Students Meet On Intersession Dorm Closure

By LAWRENCE RIGGS
and DON FATT

In response to the administration's recent decision to close all dorms except Stage XII, or possibly open only one dorm in each quad, over the winter intersession, over 100 students met last night to discuss the problem and suggest possible courses of action to keep the dorms open.

The suggestions included campaigning to have as many students as possible submit housing forms to their quad offices, publicizing the students' plight through local legislators and media, and, if necessary, staging demonstrations demanding that residents be allowed to remain in their own rooms and not have to remove their belongings.

Polity President Gerry Manginelli, who chaired the meeting, felt that all methods combined would be effective.

The way the situation currently stands, all students may suffer. If only some of the dorms are kept open, those students wishing to stay and not currently living in one of the dorms that would remain open, would have to move. This, of course, would also necessitate that the occupants of the open buildings who choose not to stay remove all their belongings from the rooms. According to Manginelli, the administration wants "to wait to the last minute when we can't do anything about it."

Douglass College Resident Phil Bernstein recommended that students call their legislators, "bringing in outside pressures" to the administration. Other students attending, however, doubted that that would be on much significance, since in the past the administration has not been responsive to legislators' suggestions.

Student Representative to the Stony Brook Council Glenn Taubman suggested that students "send letters to [Vice President for Student Affairs Elizabeth Wadsworth and [Director of Housing Roger] Phelps, "demanding that all dorms be kept open and citing their personal needs." Bernstein also suggested that Newsday, the Long Island Press, and radio and TV stations be made aware of this problem.

Demonstration Necessary

Some members of the Revolutionary Student Brigade thought that demonstrations are necessary. Others joined in this belief. "A demonstration must be well-organized," Manginelli said. "The attendance is vital to its success." Others claimed that if the administration sees a poor turn-out, they will reason that there is little student interest in keeping the dorms open.

For a long-range solution of these housing problems,

Bernstein suggested that Polity demand that a new housing contract for future semesters be written, with a clause stating that "people can't be dislodged from their rooms."

PSC Refuses Allocations To United Farmworkers

The United Farmworkers, Cesar Chavez's national union, has requested an allocation from the Program and Services Council, despite the fact that the Eastern Farmworkers, a locally based organization, has already received $250.

"I couldn't personally see a difference [between the two]," said PSC Chairman Ishai Bloch, who added that the PSC is "overspent already" and is not allowed to fund two groups which serve essentially the same purpose.

The motion to give the UFW a budget was postponed at the October 28 meeting of the PSC pending clarification of their request.

According to UFW campus representative Curtis Grodin, the EFW is a "totally off-campus group, and is not considered a charitable group."

ISHAI BLOCH

Grodin accused the EFW of being "very secretive about their operations." He characterized the UFW as "one of the oldest groups on campus," and said that it has been trying to get campus funding since 1965, when it was organized.

EFW spokeswoman Diane Ranertz said that she would "support their [the UFW's] ability to have a budget," and would "fight with them to have one." Ranertz said she was unaware that there was competition for a Polity budget, and added that the EFW had "a very good relationship with the UFW and that they have participated in many activities together." Ranertz said that Polity "tried to put one group against another" which she said is a tactic used by any group that did not want to see farmworkers organized." Ranertz said she "would not support Polity" if they did not give funding to both organizations.

Events

The UFW sponsored a Mexican Fiesta on campus last weekend with the proceeds going to the United Farmworkers. "Most of the money [to set up this occasion] came out of our own pockets," said Grodin, who hopes to be able to have speakers come here to foster what he termed "a campus awareness" of the plight of the farmworkers.

The EFW will have Dorm canvasses, and also wants to have speakers come to the campus.

Bloch, who is "not so clear" on the distinctions between the two groups, suggested that they "consolidate somehow, not only double the manpower but consolidate their funding as well."

Former SB Council Head Indicted for Grand Larceny

Insurance broker George Tobler was indicted yesterday for allegedly diverting $200,000 from a trust fund account maintained by one of his firms, to his personal use.

Tobler is a former chairman of the Stony Brook Council, the local board of trustees for the University, which is responsible for appointing the University president, reviewing all major University plans, and making regulations governing the conduct and behavior of students.

The indictment, announced yesterday by Suffolk County District Attorney Henry O'Brien, charges Tobler with 35 counts of grand larceny and 32 counts of violating state insurance laws.

Tobler, who until this year held the Suffolk County insurance contract, pleaded innocent before County Court Judge Frank Gates, and was released in his own recognizance without bail.

