Thefts, Criminal Mischief Plague Some Parking Lots

By MELISSA SPIELMAN

Theft and vandalism in campus parking lots, especially in the Infirmary and Kelly lots, is reaching epidemic proportions this semester.

In the period from September 1 to 14, seven thefts in Kelly and five thefts in addition to three cases of criminal mischief in the Infirmary lot were reported to campus security. However, many more thefts went unreported.

Steve Caruso of Kelly C described a series of threats which took place in the Kelly paved lot on September 10. "Every car within an area of 20 car-lengths with a hood you could open from the outside had its battery ripped off," he said. He estimated 15 batteries were stolen that night.

Kelly C resident Bill Roth said, "The night before that, the RA [Residential Assistant] on this hall got his battery ripped off." "This happens constantly but nothing gets done," said Kim Warner, another Kelly resident.

A security shift supervisor said, "We've increased patrols in the entire Quad area [referring to all quads on campus], including the parking lots. We concentrate on areas which are isolated or poorly lit."

Several Kelly C residents cited inadequate lighting as a factor in the crimes. Roth said, "Most of the lights in the lot are out."

Dr. Richard Schmidt, the acting university president, and Polity President David Herzog signed an agreement this summer which stated, in part, that lighting in parking lots would be improved, but so far the lighting situation has not been corrected.

This year, the Kelly paved lot has been harder hit than any other lot on campus. From January to September 10, 27 cases of theft and criminal mischief were reported for that lot. Tabler lot, second on the list, had 13 reported cases in that period.

"When I first came to Kelly C," said Warner, "I was told not to leave my car [in the Kelly lot.]"

When asked how she will deal with the lot's high crime rate, Warner replied, "I'll try parking in Stage XII." Roth said, "I'm going to get a chain and hope they can't cut through it."

Vandalism has plagued Benedict College every night since the semester's start, H-Quad Director Ruth Lugo said. Lugo said that vandals have also been responsible for broken walls, a railing, which has been torn off a wall and a broken glass door. An estimate of the latest damage has not yet been revealed.

"Every day it gets a little worse," explained Benedict College Director Tracy Schnieder.

Thursday night, a newly installed water fountain for handicapped students was destroyed outside the H-Quad Office along with many ceiling tiles in the E-O section of Benedict.

Langmuir College Resident Hall Director (RHD) Jonna Monhony said she and a friend discovered the damages about 4:30 AM after they had returned from a two hour visit at Kelly Quad.

"This is the second night in a row that a water fountain has been torn down in the building," said Schnieder.

"I went to bed at 1:30," explained a resident of E-O. When I woke up this morning, the place was a wreck."

In a meeting with Vice President of Student Affairs Elizabeth Wadsworth, and the other resident hall directors of H-Quad Friday, Schnieder said, "They [the vandals] are not from this building. They're outside people from other quads who come to instigate and stir unrest."

Bars Reopening in a Few Weeks

By JESSE LONDIN

Three of the four campus bars and a beer concession which were recently closed are expected to reopen within the next few weeks, but Benedict Saloon may remain shut for several more months.

James and Whitman Pubs, the beer concession in the Union Bowling Alley, the Graduate Student Lounge in the Graduate Chemistry building and the Saloon were closed September 4 after their operator, the Faculty Student Association (FSA) discovered their licenses had expired (see related story page 3). The bowling alley has been without a license since July, the Saloon has been without one for 18 months, and the other three since February.

FSA applied for "late renewal" of the licenses of James, Whitman, the Graduate Student Lounge and the beer concession. The State Liquor Authority has denied a late renewal for Benedict Saloon because an application for that must be filed within one year of the license's expiration date. The Saloon must have a new liquor license, which could take two to three months.

Donnie Thayer, co-manager of the Benedict Saloon, said, "The license is not the only hassle. Residence Life is placing many obstacles in our path because they do not want to see any dormitory bars open."

The obstacles cited include curfews and low noise levels. Saloon co-manager Lisa Robinson said at Thursday's "Rally for Student Rights," "We did everything to try to comply with Residence Life — we changed from bottles to cups, we lowered the stereo, we closed early."

The rally, organized by Polity, was held to protest the tripling of students in the dormitories, the relocation of some Benedict and Irving residents, inadequate campus parking, and the closing of the four bars.

At a meeting Friday of the University and Polity officials, which resulted from the rally, Vice President for Student Affairs Elizabeth Wadsworth promised Polity President David Herzog a signed statement guaranteeing that James and Whitman Pubs will be opened when their licenses are renewed.

The statement, however, stipulated that because, "the saloon in Benedict has been in violation of SLA [state liquor authority] regulations," it will not be opened until those violations are remedied. Among the actions required is the installation of a second fire door

Paper Prints H-Bomb Secrets

Madison, Wisconsin (AP) — A diagram and the complete text of a controversial letter that the government says contains secret information about the hydrogen bomb were published yesterday in a special edition of the Madison Free Press Connection.

