Results From GSO Lounge Survey Released

By Ray Parish

Statesman and the Graduate Student Organization recently released the results of the GSO Lounge Survey, which will provide insight into and possibly a solution to the campus' stifled social-life conditions.

The results will be provided to the Faculty Student Association, which had, in the past, provided the liability insurance for the lounge. The FSA's policy was determined to be inadequate, resulting in the closing of the GSO lounge on February 28.

The GSO distributed the survey to graduate students late in the spring semester, placing blank copies in departmental mailboxes. The organizers of the survey consider it a success, with 198 graduate student and 14 undergraduate student responses, and seven faculty and staff responses.

The majority of the surveys returned came from students or staff age 26 or older, and the largest percentage of those students surveyed had only attended Stony Brook for two years. All but one response came from students of legal drinking age.

When asked what contact they had had with the lounge prior to its closing, 28 percent of those surveyed answered "once or twice a week." "Once or twice a month" was a close second with 26 percent. Only 9 percent of those surveyed said they visited the lounge "almost every night." Twenty-two percent said "never." Ten percent did not know where the lounge is located.

Tom Wolfe Speaks on Return to Lost Values

By Mitchell Horowitz

We are at the outset of the "age of relearning" and the "century of starting from zero" is nearly upon us, claimed author Tom Wolfe in a speech he gave last week in the Fine Arts Center.

Wolfe, author of the bestseller The Right Stuff, looked like a scholarly pimp in one of his trademark outrageously unfashionable bright suits, when he appeared at last Wednesday's New Student Convocation. He charged that with the start of the 21st century all human history could be torn down and the values of society recreated, which, he said, will probably return us to the values we previously abandoned.

Recalling his research for The Electric Kool-Aid Acid Test, Wolfe said that in the sixties certain groups "wiped out the customs of a millenium and entered the period of great relearning," which partially entailed a relearning of hygiene. Although we will soon enter a similar period, he said, "The process of the great relearning will be much more complex, because the situation has become much more complex."

Wolfe's vision of the next century saw VCRs replacing movie theaters, AIDS destroying the sexual revolution, general stores being reborn from neighborhood porno outlets, "plutography" — "the graphic depiction of the acts of the rich" — replacing pornography, professional sports continuing on a war-like binge and the liberal arts shooting back to popularity as soon as the yuppie generation finds itself unable to communicate.

"I heard rumors that on this campus there are people who want to create Division I sports," he said. "Fight them off with sticks! And if you can push Division III back down to club status, then do it."

"They [college athletes] all go around campus in clumps," he said. "They are actively encouraged to live apart as an elite unit." Wolfe also claimed that professional-bound athletes are encouraged to take drugs: "Go to the training table sometime and look at the line of pills ... Len Bias was doing what was really expected of pro athletes."

"The emphasis now is on taking courses that will lead to a high paying job out of college," Wolfe said. "But a certain thing begins to happen at age 30. Hierarchies begin to look for people polished in the art of persuasion ... Snobbery may work to the great advantage of the liberal arts," in the next century.

Wolfe spoke of the sexual revolution establishing coed dorms; "now it's part of the American scene, part of the scenery. The so-called sexual revolution has been that sweeping and it all started from zero."

The new "zero century" will see a relearning of forgotten social constraints, he said. "The revolution is going to stop very quickly — perhaps by 1990 — because of AIDS. AIDS has moved out of target groups."

Directing his comments to the students in the small audience, Wolfe said, "You are part of something else. The 20th century is going to be history in your lives." But he added that the new "age of relearning," will fit into the cycle of mankind forgetting and then simply relearning values it created years before.

Statesman accepts items for its weekly Calendar section. The events must be not-for-profit events in or around the campus community. Address contributions to Statesman, PO Box AE, Stony Brook, NY 11790 or put them in an envelope marked Managing Editor and bring it to room 075 in the basement of the Stony Brook Union. The deadline for submission is Thursday at 5 p.m. for the following Monday.

$1,000 Women's Scholarship Awarded

Rosemary Baker was the first person to receive the Renate Chasman Scholarship for Women, a $1,000 award given by Brookhaven Women in Science, an organization at Brookhaven National Laboratory. The scholarship fund was established to encourage women on Long Island to resume their formal education in technical fields. Fund raising for the Chasman Scholarship is continuing, and only half of the $10,000 (the amount needed to perpetuate the award) goal has been reached. Tax deductible contributions may be made to the Chasman Scholarship Fund, PO Box 183, Upton, New York 11973.

Teaching Latin Teaching

Latin may be a dead language, but there are ways to bring life back into teaching it, according to Aaron Godfrey, a faculty member in comparative literature, at Stony Brook. He has written a book called Introducing Latin, and will instruct a course, "The Teaching of Latin," this fall for Long Island Latin teachers. Godfrey said the course, CEL 530, will cover teaching strategies and materials.

National Board Reelects WUSB Executive

Norman Prusslin, assistant director of Student Union and Activities for Media Services, and general manager of WUSB, was reelected to a second one year term chairing the Board of Directors of the Intercollegiate Broadcasting System. IBS, the national campus radio station membership organization, represents more than 600 stations. Prusslin has been a board member since 1975.

