."

On the issue of the proposed $400 tuition increase, the candidates did have different opinions. Gaffney said that "The university system should be accessible to those people who want to use it." Gaffney added that an increase might make middle class students financially unable to attend Stony Brook.

Bradley said that it takes a great deal of money to run a university system and that we must be "realistic" and that the "money has to come from somewhere." However, she later said that she would not support any increases without justification and that an increase in availability of TAP would "be a condition" of the increase so that "any student ought to be able to go to college."

On taxes, Gaffney said, "There is a $600 million surplus in the state budget" which should be used to lower taxes. He said that increased taxes are "stifling the growth on Long Island" and that a tax cut would stimulate the economy and bring back business to Long Island, thus generating more revenues and decreasing tax rates for citizens.

Bradley, however, said that one cannot lower taxes, increase services and balance the budget at the same time. "The state of New York will not go into the kind of deficit that the federal government has," Bradley said.

Of the people who attended last night's debate, most thought that it was successful. Neil Rosenstein, project coordinator of NYPIRG, said that although he was "hoping for more of a turnout from students," he felt the debate was successful and that the "candidates' views were effectively expressed." John Suriano, moderator for the debate, said, "There could have been a better turnout of students."

As to who won the debate, Suriano said he would give the format to Gaffney and the responses to Bradley. Mark Kravets, an undergraduate also involved with NYPIRG, said that he thought the debate was "informative but not well enough structured." On who won the debate, he said that he felt it "was a personal decision for people to make."

"Gaffney was more effective, but Bradley knows her stuff a little better," said FSA President Chris Fairhall, who was also in attendance.

Bradley said that she was not happy with her performance, stating that many issues that she would have liked to have discussed, such as abortion and job needs, were not addressed. Gaffney, however, said that he was "very pleased" with his performance and that he felt he won the debate. Bradley had no comment on who won the debate.

AllFoodTabs Mystery Is Finally Explained

By Bill Flugrath

Students have been seeing advertisements saying, "Don't you wish you had an AllFoodTab right now?" all over the campus this semester.

But despite heavy advertising, only two people came to a meeting concerning AllFoodTabs held yesterday in the Engineering building.

What is an AllFoodTab? "I thought it was a whole bunch of glop all thrown together on a plate," freshman Dina Sbare replied.

"I thought an AllFoodTab was all the food you could eat and you had to drink it down with a Tab," said freshman Rachel Stoya.

No, an AllFoodTab is neither. It is a tablet of miniaturized food. According to literature by Ideal Products, a company based in Everett, Washington which manufactures AllFoodTab, each tablet contains essential amino acids, 60 percent carbohydrates, 25 percent unsaturated fats, 10 percent protein, and 5 percent vitamins and minerals. It contains no drugs or preservatives. AllFoodTabs are made in malt, vanilla, butterscotch, and orange flavors.

Invented in 1970 by a Ph.D. and a biochemist, they have been used by NASA and other government agencies. AllFoodTabs have been available to the public since March, 1983.

Why use AllFoodTabs? Professional hairdresser Marty Garden replied, "I was into health food and taking a lot of vitamins. None of it helped me to feel better. Then I was introduced to AllFoodTab. I took six tablets daily to supplement my meals and I've noticed a big difference in the way I feel, along with an increase in energy."

Rob Leitner, a resident at Stony Brook, has been advertising AllFood-tabs for several weeks to make them available to other students. Leitner is a distributor for Ideal Products, and he hopes to make a profit by selling bottles of AllFoodTab. He now has over 20 customers both on and off campus.

"I found out about them over the summer," Leitner said. "After 2-3 weeks I felt much better. I don't fall asleep as much and feel much more energetic."

His roommate, Richard Munitz, admitted, "I was a skeptic at first, but after trying AllFoodTabs, I found that they really do work. They help especially because I have very irregular eating habits."

AllFoodTablets cost $44 for a bottle of 200. The daily intake of 6-8 tablets would cost about $1.32 a day. "It's a rip-off," said Steve D'Orazio, a student at Stony Brook. "You could buy the equivalent nutrients at a health food store for half the price."

"Some Dallas Cowboys use them along with the new Mr. Universe," remarked Garden. "They can help you to lose, gain or maintain weight."

"This stuff tastes like crap," said resident student Rob Mirfeild after trying an AllFoodTab. "I'd take a beer and pretzel over this anyway."

'I'd take a beer and pretzel over this anyway.'

"I think it tastes pretty good. I would not mind trying them," remarked student Kelly Miranda.

Graduate student Evan Cooch in the Department of Surgery commented, "It's manifest bullshit." Cooch claims to have researched various types of nutritional tablets.

Committee Broadens Inquiries on CIA Manual

Washington-Congressional oversight committee staffs are broadening their inquiries into the CIA's Nicaraguan rebel manual to examine what the spy agency knew about alleged political killings carried out by U.S.-backed forces. Capitol Hill sources said yesterday.