The letter — written by Charles Hansen, a computer programmer from Mountain View, California — figured in a Saturday night ruling by a federal judge in San Francisco, who issued a temporary restraining order barring the student-run Daily Californian of Berkeley from publishing it.

U.S. District Judge Robert Schaacke ordered the Daily Californian and two of its editors not to publish or give anyone else material from the letter, which the government classified earlier in the week as "secret restricted data" under the Atomic Energy Act of 1954.

No injunction was issued to the Press Connection, however.

Violation of the energy act carries penalties or fines up to $10,000 or imprisonment for up to 10 years.

Nuclear Hobby

Hansen, 23, says his hobby is collecting documents about nuclear weaponry. Copies of his letter, written to Senator Charles Percy, (R-Illinois), apparently had been sent to as many as seven newspapers and several individuals.

The Press Connection, which normally does not publish on Sunday, printed an eight-page extra edition, most of it devoted to the text of Hansen's letter.

The newspaper said it decided to publish the material as an answer to what it called government censorship.

Refusal

The Milwaukee Sentinel reported Saturday that Energy Department officials asked its editors to give up their copy of the letter, but they refused.

The Sentinel's story said Hansen's August 27-dated letter complained that several scientists have released secret data related to the bomb and have not been prosecuted, while free-lance writer Howard Morland and others working from those documents have been the target of Energy Department action.

Naila, West Germany — Eight East Germans, including four children, floated through the night skies over Germany and across the "death strip" border to the West yesterday in a homemade hot-air balloon stitched together from bits of nylon and bedsheets.

The group, made up of two families each with two children, escaped in a 12-mile, 20-minute flight that ended in the Bavarian town six miles from the border. Their leader, an airplane mechanic, told reporters they had prepared for the trip for two months, since they failed in their first attempt July 4.

The mechanic, who asked that none of their names be used, said they fled for political reasons, because "it was no longer possible for us to live with our children and put up with the political conditions in East Germany."

New Delhi, India — Afghanistan President Nur Mohammed Taraki resigned the presidency and leadership of the ruling party yesterday, Radio Afghanistan reported, as intensifying rebel warfare and political dissension pushed the country deeper into turmoil.

Strongman

Taraki, citing poor health, resigned as president in favor of Prime Minister Nafizullah Amin. The 50-year-old Amin, considered a more hard-line communist than Taraki, had forced him into the background in recent months and emerged as the pro-Soviet regime's strongman.

Internal Split

Afghanistan has been weakened by an internal split in the ruling Khalq People's Party and as insurgency by right-wing Moslem tribesmen, who now control about half the countryside.

National

Washington D.C. — Senator Edward Kennedy says a major factor in his decision whether or not to run for the 1980 Democratic presidential nomination will be whether President Jimmy Carter is able to regain the confidence of the American people.

"It's back to whether the people have the sense of confidence that he can deal with these issues. I think that's a matter of deepening and increasing concern to people as we come to the 1980s," the senator said.

The interview with Kennedy took place the day after an AP-NBC News poll showed only 19 percent of those questioned rated Carter's work excellent or good. It was the lowest overall job rating for an American president in 30 years.

No Timetable

Kennedy said that while he has no timetable for a decision, he would plan, if he runs, to enter the earliest primaries and contest for delegates in the January 21 Democratic caucuses in Iowa. That would indicate that the latest he would announce his plans would be early January.

State and Local

Albany — The state Environmental Facilities Corporation has suggested that New York get into the toxic waste disposal business.

Future Facilities

In a preliminary report released Saturday the corporation said the state should lease land to private operators to develop large disposal and reclamation facilities.

At the same time, Governor Hugh Carey appointed a nine-member advisory committee on disposal of hazardous wastes headed by William Shuster, professor of environmental engineering at Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute. RPI was one of two consultants that worked with the environmental corporation on its preliminary report.

Library May Open 24-Hour Lounge

By TERESA DeMARIE

After nearly a year of meetings and discussions, a proposal for a 24-hour study room in the Library has been submitted to the University for consideration.

The Student Life Committee, which first began discussing the idea last fall, formulated a proposal in February and after discussions with Polity officials and the office of Student Affairs, the completed joint proposal has finally been submitted this month.

If the proposal is accepted, the library's old map room will be accessible to students at all hours, offering a variety of vending machines and a section of reserve materials. Student Life Committee Chairman Elof Carlson, a distinguished professor of Biology, said the purpose of the center will be two-fold: "To combine a study area in the library with a reserve section exclusively for old exams and lecture notes; and it is to be a place where students can study effectively 24 hours a day."

Student leaders have argued for years for an around-the-clock study area, citing midterm and finals periods as times of acute need. In past years, a number of students have faced disciplinary action after being found studying in the library, and other buildings on campus, after hours.