HSC Department Heads Named

Four Stony Brook Professors have been named to head departments at the Health Sciences Center. They are: Dr. Ora

Bouey, who will head the department of Adult Head Nursing until August 31, 1989; Dr. Paul Lombardo, who will head the department of Physicians's Assistant Education until August 31, 1988; Dr. Martin Rosenfeld, who will head the department of Medical Technology until August 31, 1988; and Dr. Jacob Scleickorn, who will head the department of Physical Therapy until June 30, 1988.

Statesman accepts items for Around Campus from its readers. They must deal with people or places relevant to the campus and the surrounding area. This section is only for events that have happened or merits earned by people. It is not intended to be for promotion of any kind. Items must be less than 100 words and are subject to editing for length. Address them to Statesman, PO Box AE, Stony Brook, NY 11790 or put them in an envelope marked Managing Editor and bring it to room 075 in the basement of the Stony Brook Union.

Around Campus

Reagan Gets an "F"

In its monthly newsletter, the House Education Committee said 16 of the Department of Education's 19 major education programs have been cut since 1980, and that President Ronald Reagan's effort to help these programs merited an "F." The committee gave Reagan an "Incomplete" for not joining the House debate over the Higher Education Reauthorization bill, a "D" for trying to cut vocational education programs, and a "C minus" for adult education, which he "has stopped trying to cut."

Draft Dodgers Beware

If a military draft is reinstated, the best way to avoid it would be to never graduate. The Selective Service System said that if the draft is reinstated, male students would be allowed to finish their current terms before being inducted. Deferrals would not be given, however, just postponements.

U., Wisconsin Illegally Storing Toxic Waste

Researchers at the University of Wisconsin's 14 campuses are storing some 137 tons of toxic waste-generated in various lab experiments without regard to federal waste storage rules, and could be liable for fines of $3 million a day, a preliminary investigation of campus storage procedures concluded.

No Student/Professor Couples in Iowa

Following Harvard's lead, the University of Iowa outlawed romances between professors and their students. The guidelines do not specify a penalty for the offenders, but say any allegations will be investigated. Harvard and Iowa are the only universities to have such a policy.

University Hacker Nabbed

Chicago Police charged former Triton College student Donald Moon with breaking into the campus computer, altering student grades, and "giving" various tuition waivers amounting to about $6,000. If convicted, Moon faces up to 16 years in prison.

Statesman accepts contributions to its Across the Nation section. Items must deal with student happenings within the country. The Weather Corner By Adam Schneider

"Everybody talks about the weather, but nobody does anything about it!" Those are the words of Mark Twain spoken during the Nineteenth Century. How right he was.

The weather has a major influence on our lifestyles, eating habits, recreational activities and moods. Therefore, everyone should be well-informed on its happenings.

As far as the highs and lows of weather go, we will look at the first anniversary of Hurricane Gloria, which wreaked havoc across Long Island and even caused an unlikely occurrence here at Stony Brook: cancelled classes. As winter rolls in, I will preview the likelihood of frostbitten fingers or snow shovels for the months ahead.

As for a review of this past summer, which in fact does not end until the twenty-first of this month, we had an abnormal amount of cloudy days. Sunshine only measured 52% of normal according to a New York climate Beginning this week, forecasts for the week ahead will appear every Monday in the Weather Corner. Adam Schneider is a Stony Brook student who has his own weather equipment and keeps his own records. In addition to forecasts, Weather Corner will also feature news concerning notable meteorological occurrences as well as brief explanations of meteorological facts.

And to make matters worse, rainfall in our area was above normal. We did though receive our allotment of 90 degree days, which came mostly during one hot spell in July. Five days of 90 plus on the thermometer was just one below normal for the local area. Recently, however, all we have had has been of the cool, damp, variety. Through Friday, we had not seen the sun since classes began. I hope it is not a sign of things to come!

But prospects are looking up. There are signs that the weather pattern is beginning to change. The jet stream (the high-level winds which control the movement of weather systems across the world) is showing signs of shifting. Over the past week, this river of air has been blowing up from the humid southern states. Thus, it has brought moisture-filled air into our region. During the upcoming week, the jet stream will be flowing out of Canada. This will serve to bring in a goodly amount of crisp, cool, Canadian air. Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday will be fall-like with temperatures in the 60s by day and 47-53 by night. Skies should be partly sunny. As the week draws to a close, the chance of a shower or two will increase.

And one last note for all of the diehard sun worshippers: It is still possible to receive a late-season tan through the end of the month. But the intensity of the sun's rays is rapidly decreasing now. Old Man Winter is beginning to get ready to awaken from his summer hibernation.

Graduate Lounge Survey Results Released

The survey asked individuals to gauge, on a scale of one to five, how often they visit the Rainy Night House, the End of the Bridge, campus social events, off-campus bars, and off-campus restaurants. Of those, the End of the Bridge was rated the least popular, with 109 respondents answering "never," and only four answering "very often."