Initial reviews by the staffs of the House and Senate intelligence committees focused on who authorized production of the CIA manual, which advocates "selective use of violence" to "neutralize" officials of Nicaragua's leftist government.

But staff investigators for both committees are also looking into whether the rebels have, in fact, executed Nicaraguan officials and what the CIA's role may have been, said sources, who spoke only on condition they not be identified.

"We don't want our people getting bogged down on who deleted which paragraph" of various versions of the manual, said one House Intelligence Committee official. He added that the committee is trying to pry loose information from the CIA about repeated reports that the anti-government rebels have attacked civilian targets and executed individual officials.

Last Sunday, President Reagan said a CIA employee in Central America wrote the manual, but that sections relating to assassinations were deleted by his superiors there and at CIA headquarters. CIA officials, however, told the Senate Intelligence committee on Monday that all copies of the manual contained advice on "neutralizing" Nicaraguan officials.

Italian Judge to Report On Plot to Kill Pope

Rome—An Italian judge who has spent three years investigating whether there was a Bulgarian connection in a plot to kill Pope John Paul II will report his findings today, judicial officials said yesterday.

A lawyer representing a Bulgarian being held in Italy said he is convinced that his client will be indicted on charges of complicity in the May 13, 1981, shooting of the pope by Mehmet Ali Agca.

"I think we are going to trial," lawyer Giuseppe Console told The Associated Press. "We will find out tomorrow." He represents Bulgarian Sergei Ivanov Antonov.

Judge Ernesto Cudillo, chief of investigating magistrates, said Judge Ilario Martella, the head of the investigation into the shooting, will deliver his decision to the Court of Assize sometime Friday morning.

Cudillo told The Associated Press that reporters would only be told who, if anyone, is indicted and the charges. The reasons for any possible indictments and the evidence backing them up will not be made public, he said.

A prosecutor who reviewed the evidence gathered by Martella recommended in May that three Bulgarians and four Turks stand trial for complicity in the assassination attempt on the pope by Agca, who is a Turk. But the final decision on indictments rests with Martella. Should the Bulgarians be indicted, it could lead to a sensational trial dealing with charges of involvement by Bulgarian secret services with possible aid from the Soviet Union.

Prosecutor Antonio Albano, who reviewed the evidence, told the AP in June that he is convinced Bulgaria, possibly with Soviet aid, masterminded the assassination attempt to stop social unrest.

Times Square Cleanup Gets Mixed Reviews

New York—Amid a chorus of boos and hisses, Gov. Mario Cuomo and Mayor Edward I. Koch declared their support yesterday for a plan to raze the sleazy sex shops of Times Square, renovate nine historic theaters and erect a $1.6 billion complex of office towers, a hotel and a trade mart.

"The project will reverse the decline of a once proud block and restore it to its rightful place as the crossroads of the world," Koch said as he made a rare personal appearance as the presiding officer of the Board of Estimate, which must approve the plan.

About 300 people crowded into the Board of Estimate chamber on the second floor of City Hall. Real estate developers rubbed elbows in the packed room with residents of the area around Times Square who contend that the redevelopment would force sex shops and crime into their neighborhood and would drive up their rents.

There are a number of lawsuits pending against the project. Those opposed to the project frequently interrupted the testimony of Koch and Cuomo with hisses, boos and shouted criticism. "Where's your conscience?" one particularly vocal woman shouted from the back of the room. "Imagine what she's like at home," Cuomo said in the low voice into the microphone.

Nevertheless, the governor said, the concerns of the protesters should be addressed, "no matter how tediously they are presented." He said he would have his aides try to work out a plan within the next two weeks to help the community.

Following the usual practice of the board, elected officials were given five minutes speaking time and allowed to speak first. The public followed, at three minutes each.

Students Dislike DAKA Food, Survey Shows

By Howard Breuer

Approximately 63 percent of the students interviewed in a survey conducted last semester said the quality of food served by DAKA, the university's food service, is poor. The statistics were recently released in a report by the Meal Plan Review Board, a sub-committee of Residence Life.

The survey, conducted in May at check-out time, also found that five percent interviewed found the food service fair, ten percent found it average, and two percent found it above average. None of the students said DAKA food was excellent.

The Meal Plan Review board did the survey at Kelly Quad. Of those interviewed 149 were freshman, 122 were sophomores, 61 were juniors and 25 were seniors.

Kelly Quad was chosen because it is known to be a low-cooking quad, according to Drew Fried, Chairman of the Residence Action Program's Dorm Cooking Committee. "If we are to make freshmen eat on the meal plan, then it must be improved," said Fried, after compiling the results of the survey. "The hours must be longer and the facilities improved and opened."