The indictment alleges that Tobler took money from an insurance premium trust account maintained by his Smithtown General Agency from October, 1974 to August, 1976. The account held premiums for employees of Suffolk County and the Towns of Smithtown and Huntington, as well as employees of public industry. Tobler is alleged to have transferred the funds to several businesses in which he was the principal stockholder, including real estate firms Trends of Suffolk and the Henry Ford Plantation, and insurance firm George P. Tobler, Inc.

Tobler, 59, is reputed to have close ties with Smithtown Republican leader Nicholas Barbato, Suffolk County Executive John Klein, and county Republican leader Edwin Schwenk.

The indictment was the result of a four-month investigation by Assistant District Attorney Albert Araneo. According to Araneo, the diverted funds, which came from employee payroll deductions, were to have been paid to Merchants Mutual and Utica Mutual Insurance Companies which provided group automobile and homeowners' policies.

Thousands Borrowed

Also under investigation is the use of $250,000 which George P. Tobler borrowed from the Peconic Bank of Riverhead. George P. Tobler is the firm which handled the Suffolk County insurance account, and is believed to have netted Tobler an estimated $250,000 a year in commissions. Last April, the Suffolk County Legislature took the account away from Tobler's company, and instituted a self-administered insurance program.

Nuclear Plant Approval Stalled

Delegates to the New York Farm Bureau's annual meeting here voted yesterday to oppose the siting of a nuclear power plant on Suffolk County farm land. Long Island Lighting Company wants to build the nuclear plant at Jamesport. The resolution approved by the state's largest farm organization urged state agencies not to approve plans for the plant until problems with waste disposal, environmental and health hazards and safety procedures were solved.

Gilmore's Mother: Stay Execution

Attorneys representing the mother of convicted murderer Gary Gilmore asked U.S. Supreme Court Justice Byron White and Utah state courts yesterday to postpone Gilmore's execution. Bessie Gilmore of Milwaukie, Oregon has said she opposes capital punishment and does not want her son to die. But Gilmore, who says death is better than a lifetime behind bars, suggested earlier this week that persons trying to save him should "butt out."

Gilmore has persuaded Utah officials to let him die and is scheduled to go before a firing squad at sunrise Monday, which would make him the first person executed in this country in nine years.

B1 Bomber Production Ordered

Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld ordered a start on production of the costly and controversial B1 bomber yesterday a decision that could be overturned by President-elect Jimmy Carter after he takes office.

Announcing the long-expected decision, Rumsfeld said, "We have concluded that proceeding with this contract approach is in the national interest" because of the momentum of Soviet strategic weapons buildup, and because the plane, which has been under development for six years, is ready to be built. In a statement, Rumsfeld said a decision was made in consultation with President Ford and after an exhaustive review of the program's progress.

Kelley: No Plans to Resign

FBI Director Clarence Kelley said yesterday he does not intend to resign despite indications that President-elect Jimmy Carter wants to name his own FBI chief. "I have said many times I am not going to resign," Kelley told a reporter. He said he had not changed his mind.

Asked whether he would resign if Carter asks him to do so, Kelley replied: "When that comes up, I'll address it then." Campaigning in Connecticut in September, Carter said he would have fired Kelley if he had been president and known the facts behind allegations against the FBI director at the time. But Carter stopped short of saying he would fire Kelley as president. "I will cross that bridge if I come to it," Carter said.

Savino Indicted in Stabbing

Army ROTC cadet James Savino was indicted yesterday on a charge of criminally negligent homicide in the fatal stabbing of a fellow cadet during a military fraternity hazing expedition. Suffolk County District Attorney Henry O'Brien said the grand jury voted the indictment in the death of Thomas Fitzgerald, 19, who was killed during a mock interrogations exercise by members of the Pershing Rifles fraternity. Savino, 21, third highest ranking cadet officer in the ROTC unit at St. John's University in Queens, pleaded innocent at his arraignment and was released at $5,000 bail for a December 13 hearing.

Rabbi: Smoking Is Bad for Soul

A Tel Aviv rabbi says smoking is not only bad for your health, it's also bad for your soul.

Rabbi David Halevy, one of Tel Aviv's two chief rabbis, says smoking or offering a cigarette to another is a violation of Jewish law, which prohibits any drugs which might cause bodily harm.

Speaking on a radio program Tuesday night, Rabbi Halevy based his ruling on the Biblical verse "Take therefore good heed of yourselves" Deuteronomy 4:15. Jewish law interprets this verse as forbidding any intentional damage to our body, the rabbi explained.