The proposal suggests that the study lounge provide mimeograph and xerox machine, fast food vending machines, a telephone, and a dollar-bill coin changer. A creative suggestion was to make the lecture notes for large undergraduate courses available for mimeographing. Due to a lack of staff, the Main Library no longer provides this service.

A budget for the lounge has not yet been determined, according to Carlson, who co-signed the original proposal. The Budget will provide for one full time employee to run the lounge, and funds acquired from the use of the various machines in the lounge will help finance salaries for student workers to staff the lounge for the entire 24 hour period.

Some equipment and construction changes are necessary before the lounge can be opened. It will require an entry door facing the Chemistry Building and locked passages leading to the Main Library. Floor-boarding is required to cover a depressed pit intended for computer housing, and the report also stated that an entrance should include proper facilities for the handicapped.

Certain provisions for the prevention of crime are also included in the proposal. The staff will not carry money in order to change bills. The doors leading to the main library will be equipped with burglar alarms to deter thieves. It also has been suggested that Polity provide a voluntary escort service to the dormitories. A foot-operated burglar alarm will be installed with a direct line to Campus Security.

He's Selling Stony Books

Stony Brook students, who in past years could rely only on the campus bookstore to provide them with textbooks, have had another place to turn this semester. Stony Books, situated on Route 25A near the Stony Brook Long Island Railroad station, has been supplying textbooks at least five percent below the prices of those sold on campus.

The bookstore is owned and operated by Robert Breun, formerly the manager of the campus bookstore while it was operated by Kingsborough Bookstores Inc. Kingsborough went bankrupt in May, and Breun rented the empty store space on 25A in July.

Breun said he has been selling new textbooks from five percent to as much as 20 percent below list price. Barnes and Noble, the current operator of the campus bookstore sells its stock at list price. Used texts, which Breun said comprise the majority of his stock are being sold at 25 to 40 percent below list price, the same price rate that Barnes and Noble charges.

He said he obtained a copy of the booklist for undergraduate fall courses while he was still employed with Kingsborough.

Although he said before the start of the semester that he expected to have 95 percent of the titles offered on campus, he said last week that "There's a lot of stuff that popped up during the first week or so that we didn't have." He said he did not have the titles for "at least 20 to 25 courses," and had none of the textbooks offered in the Health Sciences Center bookstore.

Breun said he should not have this problem in the future because he will find out what books to carry from the academic department.

BOB BREUN

Business, according to Breun, has not been as good as he had hoped because many students were unaware of the store's existence. However, he said he expected business to improve next semester as more students become familiar with the store.

Songster Mystery Yet To Be Solved

While the Faculty Student Association (FSA) awaits the renewal of the liquor licenses for its four bars, the mystery surrounding former FSA Chief Operating Officer John Songster's motives in leaving behind five uncertified checks and conflicting verbal accounts of the whereabouts of the original license renewal applications remains to be solved.

Before leaving the association, Songster repeatedly assured several FSA officials that FSA possessed the renewed liquor licenses. Songster is currently on vacation in Europe.

FSA President Ann Velardi said that during a telephone conversation with Songster in August,

Bars To Reopen

in the Saloon.

FSA President Ann Velardi said there is a "concerted effort" on the part of the administration to close the dormitory bars. She said, "They have shown no tolerance, no flexibility. A whole maze of regulations are being imposed by the administration which openly admits to not wanting bars in the dorms."

Assistant Vice President for Business and Finance John Williams said at Thursday's rally, "There is no movement to close any of the bars."

Velardi contended, "The students have a right to have the campus bars open and functioning. I can see how once they are opened again, the administration will plot and scheme to shut them down."

about a week before he left, she told him she could not find the licenses or the applications anywhere in the FSA offices.

He replied, according to Velardi, "I sent in the applications last January. Don't you remember signing them?"

Never Cashed

Velardi was not on campus in January, and the State Liquor Authority maintains it never received license renewal applications.

Velardi said five FSA checks, each for $290, were made out to the state authority for renewal fees, but the checks were never cashed.

After being "misinformed" by Songster,

JOHN SONGSTER

Velardi said, the FSA continued to operate its campus bars (James and Whitman Pubs, the Benedict Saloon, the Graduate Student Lounge in the Graduate Chemistry Building) and the beer concession in the Union bowling alley on the assumption that its licenses were valid.

In fact, Velardi said, the FSA was unknowingly violating state law. Although Songster's intentions are not known, Velardi said, FSA officials were placed in the position of possibly facing criminal charges as a result of his actions.

When Velardi received word from the state that the licenses were never renewed, the bars were shut down.

Affidavit

Initially, the state agency agreed to grant immediate late renewals of four of the licenses if Velardi would sign an affidavit stating that no liquor was sold after the expiration of the original licenses. The FSA must apply for a new license for the Benedict Saloon because its license expired 18 months ago and renewals are given only if the expiration was within the past year.