None of the seniors surveyed were on the meal plan at all. An eighth of the juniors and one seventh of the sophomores were on the meal plan. Almost one-third of the freshman class said they were on the meal plan.

The Freshman students said that they eat approximately two-thirds of the meals that they pay for prior to the semester. Upperclassmen eat the meals they are entitled to less frequently.

The survey seems to have conflicting information. Although it was reported in one section of the results that none of the seniors were on a meal plan, two of the seniors answered that they were on the 15 meals per week plan under the "number of meals planned" section.

A new survey will be done in the next week to see if service on the meal plan has improved since the new rules went into effect. The new rules state that any new freshman or transfer student has to go onto the meal plan. The idea behind this new plan was, according to Fried, to get more money and numbers onto the plan and to improve the quality of the service.

Prof Lectures on U.S. First Strike Capability

By Tim Lapham

Professor Donald Mackenzie of the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, gave a lecture about United States military plans for a first strike capability at the Arms Control, Disarmament and Peace Studies Resource Center in the Old Chemistry building Wednesday night.

Statesman Ed Gianotti

Professor Donald Mackenzie of the University of Edinburgh, Scotland, gave a lecture about the U.S. military plans for a first strike capability at the Old Chemistry building Wednesday night.

Mackenzie outlined the history of this policy from the 1950's to the present. He cited examples of U.S. military situations that would necessitate, according to the military, he said, a first strike.

Since 1954 the U.S. has had plans for a first strike capability against the Soviet Union. In 1980 that information was made public, with a document known as Presidential Directive 59, released by Jimmy Carter. "The goal of Presidential Directive 59 was to have the capacity to fight a nuclear war and to win a nuclear war," Mackenzie said. Presidential Directive 59 "startled an entire generation of people who had been brought up with the idea that nuclear weapons were deterrent only."

The military, however, was surprised at people's reactions, said Mackenzie. "Insiders were quite puzzled about public reaction to Presidential Directive 59. To them the policy was not new," Mackenzie said. "Public consciousness had gotten a revolution, to insiders was an evolution." The reason for the sudden outburst, he added, was due to the sudden publicity of military policy.

Mackenzie outlined three levels of nuclear strategy. "First, there is the level of targeting plans." Targeting plans, he said, includes the individual target each weapon has, the Designated Ground Zero (DGZ), the height of burst, and deferring timing so that the blast of one bomb doesn't set off another bomb flying past it.

"The second level of nuclear strategy is the actual targeting instructions," Mackenzie said. The instructions include the priorities of each of the targets. This is a touchy situation, Mackenzie said, "since what the targeters actually do is not checked. [At one point there was] a controversy between General Curtis Lemay (SAC commander) and the joint instructions were to delicate to divulge to them." According to Mackenzie, Lemay was quoted as saying "If the U.S. is pushed in the corner far enough we would not hesitate to strike first."

"The third level of nuclear strategy is the statements to the public about U.S. nuclear strategy," Mackenzie said. There have been major shifts in this, he said. One big shift took place in 1962 when targeting strategy was changed from only destroying Soviet military bases to precise destruction: 50% of Soviet industry and 25% of Soviet population. "(The policy) changed from spare the cities to make damn sure you hit the cities," Mackenzie said.

Certain public statements were actively misleading to the public, according to Mackenzie. Nixon once said in a statement to the public that the president only had a choice between an all out nuclear attack and no attack at all. That statement was highly untrue, Mackenzie said, because it implied the president could not attack particular nuclear targets.

Mackenzie stated that he did not believe that anyone in the military, American or Soviet, actually wants to fight a nuclear war. The military, however, feels that a deterrent force is not enough, he said. "They don't want to fight a nuclear war; they want to have the capacity to fight a nuclear war."

Mackenzie felt that this capacity is important when a country is backed into a corner; only a choice of either initiating a nuclear attack or backing down. Current examples of this can be seen in Europe said Mackenzie, where cruise missiles are being deployed. The outcry of European public was that the deployment of these cruise missiles made them a primary target. With the stationing of NATO troops so close to the Soviet borders, if the Soviets ever made a conventional weapons attack on these forces, NATO would have no choice but to initiate a nuclear war, Mackenzie said.

During a discussion period, Mackenzie was asked if the recent Soviet "no first use" pledge represented an appeal to Western audiences.

"Clearly it represents an appeal to the Western world. This was a radical innovation to the Soviet people that the Soviet minister of war had to defend," Mackenzie said.

Bio-Chemist Gives Views on Baby Doe, SBU

By Adam Schneider

Students were presented with a chance to meet their faculty members Wednesday evening in the Whitman College lounge. Professor Eloy Carlson of Stony Brook's Bio-Chemistry Department was the guest speaker in another part of a lecture series sponsored by Faculty Student Association (FSA), Student Government Polity, Resident Life, Student Activities, and DAKA.

