Trump to purchase Stony Brook

We needed a miracle and we got it. We all know this school is going To save space, each room will dorms, nasty professors, TAs you TV and each room will have an nauseating food. It's not what will save us, but whom and the mystery miracle man with all the answers is of the devastation that is Stony Brook University and decided that he wants to make it the best university in the world, his university. What will it cost us one may wonder. The answer, nothing. He will personally subsidize all the extra cost and when he is done with his six-year plan, this school will accept students solely based on merit. We however, we will start reaping the benefits starting next semester.

The winner of this season's Apprentice will actually head up the entire overhaul starting this my kids going there. Walking through the dormitories made me sick," Trump said. "This is the perfect opportunity for me to give back something to the state that his given me all my fame and riches." It will take time to build deluxe dorms but until they are done in summer will be moved out and replaced as a skating rink.

At the top of his agenda are none other than TRUMP! He heard plans to keep only the best professors Stony Brook currently has and let the rest go to be replaced by some of the brightest minds money can buy. After surveying students to verify what faculty deserves to stay, the ones that don't make the cut or pass his interview will hear "you're fired." The TAs we have all grown to love will no longer be needed as class sizes will be cut by as much as 90 percent in some cases. Stony Brook Issues Hunting Permits for Campus Pests

By Marissa Tafone Statesman Contributo

Stony Brook Administration has decided to grant students hunting permits, which will allow them to shoot any gray squirrel roaming campus grounds during the spring season. This is a new attempt to rid the school of its pesky rodent problem.

The school was first forced to take action last year when a Stony Brook student - who prefers that his name not be revealed - was viciously attacked outside the Student Activities Center by a mob of squirrels. He had been eating a Nutter Butter candy. The student had threatened to sue the school for physical harm and emotional damage if it did not act to prevent further such instances of squirrel mania.

the number of campus squirrels in a cheap, yet humane way. They decided to transport a small group of about Squirrel." twenty-five to thirty black squirrels into the area to "let March 21st until June 20th. nature take its course." The logic behind this act was that the aggressive black squirrels would come to dominate the area, forcing the common gray squirrels off of the campus. The black squirrels would hunting. then be returned to their habitats of origin. Before this plan had time to effect any change, however, the black squirrels had to be removed as a way to quell heated protests. The National Association for the Advancement of Colored Squirrels (NAACS) was one of the groups to rally against this plan. The group cited racial inequality as a primary fallacy of the plan. They argued that the small group of black squirrels would experience "unfair persecution" on account of their race that would ultimately "inhibit [their] potential as squirrels." Because of this group's protests, the plans were scratched, and the black squirrels were sent back to their homelands.

So the only sensible thing left for school officials to do was to issue squirrel-hunting permits to students. The Stony Brook Administration has recommended that students who apply for the permits should shoot squirrels only when instances of self-defense warrant it. But the lack of administrative enforcers and the pervading attitudes of many Stony Brook students will make this recommendation difficult to implement. "I don't slow down for squirrels," says commuter Christian Flat. "Mama needs a new fur coat," adds Minnie Pimp.

Upon hearing news of this permit distribution, Charlton Heston has declared Stony Brook a "haven for the preservation of American democracy." He has agreed to stage a rally on campus, tentatively scheduled for April 1st, where he will distribute free rifles to students whom he refers to as "barrels of light." He Officials wanted to lessen has informed us that he has prepared a speech to give at this rally, which he has aptly named: "From My Dead, Cold,

Why Do These Ani Insist on Talking to Me?

By Tom Grandville and Joe Brown

A politically-charged atmosphere is unavoidable on any college campus. Young people seem to be under the impression that the community at large is incomplete if it lacks their very loud, very extreme opinions. They also seem to think that accosting people trying to leave the library is an effective means of furthering their various causes. Should that unsuspecting student not put his name and telephone number on that small slip of paper which these temporally misplaced flower-children will inevitably hand him, he will be made subject to a bombast which sometimes includes, but is not exclusive to, hopes of future bodily harm. It was not uncommon during the 2004 presidential election to hear someone with an IQ comparable to that of the sign he was holding wish a bloody death in battle upon a fellow student who did not desire to vote Kerry/Edwards. Apparently, simply being a thorn in the side to students whose primary concern is their classwork—since this is an actual academic institution—is not enough, as the dendrophiliacs in question feel the need to be outwardly nasty to any dissenters as well. It must be admitted that standing in the SAC circle shouting into a megaphone does not stop the political machine of the United States any more than

Advice.