"I couldn't perjure myself by signing that," said Velardi. "I had no choice but to close the bars."

She later signed an affidavit admitting that FSA sold liquor without a license.

"I don't blame people for being upset," said Velardi. "FSA made a really big mistake. I can't slander former employees. FSA as a whole has to take responsibility for what happened."

Cross Burning Worries Black Family

KENNETH ANDERSON

By CHRIS FAIRHALL

Like the Ku Klux Klan, cross burnings have survived the civil rights era, a community leader connected with the University learned on Friday.

Kenneth Anderson, president of the Brookhaven chapter of the NAACP and a continuing critic of the University's affirmative action policies, reportedly discovered a partially burned cross on his lawn Friday morning.

Though Anderson was unavailable for comment Sunday, his wife, Arlene, remarked, "It's an awful feeling . . . awful in the sense that something like this can happen." Ms. Anderson said her husband found the cross in front of the black family's Port Jefferson home at 10 AM that morning. "It was pretty well charred. The grass underneath it was pretty well burned," she said. None of their neighbors saw the cross burn, according to Ms. Anderson.

Ms. Anderson said she is glad that her son is at school in Florida, because she fears that someone, or some group, might try to harm her husband or her family. Asked about it, she gave a somber reply.

"It certainly seems that way," she said. She believes that her house may have been picked because of her husband's civil rights work. "It could well be . . . His name is frequently in the newspapers."

Ms. Anderson said her community is no different than any other. In 1964, she said her family moved there, and it was "at the height of civil rights activity." She said that their moving in caused a "serious feeling in the community," and for a short period of time their windows were broken.

She said the community has lived in harmony for the last 15 years. "I know all my neighbors. I've seen all the children grow up here. They grew up with my son."

Abortion Debated in Local Church

By LIZABETH SCOTT

Are all women who use birth control murderers?

Bill Baird, a strong pro-choice activist, argued with Jim McInerney, a member of the Three Village Right to Life Society, Thursday at the Unitarian Church in Stony Brook.

Baird has been active in the pro-choice movement for 16 years and operates three non-profit clinics. He has been jailed eight times in five states for teaching about birth control and abortion. Baird vs. Eisenstadt in 1972 legalized abortion. More recently, in the Baird vs. Bellotti case, July 1979, he successfully challenged a Massachusetts law which required both parents' consent for minors wanting an abortion, and won. However, his Long Island operated clinics have met with much opposition. His clinics have allegedly been fire bombed 26 times and one of his employees was attacked.

One burning issue covered at the debate included determining when life begins. Baird claims that an embryo is not a life. "No one buries an embryo after a miscarriage," he said.

McInerney attempted to biologically prove that as the sperm enters the ovary, the embryo becomes a separate being apart from its parents, merely feeding off its mother.

He cited a decision reached at the International Conference on Abortion in 1977. At this meeting, the question of life's beginning was contemplated and it was agreed that life begins at the time of conception. Baird, in his rebuttal, did not fail to mention that the conference was sponsored by the Joseph Kennedy Foundation and was a staged show because the foundation is Roman Catholic and Right to Life oriented. McInerney, after biologically trying to prove his statement, claimed the medical aspects and legality of abortion make no difference.

Baird bitterly attacked the Catholic Church. He noted it was not violent toward the idea of capital punishment. He also told of a 12-year-old girl who was raped by her father and subsequently attempted suicide because of her fear of excommunication from the church. The approximately 125 person audience reacted strongly. Some got up and left while others loudly called Baird a sensationalist killer.

The debate shifted to the question of influence for a moment. McInerney claimed the clinics were ripping off the American public because they are tax exempt. However, Baird pointed out that $2 million in taxes will be spent in Boston this fall when Pope John Paul II comes to visit for two days.

McInerney carefully avoided the question of what to offer women in lieu of abortions. Shouts of "chicken" were heard from the crowd.

McInerney said, "The churches were blamed when they didn't protest the slaughter of six million Jews in Nazi Germany; now they are being fought because they are speaking up."

Library Valuables Are Now on Display

By TABASSUM ZAKARIA

The Special Collections Department of the University Library is currently featuring an exhibit to acquaint students and community residents with its variety of spectacular holdings.

There are such contrasting items as a two foot high volume of watercolors and a tiny one inch book which was a prize in a Cracker Jack box. Also present is a one-of-a-kind book called Fishing, bound in canvas with a mixed-media art work cover and has a fish hook attached to it.

Evert Volkensz, head of the Department of Special Collections and University Archivist said the exhibit theme is "Variety of Special Collections." "It's to show people all the different things we have," he said.

The department, which is responsible for taking care of fragile and unusual material that would otherwise be lost or damaged in the regular library stacks is open for use by the general public.