Carlson started off the evening discussing the philosophy of teaching. "Teaching is a way of putting things together," he said. "It is an improvisational theater. Effective lecturing is learned. It takes a great deal of effort to sound effortless."

The Professor asserted that he likes to try everything. Carlson occupied the position of a dean at UCLA, but this was one of the few jobs which he said he really disliked, calling the students "too clothes-conscious!"

He noted some of the differences between UCLA and Stony Brook. "At UCLA it is summer all of the time. Everyone has fun in the sun." Carlson said when he arrived at Stony Brook, one of his first reflections, in contrast to California, was that "everybody wore jeans." He said Stony Brook is more conducive to his way of life and methods of teaching.

Carlson spent the majority of the evening on the issue of Baby Jane Doe and abortion. Kerri-Lynn A., also known as Baby Jane Doe, was born in St. Charles Hospital in Port Jefferson with a lesion in her spinal column and a variety of other birth defects, such as paralysis of the lower body. Carlson has participated in many debates, discussions, and conferences on the issue and said he is appalled at the number of myths that exist regarding the case. He said that most of the country interprets what is going on as a decision by two parents to let their child die. This leads to a prejudice that adds up to the

New University Affairs VP Arrives on Campus

By George Bidermann

"I don't feel strange or uprooted here, and yet I'm very proud to be a Texan; I've brought all my precious things to remind me of Texas and I feel I'm very lucky to have the best of both worlds here." These were the words of Patricia Teed after one week on campus as the new vice president for University Affairs.

Teed, who comes from the University of Houston, where she was assistant chancellor, was chosen in August by Stony Brook President John Marburger after a year-long search to fill the position of vice president, which had been vacant for eighteen months following the resignation of James Black.

In a telephone conversation last night, Marburger expressed confidence in Teed's ability to perform effectively as vice president. "She was a top choice of the selection committee, and I think the committee used good judgment," Marburger said. "I am confident that Dr. Teed will be able to make advances not only in the area of public relations and university affairs, but also in the development of a sound fundraising program."

For Teed, accepting the position at Stony Brook meant a quick move to New York. "President Marburger called me on the 14th of August, and I left the University of Houston on 31st," she said in an interview this week. "I had never moved a household any further than from one part of Houston to another. But it was much easier than I had thought it would be—it's essentially a matter of organizing."

Teed moved up to New York in early September, and spent most of the month organizing and setting up a residence in Smithtown, where she will be living until May, 1985, when she hopes to buy a house in the Stony Brook area.

Moving to the Northeast presents Teed with one immediate advantage—she is closer to her son Arthur, who attends a boarding school in Massachusetts. Teed, who has been divorced for fourteen years, spoke about the problems of being a single parent and holding down a demanding job at the same time. "There is nothing in my mind more difficult than being a single working mother since mothers usually end up doing everything around the house," Teed said. "Also, my son is well aware of that. He calls me his mother, his part-time father, and his best friend."

As vice president, Teed will be directly supervising and coordinating the University's divisions of Alumni Affairs and Annual Fund, News Services, Public Affairs, Community Relations and Publications, Development, and Conferences and Special Events. Her job at University of Houston was quite similar to her position at Stony Brook. As assistant chancellor, her duties included direct supervision of campus publications, community and media relations, and coordination of fundraising efforts with the Alumni Association.

Teed came to University of Houston in 1975 after working for five years as an assistant to the Chairman of the Board of the Crispin Company, based in Houston. She started at University of Houston as a research associate in May, 1975. In July, 1979 she was named executive director of Campus and Community Relations. In September, 1981 she began training for her position as assistant chancellor, which she took in May, 1982.

Teed holds a Ph.D. in French Literature and is a former Fulbright Scholar, who attended the University of Grenoble, France in 1963-64.

"I think that students are going to feel a natural empathy with Dr. Teed and her candid, 'Let's get it done' attitude," said David Woods, director of University News Services. "Many faculty and staff people are already meeting Dr. Teed, and some will be disappointed initially because she doesn't want to promise anything unless it can be done. But I know they think big in Texas and I feel we will see this reflected in Dr. Teed's work here at Stony Brook."

According to Woods, the division of University Affairs have been strengthened during the position search due to the efforts of Denise Coleman, director of the Alumni and Annual Fund, who took on the added responsibility of coordinating the divisions during the last eighteen months. "We've come out stronger because of Denise's hard work, in a good position for Dr. Teed's assumption of the vice presidency," Woods said.

"I'm a very adaptable person and I've always wanted to live in the Northeast; it is something I look forward to and I feel very much at home here," she said. "There are so many different attitudes here, as opposed to Texas, where there is a certain rigidity and narrow, conservative way of seeing things, which I respect. It's a proud and wonderful history and even though it isn't quite in synch with civil rights, it is an attitude which you can understand and respect. I think time will take care of changing it."