Off-campus restaurants were given the most favorable rating, receiving 152 votes in the higher range (3 to 5). Overall, the votes were cast fairly evenly among the Rainy Night House, campus social events, off-campus bars, and off-campus restaurants.

When asked how much the closing of the lounge has affected their social lives, 90 of the 214 who answered said "not at all." Thirty answered "very much," and the rest of the responses were distributed in between the two extremes.

Most of the questions on the survey addressed the future of the lounge. It asked students their opinions regarding whether the lounge should reopen as a coffeehouse, a bar, or a combination of the two. The response was overwhelmingly in favor of a combination, serving both food and beer.

Entertainment at the lounge was a topic that received a wide variety of responses. Sixty-eight percent of the respondents said that the lounge should provide some form of entertainment, but did not agree on the form of entertainment most suitable to the lounge. Live entertainment was the most popular response, with a juke box and movies as the next favorite alternatives.

The suggestion of having food specials such as ice cream sundaes and Italian and Chinese catered buffets received favorable response. Three other possibilities, tournaments (darts, checkers, chess), sports telecasts, and Guest Bartender Night, received equal approval of about 70 people.

The question that divided the respondents most evenly was over the issue of whether to limit liquor sales and occupancy and keep music low in order to ensure a quiet atmosphere. Ninety-three people voted in favor of such measures and 94 people voted against.

The response that has captured the most interest of the survey's creators is over a question regarding liability insurance. Skyrocketing insurance claims have made premiums prohibitively expensive. Respondents voted 129 to 42 in favor of paying "an extra dollar of [the] activity fee, per semester, to go to liquor liability insurance." Thirty-nine people voted "maybe."

"That is an interesting idea, definitely worth looking into," said Carl Hanes, Vice President for Administration. "We would have to look at the student activity guidelines," he added, "to make sure we don't propose something we cannot do."

Jim Quinn, a graduate student who helped create and compile the survey, said, "The survey backs up the sentiments of many students on and off campus; they are willing to work for it. It shows that there is a need for a plan such as this."

One important result of the Statesman/GSO Lounge Survey, Quinn said, is that it proves that it is possible to successfully execute and gain useful data from such surveys.

Drought and Heat Affect Southern Campuses

By the College Press Service

The sizzling heat and terrible drought that beleaguered the Southeast through most of the summer will change the way many area campuses start their fall semesters, officials report. Returning students are finding browner campuses and threats of water restrictions to come.

The University of South Carolina's valuable film archives are being damaged by the heat, USC spokesmen said, while the University of North Carolina is enclosing warnings in its football packages that fans should bring their own water to games this fall. But while some primary and secondary schools in the region are stalling the start of fall semester to let students help with the delayed tobacco harvest, no colleges have announced plans to alter their fall schedules in deference to the drought.

Their campuses, however, may look different. "The drought and heat are so prolonged," said Jeff Hardcastle, a meteorologist with the National Weather Service in Atlanta. He estimates that there has already been some $2 billion in damages as a result. Vegetation is withering and "lakes are literally drying up," he said.

"There's just too much campus to try to keep it all watered," said Dr. Edward Boling, president of the University of Tennessee. "We hope it comes back, but we may lose some grass," he said, adding that the school has "let some large expanses go."

In South Carolina, Clemson President Dr. Max Lennon has an emergency plan that includes "altering the water pressure, and curtailing usage in residences and other parts of the campus" if the drought continues.

Although no colleges have curtailed dorm water use yet, Mississippi State has dusted off a 25-year-old agreement that lets it tap into the city water system in emergencies. "It's a backup system for us," said MSU Physical Plant Director Don Mott. Last week, MSU was rushing to replace a broken air condition system in one dorm. "We'll have plenty of mad residents if it's not back in use soon," predicts Roy Ruby, the school's vice president of student affairs.

Administrators, though, generally do not think even restrictions will faze students, influence grades or lead to dropping out for the duration. Eighty percent of the students at the University of Georgia are from the South, explains UGa spokesman Tom Landrum, so "they're already acclimated."

"The 20 percent or so that come from cooler climates adjust rather rapidly," he added. "The learn quickly by observing how others dress, and taking advantage of any opportunity to get out of the heat."

Students, said Dr. Henry Stanford, the school's interim president, should be made of stern enough stuff to withstand the heat and inconvenience. "Well I'm still jogging every day," he said, "and I'm 70 years old. The students coming in are 18 to 20 years of age. If I can do it, they can do it." In fact,

Landrum says normal numbers of students still are playing hacky-sack across the campus, despite the heat.

Formal exertion, however, raises more difficult problems. "Football players must be careful of heat strokes," Tennessee's Boling warns. "The two-a-days [practices] will be uncomfortable," Mississippi State's Ruby said.

But there is not much relief in sight. The National Weather Service foresees the above-average temperatures and below-average rainfall through October. "And we're moving into a typically dry part of the year," Hardcastle said. "Even if rainfall is normal, it's still not enough."