Books, however, are not allowed to be checked out and no one but the department staff is allowed in the stacks. "This is to protect the books, not to make them inaccessible," explained Volkensz.

Within the 10,000 books currently in the department's stacks are complete or nearly completed works of several authors, a children's book section showing the development of children's books over the year, and a large section on the history of Long Island.

The department's stacks contain the University Archives. The archives includes all the announcements, bulletins, catalogues, directories, yearbooks, newsletters, and other such material of the University since its inception in 1957.

The Special Collection Department is located on the second floor of the library and is open weekdays from 8:30 AM to 5 PM. The exhibit will be closing October 15.

Man's Inhumanity

Like a forest fire out of control, there have been a number of cross burnings and other overt racist acts in the metropolitan area over the past several months. It is as if all the latent racism that was suppressed in the 1960s has surfaced once more.

As decent, moral Americans, we cannot allow these acts to continue. These acts of hostility pitting man versus fellow man, must be stopped. For it is an underlying principle of our nation that no person may infringe upon the rights of another; especially his rights of freedom of speech and expression.

Kenneth Anderson is one of the strongest proponents for the rights of minorities and the rights of all people. Even though a cross was burned at his home, it symbolically burned at the homes of all people.

What's the Problem?

With the memory of a student killed by a train passing through the Stony Brook Railroad Station still fresh in their minds, the University and Long Island Rail Road (LIRR) representative met with student leaders in the spring of 1978 to discuss safety measures for the station. They agreed that the construction of a footbridge connecting the campus and the station would serve that purpose best—if $150,000 could be found.

Students lobbied for that money in Albany, and surprised most parties involved when they succeeded. The state legislature came up with the cash last spring, and LIRR Chief Engineer had a three-party contract drawn up, specifying the responsibilities of the University and the Town of Brookhaven.

The University was expected to build and maintain two chain-link fences to sandwich the tracks, and provide transportation for handicapped people who could not cross the elevated bridge. The town was to take responsibility for maintaining the bridge, and the railroad was supposed to build it.

But when it came time for the parties involved to sign the agreement, nobody wanted any part of it.

It's all well and good to be gung-ho about safety improvements when there is blood on the tracks, but the test of real commitment comes when the tragic accident fades further and further into the past. There is something to be said for the argument that a bridge is unnecessary considering the cost, but if this is at issue, then let the parties involved say so instead of gumming up the decision-making machinery with petty squabbles. There is $150,000 that could be making a safer station, waiting to be spent.

Fiscal Irresponsibility

In an effort to alleviate over-crowding in H-Quad Cafeteria, the University has instituted a shuttle bus service to Kelly and Roth Quad Cafeterias during peak eating hours. The cost — $60 per day.

In an age when money is tight, and budgets are continually being slashed, such an expenditure is fiscally irresponsible and completely misdirected.

A much more intelligent solution to the problem would be to reopen G-Quad Cafeteria, now used as a storage area. Furthermore, if there were adequate campus bus service to begin with, a specialized cafeteria bus would not be necessary.

While the University's intentions are good, we feel that spending $300 a week for a bus service which serves only 100 students per meal is an outrageous waste of money.

See the Light

To the Editor:

When God said "Let there be light," he obviously overlooked the Stony Brook campus. If one were to take a stroll (maybe it should be a run?) through campus after dark you would think that when Thomas Edison invented the light bulb, he figured that college campuses, Stony Brook in particular, was still back in the Stone Age and that no one ventured outside after the sun went down for fear of attack by wild animals.

Let us face the facts. This administration obviously doesn't give a damn about student safety. One would be hard pressed to find a single walking path on this campus that is sufficiently lit. In fact, most of the paths are so dark (academic mall, Tabler and Roth Quads, in particular), that when I ride my bicycle on them I have a very realistic fear that one day soon I will have a close encounter of the bone-jarring kind. Namely I, or any other innocent victim for that matter, will find him or herself and bicycle wrapped around a tree, no thanks to Stony Brook's technologically advanced lighting system.

Not only do these poorly lit paths pose a real threat to cyclists, but also, and even more importantly, to pedestrians of the female persuasion who now become even easier prey for those violent aggressors called rapists.

I believe it is high time that this safety hazard was corrected for the good of the campus community as a whole. I certainly hope it doesn't take another rape or cycling incident to make the administration see the light, even though it still may be in the dark ages.

A Vulgar Reference

To the Editor:

I find the allusion to the relocated students as "boat people" to be totally abhorrent. The plight of the real boat people is one of the true human tragedies of modern times. Reference to the "Stony Brook Boat People" (students who have been relocated as a result of extensive vandalism in their halls) is vulgar and shows as callous an attitude toward true human suffering as I can imagine.

Certainly, the relocation of these students does not bear more than the most minute resemblance to the fate of the boat people... people who for racial and political reasons have been stripped of every possession and thrust onto overcrowded boats into a world where no one will have them. To compare the magnitudes of suffering or injustice is obscene.