Dear Guys,

I have been talking with this guy for a couple of months now online and on the phone. We have a lot of great late night conversations and I want to take our relationship beyond friendship. How can I do this without getting my feelings hurt in the process? I've been in this situation before and have been hurt pretty badly. Please help!

Lonely

Ask Zahra

Dear Lonely,

I'm sorry sweetheart but you've been talking to this boy for months and he hasn't given you any indication that he likes you? It sounds like he's not interested. Think of it this way, when a guy meets a girl who he thinks is perfect for him, it doesn't take him months to make a move on it. If you've been responding to his calls, talking to him consistently, and perhaps showing some affection, he wouldn't need another year to at least tell you how he feels about you. When a guy wants a girl, he'll go for her, if he hasn't, then its best you keep the friendship where it is now or risk being hurt again.

Ask Dick

Dear Lonely,

The reason you've been hurt before in similar situations is that naïve waifs like you don't understand men. He either wants to sleep with you, or sleep with one of your friends. It's possible that he doesn't have the brass to move on either right now, hence the present form of stagnation. Heterosexual males do not pal around with girls without aiming for the sweet pot of honey at the end. The fact that these are "great, late-night conversations" makes me think that he's into you-there's only so far he'd be willing to go to score points with the friends of the girl he's after. This is, of course, assuming you're not a total heifer. If your thunder thighs rub together when you walk and he's still having these late-night conversations with you, then he's probably gay, and you should look for companionship in a mail-order Russian husband. Your best defense against getting hurt again is looking at the situation realistically. If he's out of your league (that is, the Dreadnought class), then it's probably best to move on.

Love, Dick

Stony Brook Researches Develop Ice Cream Diet

By Amanda Rubenstein

Statesman Editor

Modern research in weight loss and fat reduction has led to the conclusion that dairy products are extremely important when it comes to losing body fat and weight for the long term. In light of this and in direct contrast to the low-carb craze that overtook the nation, ice cream has be come the most popular diet food on campus and throughout the nation.

The secret behind the weight loss caused by eating large amounts of ice cream is the finding that happiness caused by bright colored, sweet ice cream releases endorphins similar to those released by exercising. These endorphins increase heart rate and make people hyper, allowing them to burn calories similarly to the experience of users of several diet pills and Speed.

Studies have shown that the ice creams with the most potent weight loss abilities are those with the most sugar. Therefore, in order to lose the most weight the fastest, indulge in ice cream filled with the most artificial colors and candy possible. Candy like Snickers and Heath Bar work best, and cookie dough pieces show excessive weight loss benefits.

However, experts warn, frozen yogurt cannot be used to lose weight like ice cream can. In order for the weight loss to occur, the sugar must be taken in with a large amount of fat, mostly of the saturated variety. With the saturated fat, sugar became embedded in the arteries of test subjects and produced an extremely long-term endorphin weight loss effect.

As with any diet, it is important to consult a physician before beginning. Many people will find that the ice cream diet is so easy to follow that they will go right on the diet without consulting a healthcare professional. It is imperative that patients consult their doctors before going on the ice cream diet.

In addition, big losers need to recognize that eating the correct ice cream alone will not lead to weight loss. The ice cream must be incorporated into a balanced, healthy diet that includes exercise. If exercise is not a factor in the weight loss program, the weight loss will not go at the optimal rate.

Although unbelievable, the research is true. You CAN lose weight by eating ice cream. Just remember: a balanced diet and exercise is absolutely essential to weight loss. Also, never go on any diet/exercise regimen without consulting a health professional first. If you consider these things, you should be all set for big, fast weight loss all by eating ice cream!