FAMOUS LAST WORDS FROM FRIENDS TO FRIENDS. I'm perfectly fine. I can drive with my eyes closed. There's nothing wrong with me. Are you joking—I feel great. What am I—a wimp? I'm in great shape to drive. You're not serious are you? What's a couple of beers? Nobody drives my car but me. I've never felt better. I can drink with the best of them. But I only had a few. So I had a couple. I can drive rings around anybody. I can drive my own car, thank you. I'm not drunk. I drive better when I'm like this. Who says I can't drink and drive? I can hold my booze. I know what I'm doing. I always drive like this. So with my eyes closed. Trust me. What's a few more beers? Nothing to me. I'm driving with my eyes closed. I'll drink with me. I'll drink with me. How to live with someone who's living with cancer.

Learning to live with cancer is no easy task. Learning to live with someone else's cancer can be even more difficult.

Nobody knows better than we do how much help and understanding is needed. That's why our service and rehabilitation programs emphasize the whole family, not just the cancer patient.

We run local programs with volunteers who are recovered cancer patients, or whose lives have been touched by family members or friends with cancer. That's what makes us one of the largest, best-motivated and most caring of any health organization in the country.

Among our regular services we provide information and guidance to patients and families, transport patients to and from treatment, supply home care items and assist patients in their return to everyday life.

Life is what concerns us. The life of cancer patients. The lives of their families. So you can see we are even more than the research organization we are so well known to be.

No one faces
cancer alone.

Bring A Curtain Call to All Bombing Protests

Examples abound for legitimate grievances against the Soviet Union, especially with regard to human rights. The treatment of Soviet Jews has been particularly atrocious, as evidenced by accounts from those who have been subjected to Soviet oppression, such as Anatoly Sharansky, who was recently released after spending years in Siberia.

It is not surprising, then, that many groups have loudly voiced their grievances. But sometimes, the voicing of these grievances is misplaced and directed toward innocent victims. Whether it is Syrians shooting innocent bystanders in an airport or the bombing of a Berlin disco, there is no excuse for lashing out vengeance on innocent citizens. We seem to be living in an age where if one cannot take revenge on one's enemy, then his best friend or distant relative will suffice.

Recently, the recipient of misplaced reprisals was an American audience viewing the Russian Moiseyev Dance Company at the Metropolitan Opera House. During the performance, tear-gas was released on the audience. Fortunately, no one was killed, but about 30 people were injured.

A man who identified himself during a phone call as Chaim Ben Yosef, and said he was the national chairman of the Jewish Defense League, claimed responsibility for this deplorable act. Yosef later denied responsibility for the tear-gassing but said he applauded it. He said he believes that the dance company was being used by the Soviet Union as a ploy to convince Americans that the Soviets are not so bad. Does this man believe that through the hypnotic dance sequences, the dance company is sending message to the audience to read the communist manifesto or to defect to Russia? No matter how firmly he believes the dance company is being used as propaganda for a country he feels should be denounced, there is no way he can legitimize the tear-gassing of innocents.

If the JDL, or whoever is responsible for this act, wants to protest the way Russia treats its Jews, they should use other channels to express their discontent.

A student group called Student Struggle for Soviet Jewry had the right idea when they demonstrated peacefully in a park across from the Lincoln Center before the concert that night. The recent tragic incidents in Pakistan and Turkey prove that people have no sympathy for groups that point their vindictiveness toward innocent victims.

There is no excuse for a tear-gas attack on dance troupe when there are more constructive ways in which to voice protest. Peaceful methods can be used and innocents can be left out to avoid belittling one's own cause.

A Survivor of Red-Tape Flood

Most good ideas in today's world fail to reach fruition, becoming drowned in a sea of administrative paperwork. Fortunately, through persistence and good will rarely seen in bureaucratic systems, some good ideas do manage to stay afloat.

Last year, then Graduate Student Organization President Kevin Kelly devised a plan to aid foreign graduate students who had not secured loan guarantees from either the university or the government. Some foreign students, according to Kelly, were not allowed to leave their country with more than $25. Considering typical Long Island rent costs, that amount is about enough for one week in a tent, if you happen to bring your own tent. Kelly's plan, for which the Faculty Student Association gave him an award, allows these students to get quick cash to pay for housing, food or other immediate expenses.

The plan, known as the Advance Fund, became a source of controversy over the summer. Some administrators, according to Acting Vice Provost for Research and Graduate Studies Robert F. Schneider, were concerned about the workload the plan would generate. Others wanted to know if there was a viable means to guarantee repayment. One administrator even expressed fear that since the program was primarily targeted at foreign students, other students would claim it was discriminatory. Finally, on July 30, Assistant Vice Provost of the Graduate School Wendy Margarita sent a memo to GSO President Chris Vestuto claiming that the Advance Fund was "not a viable program."

Kelly and Vestuto quickly responded with a direct appeal to Schneider, who promptly arranged a meeting to discuss the fund. As a result of the meeting, the fund survived with only one major change: Financial liability for recovery of payments will fall on the Office of Student Affairs instead of on the Stony Brook Foundation.

At present, a review committee has been established for the fund, and the program is in operation, with several loans already given out.

Survival in the sea of red tape that plagues our society is not easy, and Kelly's award winning plan deserves commendation not just on its merit, but also on its ability to overcome the administrative shuffle.