It seems to me that these students certainly have a right to an appeal, and that the administration is acting somewhat tyrannical in refusing to grant them that much, but a comparison to the "boat people" in order to stir student interest is basically a cheap capitalization on enormous human suffering for a basically selfish cause.

I hope these students change their public relations approach. People who could be so selfish and callous deserve no sympathy. Every reference I see to the "Stony Brook Boat People" manages to turn my stomach.

The White House Forced Young's Ouster

By RABBI ALAN FLAM

Andrew Young's resignation as U.S. Ambassador to the U.N. has prompted debate over U.S. policy toward the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO), U.S. relations with Israel and relations between American blacks and Jews. It seems certain that all these controversies will continue for some time, since they all involve contestable issues. But through all the smoke, there are some indisputable facts that are either being overlooked or deliberately denied.

The first fact is that Young's resignation was not sought by Israel or by American Jews. Among the leaders of nine American Jewish organizations who met with Ambassador Robert Strauss the day before Young stepped down, only one called for his resignation.

What Israel, and American friends of Israel, did was protest Young's meeting with a PLO representative at the U.N. The aim of such protests was not Young's ouster, but a reversal of the Carter administration's retreat from a US commitment to Israel that it will not deal with the PLO until that organization recognizes

ANDREW YOUNG

Israel's right to exist. Young's meeting with the PLO official was seen as but one sign of the policy shift, and Israel would have been far more reassured by a reaffirmation of U.S. policy on the PLO than by the forced resignation of Young.

Moreover, Israel and its American supporters could not even take comfort in the intent of the President forcing him to go. The White House made clear that the ambassador's resignation was not prompted by his meeting with a PLO representative but by his misrepresentations of the meeting to the State Department. Even if American Jews were disturbed by Young's action, it goes without saying that the protest had nothing to do with his being black. It is, therefore, regrettable that his resignation has become an issue between the black and Jewish communities. "If the representative of the US would have been Jacob Goldstein, Israel would have protested in exactly the same way," said Israeli Deputy Prime Minister Yigal Yadin.

Blaming Young's departure on "Jewish pressure," as more than a few people have done, is nothing short of demagoguery. Blaming it on Israel or, more specifically, on Israel's UN Ambassador, for bringing Young's PLO meeting to the attention of the State Department, is a case of blaming the messenger for bad news. Israel: A Zionist Exclusivist Structure

BY BENJAMIN M. JOSEPH

Last month, Israeli newspapers reported that General Avigdor Ben-Gal, commander of the Northern District, referred to the Israeli Arab population of the Galilee area as "a cancer in our body." On the following day, the Israeli press generally applauded his "outspokenness" and "sense of prophecy." While many had reservations about the specific wording, the consensus in Israel was that "it's the idea that counts," and, as one Parliament member put it, "The General cannot be expected to be a wording artist."

The following week the government raised the prices of basic staples by 50 percent, and agreed to help poor Israeli citizens who have large families meet the new costs. For this purpose, they came up with something called "draftees' allowance," so benefits could go almost exclusively to Jews.

This is just a random sample of Israeli facts of life that I discovered during a brief visit with (Jewish) relatives and friends in the country where I grew up and where I shall never reside again. These are things that neither readers of the New York Times nor those of students here who can't wait to graduate and immigrate to Israel are likely to be aware of. Had I not gone there, I would never have found out myself. My main proposition is that the well-meaning American who has no direct access to Israeli sources and feels that Israel is a "bastion of democracy" which terrorists and other beasts are trying to annihilate for no reason is at best, poorly informed and at worst, totally ignorant about the real issues and the contextual framework of the Mideast conflict. (See for instance, two Viewpoints in the September 10 issue of Statesman.)

Even Israeli spokesmen and their apologists will probably agree with the following diagnosis: The main problem in the Mideast is, rather simply, that the Palestinian Liberation Organization (PLO) and most principled Arab states have refused and will continue to refuse to recognize the Israeli entity in its present Zionist character.

The movement of Political Zionism (as opposed to the religious Zionism of prayerbooks) emerged on the premise that "the hatred of non-Jews to Jews is eternal and spreading among (the non-Jews) like an incurable disease," as Leib Pinsker, one of the main proponents of Zionism put it. Therefore the only possible solution to "such eternal hatred to the people of eternity" is that they leave their countries and colonize the land where a Jewish Kingdom existed in biblical times. Only there, according to the Zionist theory, in a state with a Jewish majority at all times can Jews be free and safe.

The trouble was, of course, that unlike other national movements which were local, the land which was picked by the Zionists for the state with the Jewish majority was in another continent and was inhabited by non-Jews who had worked and lived there since time immemorial. By definition, then, the idea was to create a state not just for human beings or for its residents but a special state for those who were born to Jewish mothers wherever they might be (or those who go through a religious ritual of conversion.) Now, that's bound to be a little bit of a problem!