The rabbi's ruling applies only to Jewish religious law, and is not an Israeli government law. Nonobservant Jews, including all but three cabinet members, are unaffected by the ruling.

Geological Survey Funds Restored By Legislative Budget Compromise

By DAVID GILMAN

A study to determine the quantity of water in various sections from North Brookhaven to Riverhead that was originally slated to be stricken from the county budget was restored as a result of a compromise between the legislature and the Department of Environmental Control.

According to the compromise, Suffolk County will pay $75,000 to restore the Geological Survey, with $35,000 worth of services coming from the DEC and well-drilling services coming from the county's Water Authority. The geological survey is a study which determines the quantity of water an area will have in future years. The survey was in danger of being cut from the county's budget in this year of fiscal entrenchment, but was finally saved when the county's contribution was decreased from last year's $110,000 to $75,000.

According to County Legislator Mildred Steinberg, (D-Stony Brook), the sections of North Brookhaven that will now be studied were ignored under the original budget. But the compromise between the county, the DEC and the water authority saved the study in that area. The Suffolk County Water Authority will be responsible for continuing the project from North Brookhaven to Riverhead. "It's a very good compromise," said Steinberg. "The geological survey is important because it can be used in helping predict a possible water shortage."

The compromise helped restore the survey to the North Shore of Suffolk County, which would probably not have been served in full had it not been for the plan, said Steinberg. Steinberg said that the survey had not concentrated on the North Shore because "with limited resources the project was put off for a later date." Steinberg added, "But with an increase in population along the North Shore, the survey is all the more necessary in planning for the future." The compromise plan was designed by Steinberg, DEC Commissioner John Flynn and Edward Bradley of the U.S. Geological Survey.

MILLIE STEINBERG

Steinberg said that the survey is necessary in planning land use and development for any given area. "It adds to our knowledge of the quantity and quality of water," she said. She stressed that the project helps to determine not only the amount of water per se, but its quantity in relation to land use. The members of the geological survey are involved solely in research, said Steinberg, and do not make any recommendations concerning how the water should be utilized. "But based on the research data," she added, "the legislature reaches a final decision." In addition, the DEC uses the research data in planning well-drilling and sewer projects.

No Deferment Problems Seen Despite TAP Delays

By LARRY GENSCHE and ROBERT GATSOFF

Despite lengthy delays in the awarding of Tuition Assistance Program grants, no student who applied for tuition deferment will be adversely affected, according to Special Programs Director Ralph Watkins.

Over 6,000 Stony Brook students applying for TAP money did not receive an award notice by October 15, the deadline for fall semester payments, said University Spokeswoman, Jan Hickman. This deadline was extended until October 21, but by that date most TAP applicants were still uninformed about their award.

The Office of Special Programs requested that all students who had not received an award notice check a computer printout, which listed the names of those eligible for an award. "We were told that this was a complete list," said Watkins, "but many students told us they applied and we took their word even though they weren't on the list.

Watkins said that these students were given deferments based on the amount of TAP they received last year, and were held responsible for paying any differences if their award declined in value. "All freshmen got full deferments and like the upperclassmen have to pay-up any difference when the awards come from Albany," he explained.

According to Watkins, those students who paid their tuition, instead of taking a deferment will receive a check for the amount of their TAP award. "I just saw the checks dated November 3," Watkins said, "and it usually takes from one to three weeks after the award notice comes from Albany until a reimbursement check is sent to the student."

Watkins said that the delays affecting

Stony Brook students are being felt throughout the state, and that awards to several hundred thousand students attending private as well as state colleges have been delayed. "We're doing everything to protect the students because this [delay] is not their fault. Any student who received a deferment has been allowed to pre-register for the spring semester."

Independent Students' Red Tape

The New York State Legislature put a major stumbling block in the way of the TAP program, according to Watkins, when it required students claiming independence from their parents to fill out an additional lengthy questionnaire. "Students claiming to be independent from their parents will be the last to have their awards calculated," Watkins noted. "Of 12,500 students in this category only 1200 have received awards."

Suicide: A Cry for Help

By FRANCES E. STRACK

"Most people who attempt suicide are crying out for help, but just don't know where to get it or how to ask for it," said Bridge to Somewhere Executive Director Dennis Donlon, commenting on the suicide of Sophomore Thomas Gedda, who was found hanged in his Irving College room last Tuesday night.

Donlon said that the Bridge to Somewhere, a peer-counseling organization formed to deal with students' emotional problems, counseled 135 people last year. "Of all those," he said, "only about two or three came out and said they were going to commit suicide."