Teed stressed that it will take longer than a few weeks to get a real knowledge of her position here, and did not want to set out specific goals for herself at this time. "The university does need a coordinated, integrated functioning program that would include the interweaving of fundraising with alumni, media, and publications—these things must work together in order for any one of them, particularly fundraising, to succeed," she said. "Fundraising is something that is underdeveloped to the point of almost nonexistence here in the university...I would like to put together a program that will work for this institution now and in the future: one that will continue to make sense and be effective in the future, and will stand the test of time."

According to Woods, about half of Stony Brook's funding comes from the annual appropriation in the New York State budget, and the rest must be obtained from federal research grants, corporation grants, private foundations and individual gifts.

Dolan Praises 'Virtues' of English Literature

By Mathew Natale

Speaking with a small group of students in the fireside lounge of Stage XII cafeteria last night, English Department Professor Paul Dolan extolled the virtues of being a student of English Literature, and also spoke about American culture, teaching, and the quality of education at Stony Brook. But Dolan did not do all of the talking. Students individually spoke with the professor and asked him questions. The discussion was part of Student Government Polity's Lecture series, "Conversation with the Faculty".

During the discussion professor Dolan spoke about how he considers the present state of American culture. Assessing the absence of a coherent cultural tradition in America, Dolan said, "I would like to die in a different country than America." The professor then went on to discuss how the proliferation of video tape stores and the decline in the number of people who read classical literature have had an adverse effect on today's popular culture.

When asked by a student about literary analysis and poetry interpretation, professor Dolan replied by discussing one of his own poems, "Our Lady of the L.I.E." The professor said that this poem is about a factory name Lourdes which is visible from the L.I.E. Lourdes is also the name of a small town in southern France where there supposedly was an apparition of the Virgin Mary. He later explained the correlation between the corporate cosmology of America, and the holy sanctuary in France where people come to be healed.

Dolan explained how the poem, and poems in general, are limited to a certain degree of subjective interpretation; and how readers can be totally wrong about what they think a poem is about.

After he spoke about poetry and literature, Dolan then went on to speak about teaching in a university atmosphere. Concerning the process in which the university selects professors, Dolan said, "The university system is very inefficient." He then further explained that this was necessary in order to attract "mavericks" and "non-conformists" to teach at universities, regarding the quality of teachers at any university, the professor said, "You are doing well if you have one good professor per semester."

Many of the students present at this meeting were very enthusiastic about having a chance to speak individually to a professor in a non-classroom atmosphere. Frank Rich, a Stony Brook junior said, "I think that this program is a perfect opportunity for students to come in close personal contact with professors."

Campus Dorm Shortages: A National Trend

By College Press Service

CLEVELAND, OH (CPS)—For the price of a regular, on-campus dorm room, John Carroll University (JCU) senior Norm Kotoch and 65 other students live in a luxury hotel off-campus, where they enjoy private washrooms, cable television, refrigerators, maid service, and swimming pool privileges.

"Everyone's acting really well because they don't want to spoil this situation," Kotoch says. "It's really working out great."

Not for everyone. For JCU itself, putting up Kotoch and the others is costing a "substantial" amount of money, says James Lavin, JCU Dean of Student Life. But JCU had no other place to house the new students it attracted this fall, thanks to an unexpected six percent enrollment increase.

In part because they've been successful in recruiting new students and in part because more students are opting to live on-campus this fall, many schools are suffering dorm room shortages, reports Jim Grimm, president of College and University Housing Officers International (CUHOI).

And while a lucky few students are living it up at luxury hotels, on most room-short campuses students must endure long waits, overcrowding, temporary housing in lounges and storage rooms, and sometimes no housing at all.

At least 600 Iowa State students, for example, started the year without a place to live, and local and state agencies are still trying to shelter them. But a shortage of off-campus as well as on-campus housing is making a bad situation worse, officials report.

University of Wisconsin-Madison officials have turned down some 4000 housing requests because of overcrowding there, says Lawrence Halle, associate fact that if a child is physically or mentally afflicted, people do not want it to continue living, he asserted.

Carlson added that it is not right to walk into the hospital and find that one is not the parents of one's own baby. This type of situation breeds a type of "life controlled by politics," he said. Carlson said there are numerous underlying prejudices and conflicts over medical philosophy and treatment methods, and that doctors involved are bound to be influenced by their personal, political, religious, and moral views over what constitutes life.

Carlson gave his personal view on the way such cases as the Baby Jane Doe case should be handled. "A hospital committee where people knowledgeable about a particular defect should be set up where there would be a goal of exploring the history, data, and medical consequences of the situation. The parents would then be able to make a strong decision," Carlson said. "If a woman feels that she wants to abort a sick baby, then she should be permitted to do so. However, I am against the type of abortion considered 'social'."