Spy Charge Just Soviet Trickery

In retaliation for the detention of a Soviet UN employee charged with espionage, the Soviet Union has arrested Nicholas Daniloff, a reporter for U.S. News & World Report, on the charges of spying. Although the Soviet Union denies that the arrest was revenge motivated, the incident is filled with too many coincidences.

It is a reporter's curiosity that makes him or her vulnerable to accusations of espionage. Daniloff was just following a lead when he accepted a packet of newspaper clippings offered to him by a man named Misha, a friend of his whom he had not seen in over a year. When Daniloff picked up the packet in exchange for a gift of novels, the KGB just happened to be in the neighborhood to catch Daniloff with the package which contained two maps labeled secret.

The arrest of Daniloff comes a week after the arrest of Gennadiy F. Zakharov, who was charged with buying classified documents, making the motive for charging Daniloff suspect. If the Soviets are not seeking revenge, then they are certainly trying to sway the decision of the Zakharov case in their favor by detaining Daniloff. The hearing on the Zakharov case just happens to be this week.

The U.S. government should not let the Daniloff case influence the progress of the arms-talk. The stakes in the upcoming summit are much too high to let an espionage case deter the prospects for a summit meeting. At the same time, the U.S. must try to avoid trading a U.S. reporter for a real spy. Daniloff is by definition a hostage in the Soviet Union. It would be a contradiction in U.S. policy to negotiate for a spy trade, which would imply Daniloff's guilt and create a danger to all American journalists on Soviet soil.

While in this country we value very highly human life, the White House should use Zakharov as bait to free Daniloff only after all other means have been exhausted, in order to uphold our belief in his innocence and show that we will not tolerate blackmail.

ALTERNATIVES

Surely You Jest

Tim Lapham

As this is being written it is eighty degrees outside. The sun is shining brightly, the Long Island sky is a pure blue, broken only by an occasional ball of white fluff, and barefooted youths scamper across the fresh green grass chasing frisbees, often catching only sun rays.

Ah, to be outside. Now, if I were an aging newspaper executive, with a sagging belly forcing its way through my white shirt, I might be writing this while staring out the window of my 36th floor office in downtown Manhattan. If so, then this article would be about a longing within me to return to those days of innocence and freedom, and the message buried within it would be to enjoy college life to the fullest, because it won't be long before you are hurtled into the strangling grip of the real world. I hope I die long before I ever get that sappy.

Actually, right now, I am staring out a window. But instead of staring down 36 floors, I am staring up one floor. I am in a basement. There are two windows down here in the Statesman offices, but they are not much good for anything since they face a concrete wall and they can't be opened. Many times I have considered cutting a hole in one of these windows to allow some of the warm air in. You see, while most of the campus denizens wander about clad scantily in cut offs and t-shirts, I am having to type this with gloves on! To go with the gloves, I am also wearing a parka, a scarf, earmuffs and boots. It is freezing down here.

It is not a normal sort of basement chill that runs through these offices, nor does it have the mild tingle of an overactive air conditioner. No, air is being piped in straight from a glacier. We have plugged up all the vents and tried to prop open what doors there are, but still we freeze. The Physical Plant has been called a thousand times and they continue to say they can do nothing until the season is over, and they can shut it down for the winter, sometime in early November.

Call me paranoid, but I can't shake the feeling that someone is trying to get back at us. Perhaps we took a few too many liberties with our last April Fools issue. The only response we ever got from the administrators on that was a deathly silence. And it was shortly after that, in early April, that this campaign to freeze out Statesman began. Could it be that University President John Marburger took offense to being called a "lame putz," or Vice President for Student Affairs Fred Preston was less than pleased to be referred to as an obnoxious drunk, and this is our punishment? Maybe it is even a three way conspiracy, with Polity President Marc Gunning as a silent partner, because we raised our advertising rates.

Lest you think I am projecting too much, let me give another example. During this summer, for the first time since the union was built, there was a flood in the basement. Thousands of newspapers were waterlogged, our rugs were ruined and one of our computers was destroyed. Perhaps this triple conspiracy altered the plumbing late one night to further their revenge.

If I am correct, and some conspiracy is responsible for my shivers and my itchy neck (from this scarf wrapped tightly around my neck), I beg you to stop. I apologize for anything that we may have done to offend you, and I will see to it that whatever retributions you desire are made. Okay, folks? Please?

Now if you will excuse me, I have to go warm my hands by the toaster oven.

Roth Quad: Who Will Light Up Their Life?

By Kathy Fellows

Beer parties; late-night study sessions made bearable by 7-eleven runs; committing illegal traffic maneuvers at speeds upwards of 70 m.p.h. in order to get to class on time. These are some of the elements that create the Stony Brook experience. Of course, everyone has his or her own perception of what college should be like. Differences usually arise in the study-to-party ratio. Yet, even with this in mind, it is an unspoken given that those who attend college have preconceptions that all civilized places, including universities, should be well lit.

In Roth Quad, however, this is a false preconception. Those living in the Roth suites have been sentenced to sharing one lamp between six people. This rather bizarre circumstance has created some interesting questions, the most important being: why?