It is because of the Jewish state idea that there are now displaced non-Jews (Palestinians), the PLO, and acts of terrorism. For any American or Japanese whose mother and grandmother are Jewish is urged to come to Israel and become a citizen instantly, (the law of return) but the displaced indigenous population cannot go back to their homes in the Jewish state. Further, in order to maintain the Jewish majority, an Israeli version of apartheid is being practiced in Israel. Non-Jews in the Jewish state are receiving different, inferior treatment from cradle to grave. From welfare payments which are only given to Jews, to Jewish National Fund laws which explicitly prohibit the sale lease or renting of state lands to non-Jews! They may, however, vote. It is, I believe, because of such apartheid policies that the United Nations General Assembly passed a resolution in 1975 stating that Zionism is one form of racism.

Now, it is with this kind of state, a state which occupies, oppresses, colonizes and throws bombs on refugee camps, that the PLO and other Arab states are being pressured into recognizing. This is the kind of state whose security is probably the most talked about issue in world affairs, and which has been receiving at least 1.8 billion annually in U.S. taxpayers' money.

"Surely terrorism (be it in the form of dynamite in a bus station or as cluster bombs thrown on refugee camps and on Lebanese peasants) is a crime and cannot be condoned by any civilized human being. Quite another question, to which I do not purport to have an answer, is "What else can an oppressed people under occupation do? Do they write letters to the editor? Did George Washington do that? Or, was he a terrorist, too? (Incidentally, a fact that's often overlooked is that in most cases where a "terrorist" attack ended with a tragedy — such as the tourist bus, Kiriath Shmone or Maalot — it happened because of the Israeli government's policy of "not yielding to terrorism." In all these cases, the attackers intended to take hostages and try to obtain the release of their imprisoned comrades. The bloodshed occurred after the Israeli forces opened fire.)

But history and justice converge only rarely, and when they do, it is by pure accident. It may well be that the Zionist exclusivist structure is there to stay, armed to its teeth and bankrolled by the American government. Many Palestinians, including PLO President Yasir Arafat, are now aware of this tragic reality. Surely, he wishes the state wasn't there, and in that sense Zionist spokesmen are right. But last Sunday he went to great lengths to assure Barbara Walters in "Issues and Answers" that it is entirely ridiculous to talk about the destruction of a nuclear power such as Israel by a weak and poor tiny Palestinian state. Further, he vehemently denied that the Palestinian charter calls for the dismantling of of Israel. Whether it does or not is, of course, debatable, but one must not overlook the significance of such talk by the chairman of the PLO. Indeed, for the past five years, the PLO leadership has been saying the following in every possible way: Let us have at least a piece of our land (namely the occupied West Bank and Gaza) and the last thing we'll be in a position to do is "destroy" the Zionist state. But don't ask us to recognize our oppressors as a precondition." They can't even get that much. So the refugee camps are still there, as they have been for 31 years. Because, indeed, history and justice in this world converge only rarely, and when they do it is often by pure accident.

Vandalism Strikes Benedict College

The RHDs at the meeting expressed their belief that the destruction of the hall may be linked to students who are angered over recent campus issues, particularly the relocation of the "Boat People," — 46 former residents of Benedict E-0, and James A2 and D3, who were relocated at the end of last year after their halls were damaged by vandals.

"I have a lot of angry students who think their rights have been violated. It's turning into a day by day battle," said Lugo.

Lugo also said that because of the vandalism she has been in contact with security every night. She added that maintenance will no longer fix things in Benedict E-0 because they are only broken again the next day.

James College RHD Braulio Rico said he saw students whom he cannot identify, throwing garbage cans and chairs from a third floor window at James College, Thursday night. He also said that graffiti which says, "We'll be back!" was recently sprayed on the walls of James.

Rico claims that these occurrences are signs of protest rather than mischief.

"Students, for the most part are really good, but it's the few who ruin it for everybody," said Mahony. She said, "These students want their rights, but how do they voice it — they tear down a water fountain for the handicapped; what about the handicapped student, doesn't he have rights too?"

Football Team Takes Tough Opener

By ARTHUR J. ROTHSCHILD

Outnumbered and outsized, the Stony Brook football team combined sheer offensive power with fine defensive teamwork to overwhelm a strong Marist College squad, 15-14, in Saturday's season opener at home.

Stony Brook's Patriots scored first, late in the second quarter, culminating a 66 yard rally. The rally was highlighted by the stylish groundwork of halfback Tony McNair, who gained 42 yards on six carries, and a perfect 11 yard pass by quarterback Jim McTigue to receiver Terry Russell. Four plays later, fullback Mike Marrone plunged in from the one, and Gus Baco iced the cake with the point after, placing the Patriots on top, 7-0.