Social abortions are classified as those given for reasons not related to medical defects. According to Carlson, 19 out of 20 abortions that occur today are social.

Carlson, who said he always had the desire to be a geneticist, did undergraduate work at New York University and then attended Indiana University as a graduate student.

He is presently the father of five children, two of which have graduated from Stony Brook.

housing director.

Over 500 University of California-Davis freshman similarly were denied housing this fall. Other schools—South Florida, Illinois, Southern Cal, and Bates College in Maine among them—are coping with unexpected overflows by stuffing three and four students in dorm rooms designed for single or double occupancy.

At the University of Nebraska, for instance, where there are 5,160 spaces available for more than 5,270 students, officials are placing three students to a room. "We won't turn any student away because of housing shortages," says Housing Director Doug Zatechka.

Zatechka claims tripling-up students "has no effect on a student's GPA or the socialization process," especially compared to the alternative of turning students out in the cold. "Turning a student away, especially at state schools, is a crime," he says. "For a student, a triple room is better than no room."

None of it, however, was supposed to happen.

Many campus housing officials counseled that the terrible dorm overcrowding of the late seventies and early eighties was temporary, and that building new dorms to meet student demand for rooms was unwise because enrollment nationwide was due to drop precipitously soon.

Many schools, in fact, closed dorms over the last few years in anticipation of the enrollment decline. But enrollments, of course, haven't dropped. And more and more students are finding that "it's too expensive to live off-campus and being on campus is much more convenient," said CUHOI's Grimm.

—Editorial— Give Us Bulbs in Study Carrels, Not More Offices

There is a big problem on the fifth floor of the Frank Melville Memorial Library these days. It has to do with money, common maintenance and disregard for the needs of students. The problem is the condition of the study carrels, which dominate the fifth floor.

These cubicles provide an important study outlet. They are private, quiet, and an ideal study area for many students. Contrary to the university's beliefs, we have found that this area is frequented by students. The problem is this: there are hundreds of carrels that are in fine condition, aside from the fact that they have no light bulbs.

We are looking at thousands of feet of space—which the university paid to build up and pays to heat—that have been rendered completely useless, much like the campus bus service, which doesn't run at night, when students need it most. Few of these study carrels have light bulbs, and those that go out never seem to be replaced.

The university seems to feel that the best way to remedy this problem would be to remove the carrels altogether, which would provide more office space. This would be the worst alternative. Study space on this campus is in great need. Many study areas in the library are noisy and have turned into social gathering places. Studying in one's rooms can be impossible in many instances and the alternative study areas on campus, such as empty classrooms and various lounges, are limited. The carrels (with bulbs) currently provide an invaluable study area for many, and if the other carrels were supplied with proper lighting they could be of benefit to even more.

The university feels these carrels are not widely used. It would be interesting to find out how they arrived at this opinion. By simply frequenting the carrels for a few nights, it becomes obvious the carrels are in great demand. Almost every working one is occupied for the entire evening and in several cases students actually hide light bulbs so they can continue studying when darkness falls. Is this a state university or occupied France? It is a disheartening experience to see people stoop to hiding bulbs for study carrels.

We realize that buying hundreds of bulbs may be a costly proposition, so why can't the university take a portion of the half million dollars it plans to pay to plant flowers in the back of South P-Lot of funds from some other unnessecary expenditure, and buy bulbs? This carrel space will attract even more people once it is actually lit. We urge the administration to move quickly on this simple and practical maintenance problem.

Fried's Unbiased?

To The Editor:

In response to Drew Fried's letter to the editor in Wednesday's Statesman, let me point out several things.

The first of these is that Mr. Fried is anything but unbiased advocate of truth. It is a well established fact that he has zealously supported Miss Anderson no matter what office she has sought. One is left to wonder at how important these issues would be to Mr. Fried if the results had been reversed.

The second is that, although I have spoken to Mr. Fried on several occasions since the election, at no time did he mention to me his views on the election. Evidently, it is easier to write letters to the Statesman than to the Student Government. God forbid we are given a chance to explain or defend ourselves before it goes to print. I'm not sure what that proves exactly, but at least Mr. Fried got to see his name in the paper.

We are also left to wonder as to who the "we" is that Mr. Fried refers to in his letter. Presumably it is the Resident Action Program, and yet there are no names other than Mr. Fried's. Is he truly speaking for the Resident Action Program, or just for Drew Fried? It is, I believe, anyone's guess.

Finally, I am concerned with Mr. Fried's question, "What other things has Polity done which were not according to their bylaws or policies?" To that remark I can only say that if Mr. Fried has charges to make, he should make them and not hide behind gutless insinuations against an organization that he has offered no assistance to since I have been in office. Polity has its problems, to be sure, but they will never be solved by those who exist only to criticize and find fault rather than offer to help.