Perhaps the average Roth Quad GPA is too high, and so Roth residents have been given a handicap to even it out.

Those arriving at a Roth room expecting it to be furnished with a desk, bed, dresser and lamp suddenly realize the vast importance of the latter. After all, once night falls, it is close to impossible to do anything but sleep.

Now, without light, Roth residents are left with few options. Huddling together with five other people under a light to study is one. This raises the probability of intra-suite conflict by approximately 81.6%.

Another possibility is to go to the store and buy what you have already paid to use, but have not been provided with.

There is always the option of going to the library and climbing over tables, chairs, floors and desks covered with studying human masses. Being surrounded by hundreds of people while trying to study is usually detrimental, considering the fact that this means hearing hundreds of inhalings followed by hundreds of exhalings intermingled with thousands of turning pages, pencil points breaking off, bookbags zipping and unzipping, doors opening and closing....

It is as possible to befriend a commuter student and study in their well-lit home as it is to find a resident student living in another quad and study in their well-lit room. It is feasible, although not recommended, to steal lamps from either of these two parties.

It is important to note that there are enough lamps. The problem is that they are locked away far from hope of repair. The remaining consolation lies in the fact that it is possible to go through these lamps and find one that looks easy to fix. It was certainly nice of those readying the dorms to paint each room. In the sunlight you can even tell. Maybe students can contribute to the construction of a priority list.

Long Lines to Tokyo Joe's Worth the Wait

By Darcy Lyons

Tokyo Joe's, a Student Activities Board sponsored video dance club, held its grand re-opening in the Union Ballroom Friday night. For $4 each students had the opportunity to mingle, dance and, above all, relax with their peers in a club atmosphere.

D.J. Kevin McGuire and his assistants spun the tunes and although there was hardly any room to dance, students continued to crowd onto the dance floor. Bob Seger's Old Time Rock-n-Roll, the Beatles' Twist and Shout and the Animal House version of Shout were a trio that proved to be a real crowd pleaser.

The 21 drinking age was strictly enforced under Student Activities Office and Paul LaMontier's supervision. Those who wished to drink had to show two forms of identification.

For just a dollar you could have your caricature drawn. Polity President Mark Gunning was one of the many people who had his caricature drawn.

Lauren O'Rourke of SAB said that approximately 1,000 people were expected to attend. Yet those collecting tickets estimated that about double that many actually showed up.

As of yet, nothing else has been planned for this year since SAB has not had their first meeting yet.

If you are interested in joining SAB, you should attend their first meeting Tuesday night. The time and location have yet to be posted.

Statesman Elyse Sussman

Besides music videos, students at Tokyo Joe's viewed tapes of themselves that were made on campus last week.

ST. GEORGE'S UNIVERSITY SCHOOL OF MEDICINE
GRENADA, WEST INDIES

St. George's University School of Medicine, with more than 1050 graduates licensed in 33 states, offers a rigorous, nine-semester program leading to the degree of Doctor of Medicine.

In January 1985, The Journal of the American Medical Association published a report which ranked St. George's number one of all major foreign medical schools in the initial pass rate on the ECFMG Exam.

70 medical schools in the United States have accepted over 630 St. George's students with advanced standing.

St. George's has received probationary approval to conduct clinical clerkships in New Jersey subject to regulations of the State Board of Examiners.

A Loan Program for Entering Students has been instituted for a limited number of qualified applicants.

Even today, there are still a few students who don't have an HP calculator.

Burning the midnight oil may be necessary.
Burning the 2:00 or 3:00 or 4:00 AM oil is absurd.

Especially when an HP calculator can get the answers you want — in time to get a good night's sleep.

For instance, our HP-15C Professional Scientific Calculator has more built-in advanced math and statistical power than any other calculator. Our HP-41 Advanced Scientific Calculators have even more potential.

That's because there are better than 2500 software packages available for them — more than for any other calculator.

There's even a special plug-in software package (we call it the Advantage Module) that's designed to handle the specific problems an engineering student has to solve in his, or her, course work.

No wonder professionals in engineering and the physical sciences widely regard HP calculators as the best you can get.

So check one out. Then, when your mother calls to ask if you're getting enough sleep, you won't have to lie.

By the way, if you want more information, just give us a call at 800-FOR-HPPC. Ask for Dept. 658C.

IF YOUR BOOKSTORE DOESN'T CARRY SHARP CALCULATORS, CALL AND COMPLAIN.

Sharp calculators are designed to be first in their class.

Our EL-533 financial calculator for example, has twenty memories compared to just five for the competition. So it lets you do complex calculations like discounted cash flow analysis.

For those who prefer lab coats to pinstripes, there's our EL-506A scientific calculator. With its 10-digit display, direct formula entry and 93 scientific functions, it makes performing even the most difficult calculations easy as pi. And because it's sleek, slim and stylish, you'll never look out of step as science marches on.

The fact is, Sharp makes all kinds of ingenious little calculators that can help get you through college. And help you pay for it.

Because unlike college... they're surprisingly affordable.