On the ensuing kickoff, Marist fumbled deep in its own territory, right into the hands of Patriot Jack DeRienzi, giving Stony Brook a first down on the Marist 20 with little over a minute remaining in the half.

A McTigue "aerogram" to receiver Larry Leigh gave the Patriots a second down on the 11 yard line, and Marrone followed with a blast off center, good for another six. Two incomplete passes made it fourth down and goal on the five with 20 seconds on the clock. Stony Brook went for the field goal, but it was blocked as time

It was defense all the way for both squads throughout the opening minutes of the third quarter. For the Pats, a tenacious front line, led by Bob Leroy, Charlie Nicholls and Mark Asdourian thwarted any attempt of a Marist gain. By the same token, the Patriot's ground game suddenly became ineffective against a rejuvenated Marist defense, resulting in a see-saw battle, - with both squads anticipatigly marking time, and each waiting for its opponent's error.

However, Marist found an unexpected, perhaps overconfident Patriot team off guard when a spectacular punt was returned by Marist specialty man Kevin O'Conner, midway into the third quarter. This gave Marist an excellent field position on the Stony Brook 42 yard line. Marist established its running game and carried it over on a quarterback keeper from the 10. The point after followed, deadlocking the score at seven all.

A 38 yard kickoff return by McNair followed, placing the Patriots on their own 43. But a third down kick was blocked and recovered by Marist and once again they found themselves in excellent field position with a first and 10 on the Stony Brook 14. A screen over the middle to Marist tight end Mike Spawn ensued as did the point after. With seconds remaining in the third quarter, Marist found itself on top, 14-7.

But the Patriots came back fighting with tremendous might and spirit. Commencing with a dazzling 22 yard McNair kickoff return to the Stony Brook 32, the Patriots rallied for 61 yards, owed to near-faultless passing and running by McTigue. Marist, however, stood fast at its own seven, taking over the reigns with a first and 10 with plenty remaining in the fourth.

The Patriot defense refused to tumble, as Leroy and company kept Marist to minimal yardage. The Patriots regained possession on their own 43 yard line.

The next series proved critical for the Pats, for a late hit by a Marist defender sidelined McTigue with a pulled hamstring. Terry Russell took over as quarterback and engineered the Patriots downfield for the necessary yardage. On a Russell pass from the two, McNair made a spectacular one-handed grab in the end zone for the score. A decision from the sideline to go for the two extra points proved successful, with Russell hitting tight end Mark McKissick for the go ahead point. With little over two minutes remaining, Stony Brook led, 15-14.

Marist's last chance to score came on an attempted field goal on fourth down from the Stony Brook 24 with 45 seconds remaining. But the Marist spotter couldn't find the handle and the kick never got off. The Patriots regained possession and allowed time to expire.

The Patriots offensive earned 259 yards Saturday, 177 of them on the ground. Marist ended with a total of 111 yards rushing and 46 yards passing.

In what was labeled a "freak accident" by head coach Fred Kemp, Andy Farrago, originally slated to start at fullback for Saturday's game, was injured in a pre-game drill. Kemp said Farrago pulled a muscle in his leg, but should be ready to play in next Saturday's game against Roger Williams College.

Quarterback Jimmy McTigue, injured in the fourth quarter of Saturday's game pulled a hamstring in his knee and will probably be out for next week's game, said Kemp.

Ithaca Victory Paces NCAA's Second Weekend

By the Associated Press

Ithaca College, with touchdowns from John Nicolo and Matt Mees, has defeated its Division III arch rival, St. Lawrence, 15-13 in the second weekend of college football in New York state.

Ithaca has now beaten St. Lawrence the last three times the teams have met, by a combined margin of just six points. The Bombers, 2-0, capitalized on three St. Lawrence turnovers and a potent running game to hand the Saints a season opening loss.

In other New York state college football action Saturday, Syracuse beat West Virginia 24-14, Army upended Connecticut 26-10, William & Mary defeated Colgate 28-15, Albany State blanked Hobart 10-0 and Canisius bombed Rochester 28-0.

Also, West Point stomped Connecticut 26-10, Springfield dumped Cortland State 27-14, Brockport State clipped Alfred 20-13, Ramapo out-muscled St. John Fisher 20-3 and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute tied Coast Guard 6-6.

Downstate, aside from Stony Brook's win, East Stroudsburg nipped C.W. Post 17-10, Lafayette destroyed Kings Point 33-6, Hampton Tech topped New York Tech 19-10, Millersville State pounded Fordham 48-7 and St. John's and Kean battled to a 6-6 tie.

In Williamsburg, Virginia, errors murdered Colgate, 0-1. The Red Raiders were guilty of five turnovers—four interceptions and one fumble—in losing to William & Mary, now 1-1.

The Pats' Next Home Game
Is October 6 at 1:30 PM
Against Ramapo College.