Tribute To A Genius

To The Editor:

One of the world's greatest physicists, Professor Paul Adrien Maurice Dirac, (who spent a year as a visiting professor at Stony Brook a decade ago) died last Saturday at the age of 82. His contributions to the development of twentieth century physics are second, perhaps, only to those of Einstein.

He was awarded the Nobel prize when he was barely 30 years old for work he had done on the structure of the new theory of quantum mechanics some seven years earlier. In 1928, he successfully fused the general principles of Einstein's special relativity with those of quantum mechanics and obtained what is now universally known as the "Dirac Equation." This equation, from which, incidentally, Dirac boldly inferred the existence of anti-matter, forms the foundation on which much of the work of the past half century on particle process is based.

All students of his work are tremendously impressed by his startling originality and by the beauty and economy of his methods. Those who knew him remember also his unassuming simplicity of manner and his pure commitment of the goal of understanding (or perhaps, as Dirac would put it, describing) nature.

While Dirac was at Stony Brook he once gave a lecture to the students in Physics 101 on the role of esthetic sensitivity in the invention and development of new physical theories. He told the fascinated class that, although a beautiful need not necessarily be true, any theory which lacked the quality of beauty was bound to be false. A sonnet by Millay begins with the line "Euclid alone has looked on beauty bare." I am sure that Dirac is one of the very few elect who have joined Euclid in what I imagine to be the almost infinite pleasure of visions of "beauty bare."

Now the high cost of medical school won't make your heart skip a beat...

Because you may qualify for a full scholarship that takes the worry out of paying for medical school.

The Armed Forces Health Professions Scholarship Program covers most of your expenses for tuition, required books, and fees. It even pays you more than $600 a month while you attend school.

If you're selected for a Physician's Scholarship—from the Army, Navy or Air Force—you're commissioned as a Reserve Second Lieutenant or Ensign. You serve 45 days of active duty each year while in school. Handle diverse patient cases. And work with sophisticated medical technology.

After graduation, your assignment depends on the requirements of the Service selected and the years of scholarship assistance received (3 year minimum). You'll be a military doctor with good pay, benefits and regular work hours.

Best of all, you'll have valuable experience. A challenging job. And most of your medical school bills paid.

Don't wait to get the facts. Mail the coupon below now. There is no obligation.

THE 1984 HONEYWELL FUTURIST AWARDS COMPETITION

TRAVEL AGENDA: Your mission, should you decide to accept, is to transport yourself 25 years into the future, take a look around and write three essays of up to 500 words each. For the first two essays, you are to write about significant developments in any two of the following subject areas:

1) Electronic Communications, 2) Energy, 3) Aerospace, 4) Marine Systems, 5) Biomedical Technology or 6) Computers. In a third essay, you are to write about the societal impact of the changes you've predicted. Your entries will be judged according to creativity (30%), feasibility (30%), clarity of expression (30%) and legibility (10%).

PASSENGER QUALIFICATIONS: Any person enrolled as a regular full-time student at an accredited U.S. college or university may enter, with the exception of full-time faculty members, previous winners and Honeywell employees.

PACKING LIST: To enter the contest, type (or clearly print) your name, address, college and declared major on an 8 1/2 x 11" sheet of paper. We also need your T-shirt size so we can send you a Honeywell Futurist T-shirt designed by French illustrator Jean Michel Folon. Each of the three essays should be typed, double-spaced, on separate 8 1/2 x 11" sheets without your name at the top. All sheets should be stapled together and sent, unfolded, to:

The Honeywell Futurist Awards Competition, P.O. Box 2009F, 600 South County Road 18, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55426.

All entries must be postmarked no later than December 31, 1984. Winners will be notified by mail by February 1, 1985. All prizes will be awarded.

PAYLOAD: A total of 30 winners will be selected and awarded the following prizes:

10 First Place Winners will receive $2,000 and an all-expense paid trip for two to the Honeywell Futurist Awards Banquet in Minneapolis. They will also be offered a paid 1985 Honeywell Summer Internship.

10 Second Place Winners will receive $250.

10 Honorable Mention Winners will receive $100.

All entries are subject to official rules and regulations for participation and entry. If you are interested in receiving a copy of more detailed regulations, write: Futurist Rules, P.O. Box 2009, 600 South County Road 18, Minneapolis, Minnesota 55426.

FANTASY IS THE FUEL OF THE FUTURE.

THE 1984 HONEYWELL FUTURIST AWARDS COMPETITION

Beyond scientific speculation and extrapolation, perhaps the richest inspiration for imagining the future comes from exploring our daydreams and realizing that today's fantasy may become tomorrow's reality. If you have imagined what our world will be like in 25 years, now is your chance to release those thoughts — tempered with your knowledge of technology — by entering the 1984 Honeywell Futurist Awards Competition. If your ideas are among the most imaginative and feasible, you will be awarded $2,000, a trip to a futurist awards banquet and a Honeywell internship. Read the accompanying travel plans to find out how to enter. And fuel up for a trip to the year 2009.