Soccer Team Boots Opener But Still Optimistic

By Kevin Giuffrida

Coach Shawn McDonald is fielding a young, inexperienced soccer team this year. Despite dropping their season opener 3-1 to Otterbeine college on Saturday, McDonald has high hopes for his team this season.

McDonald will rely heavily on returning starters Eric Schwab, Chris Gonzalez and team captain Pete Zamboni. Schwab and Gonzalez are both sophomores while Zamboni is a senior.

Schwab plays defense as a sweeper. Zamboni and Gonzalez are both midfielders. Junior Ed Marinich was a part-time starter last year. This year he will be starting full-time at midfield with Zamboni and Gonzalez.

McDonald will rely on Rob Kissel, a defensive stopper, and Chris Reinhardt, a defensive full back, to help Schwab. Another key man in the defense is goalie Harold Efron, who has the tough job of replacing former Patriot star-goalie Matt McDade. McDonald feels Efron is more than capable of covering the net for the Patriots.

On the other side of the field, sophomore Charlie Matos and freshman Edward Olson will be playing offensive forwards.

When McDonald returned to Stony Brook this fall he had three big surprises waiting for him. The first was a student from overseas. Gerald Ramos, a freshman from Unic, Germany, is an extremely talented attacking midfielder according to McDonald. The next surprise was Martin Mangialardi, another midfielder, who transferred to Stony Brook from Notre Dame University. Finally, McDonald learned that Chris Wheeler, who is a graduate student in music here at Stony Brook, would be joining him as assistant coach. Wheeler previously coached at St. Paul's college in Garden City. "We are fortunate to have him," McDonald said.

Looking back on their opening loss, McDonald said, "The game was a lot closer than the score indicated." McDonald also pointed out that the Pat's had 17 shots on goal while Despite losing their season opener, Coach McDonald has high hopes for his team this season.

Otterbeine had nine.

Otterbeine's Mike Carrol started the scoring on an unassisted 35-yard blast into the top right hand corner of the net. McDonald labelled the shot close to unsaveable. "A goal like that you have to give them," Webber said. Carrol's goal came at 12 minutes into the first half. Unfortunately for Stony Brook, Otterbeine's second goal was not as well earned. Twenty minutes into the second half, the Patriots inability to clear the ball allowed Eric Ekis to slip the ball past Efron for a 2-0 Otterbeine lead.

The following 25 minutes of the second half is why McDonald is very proud of his team despite the loss. With 15 minutes remaining in the game, Ramos set up Matos for the Pat's first goal of the year, and the Pat's trailed 2-1. Shortly after the goal Olson stole the ball from an Otterbeine player and broke towards the net. He slipped the ball past the opposing goalie, but it hit the post.

The Pat's put continuous pressure on Otterbeine but, they could not score again. The Pat's were not the only ones missing scoring opportunities. Efron, with his body full extended, robbed an Otterbeine player who flipped around in midair and fired a shot from 15 yards away. Following the play both players received an ovation from the audience.

Otterbeine closed out the scoring when they scored on a penalty kick with 3 minutes left in the game to hand the Pat's a 3-1 defeat.

Athletic Future Bright Fields Renovation Almost Complete

By Jeff Eisenhart

A representative of the vice president for Campus Operations said on Friday that the reconstruction of the Stony Brook athletic fields should be completed by this spring.

According to A. Henry Von Mechow, special assistant to the vice president for Campus Operations, completion of the athletic fields will take longer than originally projected. The project began in the fall of 1984 and was due to be completed by this fall. "The irrigation system is not quite finished," Von Mechow said, and he cited it as the biggest problem facing the project. The cost of the project, according to Von Mechow, is estimated at $1.2-1.3 million. Funding, he said, came from the SUNY construction fund.

The major problem for the project was drainage, said Norman Berhannan, the director of Facilities and Operations of Physical Education and Athletics. Berhannan explained that the poor drainage affected the availability of useable space. "The upgrading was needed," he said.

When construction is finally completed, the new athletic facilities will include four new baseball/softball fields, four basketball courts and two sandbox courts. New track and field facilities were also added as part of the project. Three cages, for the hammer throw, shotput, and discus, were built. The area surrounded by a slight hill will be used for the javelin throw.

The Intramural Department will also have three new football/soccer fields. The allocation of space and facilities came from the Physical Education Department.

Comings and Goings:

A search is under way for a new, full time Sports Information Director. Cheryl Gross, who was last year's SID, resigned after last spring.

Michael Atkinson has been named the new Assistant Coach of the Men's Varsity Basketball team. He will succeed Jerry Wiesmann, who resigned this summer. Atkinson was the Men's Junior Varsity coach for the past two seasons.

Steven Borbet will replace Gerry Westerfield as the Men's Track Coach. Westerfield also resigned last spring.

Field House Still Three Years Away

By Scott Finkle

If one walks past the parking lot adjacent to the gymnasium and notices nothing but a parking lot, it is most likely because construction has yet to begin on the recently approved field house.

Robert Francis, vice-president for Campus Operations, said that the $12-15 million project "should go to bid in two months, and construction should begin in May." The funding was approved by the State Appropriation Committee and authorized by the legislature.

According to Francis, the new, 6,000 seat home of the men's and women's basketball teams will also contain six squash courts and a four-lane track. Concerts will be held in this facility. It will also be used for intramurals and open recreation.

"The field house has been under design for a year," Francis said. "After the bid is awarded there is a two-month contract period." He added that this project, which was first conceived in the early 1970s, should be completed by May 1989.

Patriots Ready to Tackle New Football Season

By John Buonora

It seems that each new football season at Stony Brook brings about some sort of change. In 1983, then head coach Fred Kemp guided the Patriots to a 7-2 record in their first Division III season. The following year Kemp was replaced by Sam Kornhauser. The transition continued in 1985, as Kornhauser slowly overhauled the coaching staff and team to fit his style.

This year is no exception. Kornhauser has replaced both the offensive and defensive coordinators from last year's staff. Running back coach Lou Schiavetta replaces Tom Black, leaving only receiver coach Marv Weitz from Kemp's 1983 coaching staff. Black has now taken a position at Patchogue-Medford as an assistant coach. Kornhauser has also named Dave Caldiero as the new defensive coordinator. Last season's defensive coordinator Jim Stiegerwald, has left to resume head coaching responsibilities at Long Island's Hauppauge high school. Caldiero will also retain his position as the linebacker coach.

Coaching changes are not the only thing new for the Patriots this season. "We're very, very young," said Kornhauser, who has an 8-9 record in his two seasons as the Patriot's head coach. And young they are. The Patriots have 28 freshmen on their roster, and only seven seniors. "This is the best recruiting class we've had," Kornhauser added.

The offensive line is the position where the freshmen will be tested first. Only senior Tom Bradley and sophomore Doug Jordan remain from an offensive line that anchored an attack that rolled up over 1,700 yards and 177 points in the last five games of the 1985 season. "We're young but we've got some good talent," said offensive line coach Paul Mastronardi. Mastronardi switched coaching positions with Buster Rivers who takes over the defensive ends.

"I didn't expect them to learn so much so fast," Mastronardi added. The line is always a question on any football team, but the big question with the Patriots is if they can make up in youth and enthusiasm what they lack in experience.

If the line does open holes, there is a full stable of running backs to carry the ball. Hofstra transfer Rob Mansfield has impressed the coaching staff with his speed and size. Senior Ralph Tuckett has also shown promise and may crack the starting line up. Also returning is Nick Iannone who rushed for 430 yards last season.

Improvements on both the offensive and defensive sides of the game will create strong obstacles for Patriot opponents.

Al Balkan returns at split end, leading a small but quick receiving corps. Transfer Pat Mena, Jim Lanzilotta and four solid freshmen should give the team good depth. "They're the most pleasant surprise of camp," Kornhauser said.

Leading the offense is captain John Ragimierski. Ragimierski earned All-American honors last season while only playing five games as quarterback. He passed for 589 yards (36 for 74) and five touchdowns. Ragimierski also rushed for 195 yards and 7 touchdowns.

Only two players have to be replaced on defense which allowed only 6 points in the last five games of 1985. Pete Seccia will replace Paul Emmanuel in the secondary, and Ed Plitt's inside linebacker spot could be filled by any number of solid players. "We're deepest at linebacker," said senior linebacker Juan Zapata.

"Defensively we're very solid," said Gary Guerrier, who switched from outside linebacker to defensive end this season. "We're bigger, faster and stronger than last year." Guerrier himself bulked up from 195 to 225 to play this season. Senior Paul Scott, who led the Pat's in sacks (9) last season, leads an experienced and strong defensive line. Returning starters Kevin Noonan (6' 230) and Mark Caruso (5'10" 215) give the line power and experience.

The Patriots came to camp in much better condition than in the past. "This has been the hardest camp in all the years I've been here," Kornhauser said. His players agree. "This has been the toughest camp in the four years I've played here," Zapata said. In Labor Day's Red-White intra-squad scrimmage, the offensive line showed surprising ability to move the ball. "We're a little green, but we're going to sell," Jordan said. "With some time, we're going to do fine."

The Patriots open the season on September 13 at Ramapo. The following Saturday, the Patriots open the home season against Hofstra. Although some players would not directly admit it, Hofstra is the focal point at this early stage of the season. "We're taking it one game at a time," said Guerrier.

Tweety's Cage:

The Pat's will play only a nine game schedule because Maritime has dropped its program to the club level ... The Pat's will play one night game, Friday, Oct. 24, at Brooklyn College ... The Pat's September 20 home opener will not only see the first appearance of Island rival Hofstra, but also the grand opening of the new 1050 seat home bleacher section. 800 extra seats will be available after the old bleachers are moved to the visitors side ... The Pat's are scheduled to make one overnight trip, Nov. 15, to Brockport St ... The Pat's fared well last Saturday in a scrimmage against Marist College ... No one on this season's schedule is pre-ranked by the NCAA, although Wagner, whom the Pat's lost to 26-10, is ranked 8th in Div. III by Sports Illustrated.