Together, we can find the answers.

Soccer Has .500 Week, But Clinches First

By Lisa Micela

Even though they lost a match to C.W. Post College on Tuesday, the Stony Brook Men's Soccer Team has had an extremely productive season thus far. The Patriots clinched 1st place in the Suburban Soccer League (Division III) by narrowly beating Maritime 2-1 last Saturday.

At Maritime, Roy Richards had the game winner with an assist from Mark Ashman, with less than 7 minutes remaining in the game. Richardson also has the winning goal in the game against Kings College in overtime.

In the loss against C.W. Post, Mike Bellerio scored the first goal for the Patriots off a chip from Paul Naster. Ed Lee scored the second goal with the assist from Mark Ashman after Ashman stole a pass from a defender. The Pat's goals came in the second half of the game while C. W. Post scored once more to win.

The Pat's have been very productive in offense. The leading scorers are: Bellerio, 6 goals, 1 assist (13 Points); Richards, 4 goals, 3 assists (11 points); Ashman, 4 goals, 4 assists (12 points); Lee, 5 goals, 1 assist (11 points); and Tony Mazze, 4 goals, 1 assist (9 points).

The Patriots overall record is 8-4-1 and 4-0 in conference play. The team had previously won four games in a row and has been ranked ninth and tenth in the NY State Division III rankings at various weeks in the season.

The team will travel to SUNY Albany for the SUNY Centers Tournament this weekend vs. SUNY Binghamton, SUNY Albany and University of Buffalo.

Even though they lost the C.W. Post Tuesday, Stony Brook Men's Soccer clinched First place in the Suburban Soccer League (Division III) by beating Maritime 2-1 last Saturday.

Tennis Loss to Concordia Drops Pats to 6-3

By Jim Passano and Robby Schwach

In the season final, the Stony Brook women's tennis team lost a tough match to Division II ranked Concordia College on Wednesday. The 6-3 Pat loss came with the absence of veteran Chrissy Goodman.

Under cloudy skies and with cold air flowing, the Pats took the court to face off against Concordia, 3-6 in conference play. Junior Deirdre Ettus squared off in the first-seeded singles position against Fatima Kreimer. Ettus overcame Kreimer in straight sets in the fashion of singles competitions that day. The final score in that contest was 6-1, 7-

Due to absence of senior Goodman, Stony Brook was forced to forfeit the second-seeded singles match. Virginia Gileot was then credited with the win. In the longest and probably the most fiercely contended competition of the entire day, Sharon Marcus faced off against Lisa Corbitt, Concordia's third-seeded player. Corbitt was very consistent, especially with her backhand, and made few mistakes. Marcus, despite a strong performance, lost the match to Corbitt with respective 6-3, 6-4 scores.

Playing in the number four position, Ericka Iten had a difficult afternoon against her opponent Debby Caccia; she was defeated in straight sets with a final of identical 6-2, 6-2 scores. Holding up the fifth singles position, Jackie Fiore competed in her ninth singles match of the season. Like the other eight competitions she has played in this season, she won easily. In this one she overcame Laurie Poppey in straight sets, allowing her only three games in the contest, with a final score of 6-1, 6-2.

In the sixth and final singles match, sophomore Debbie Gruskin won handily over a much weaker contender in Concordia's Jamie Hartman. Gruskin soundly defeated Hartman with identical 6-1, 6-1 scores.

Entering the doubles competition, Concordia and Stony Brook were tied at three games apiece. Having only fielded five players for the match, Stony Brook was again forced to forfeit a contest, this time a third-seeded doubles match.

In first doubles, Fiore and Ettus challenged Kreimer and Gileot, who combined made for a stronger team. Stony Brook dropped a tightly contested first set 7-5. In the second set, the Pats were ahead but a strong, aggressive overhead game by Gileot forced a second set tiebreaker, which Stony Brook dropped 7-5.

Although the match was already in the hands of Concordia, Pats Iten and Marcus played Corbitt and Caccia in a tightly fought second-seeded double match. Corbitt and Caccia took the first set 6-3. Stony Brook came back strong in the second set and won it 7-5. The third and final set was played as a seven point tiebreaker, which the Pats lost 7-5, due to a few tough breaks.

The final score in the contest was 6-3. This left Stony Brook with a 9-6 record overall for the season. This 1984 mark is one of the best that Stony Brook has seen in the history of the women's tennis team.

Team Coach Rich L'Hommedieu was satisfied with the fact that Stony Brook has drastically improved over last year's season, when they were winless.

Selected team members are looking forward to the upcoming N. Y. State Championship tournament which will be held in Rochester, N. Y., which begins today.