"People get lonely and depressed," said Bridge to Somewhere Counselor Andy Balluffi, "and don't know where to go for help. Unfortunately, we don't know who they are and we can't help them in time," he said, but there's a counselor here 24 hours a day." Neither Donlon nor Balluffi recalled seeing Gedda in their office for counseling.

Subject to Distress

According to Response Hotline Mental Health Counselor Regina Arata, students are subjected to all kinds of stresses and crises. "A large percentage of our calls are from people who are lonely, or confused, and many suicides could have been avoided if someone could have reached the person in time."

"We'll never know how many of those depressed and lonely people we talked to would have committed suicide," said Arata, "since only a very small percentage of our cases will actually come out and tell us that they are considering it. A person in crisis needs a listener—a non-judgemental supporter. Then we can help a person focus on options."

Besides the Bridge to Somewhere and Response Hotline, the psychiatric services in the Infirmary also handle calls from people in crises, and also have mental health counselors on duty 24 hours a day.

Nineteen Attempts

Despite the accessibility of counselors, suicides are still attempted. So far, there have been only two successful suicides on campus: Gedda, and another student, who stepped in front of a train at the Stony Brook station about three years ago. According to Mark Kopel, Executive Vice President of the Stony Brook Ambulance Corps, there have also been 19 possible attempts since September, 1975.

"A lot of people feel there's nothing for them here, introverts, outsiders who feel that they're not a part of this university," said Kopel. "People have tried pills and alcohol, slit wrists, not taking essential-to-life medication, and threatening to jump off buildings. They're mostly people crying out for help. Once we get a call, we send out an ambulance as soon as possible, and then decide on bringing the patient to the infirmary or a hospital. A mental counselor meets us there as soon as we arrive."

All the counselors were concerned about people who want and desperately need help, but don't know where to go. "We can only help people who let us know that they need help," said Balluffi. "They can't remain isolated, locked to their books. They've got to come to us."

Weapons Collection Grows

By RAYMOND A. RIEFF and ROBERT PALATNICK

Weapons which have been confiscated from students over past years are being stored in a long, rectangular cabinet safe in the Office of Public Safety. Some of the weapons have been used in the perpetration of criminal acts, but, according to Public Safety Director Robert Cornute, mere possession of a weapon on campus is "in direct violation of New York State law."

Among the weapons presently in possession are a 12 gauge shotgun, a .22 caliber bolt action rifle and a converted 30 odd 6, known as a Military Springfield.

Cornute said that the shotgun was confiscated from a guest on campus after he left it in plain view on the rear seat of his car. The 30 odd 6 was confiscated from a student after another student on his hall reported it.

Cornute explained that the strict nature of the penal law makes unlawful firearm possession a Class A misdemeanor and is punishable by one year in prison, a $2000 fine, or both.

About three weapons a year are confiscated by Public Safety and the majority of cases involve unconcealable weapons such as rifles, according to Cornute. A recent case involved an employee of the private security company contracted by the Union bookstore who recently came into the Union with three small firearms with the intention of selling them to students. The weapons were confiscated, and he was subsequently fired.

BBs Prohibited

Cornute said that there were no BB guns among the weapons in custody, and that although a student could not be arrested for one's possession, they are prohibited on campus by University regulations, and such an offense would be subject to the review by the Policy Judiciary or Academic Review Committee.

Artifact Auction

An auction of cultural and historical artifacts, donated by students, faculty and friends of the Department of Anthropology will be held on Friday, December 3, 1976, at the Educational Workshop Hall, Museums at Stony Brook. Auction bidding begins at 8:30 PM, with a special 7:00 to 8:30 PM period set aside for viewing the items.

Proceeds from the auction will be used to finance the founding and publication of Anthropology, a new journal dedicated to scholarly research in anthropology, archaeology and their related disciplines.

Items to be sold include a special lot of antique Spanish coins, a trunk lot from a Liberian village and a trunk lot from an Indian village. Asian, African, Amerindian, Melanesian and Middle Eastern items will also be auctioned. For information, call 246-5996.

Services Extended

The Psychological Center has expanded its services to Long Island residents to accommodate a wide variety of conditions needing counseling and treatment.

The Center, formerly a unit for the treatment of student psychological problems, will now focus exclusively on the needs of children and adults in the community. The service is staffed by 40 therapists, including staff psychologists and graduate students who are doctoral candidates in the University's clinical psychology program.

The center charges fees ranging from $5.00 to $30.00 per hour of treatment based on gross family income. Persons can receive further information by calling (516) 246-6719. All client information is confidential.

incidents of pellet carbon dioxide and pump-up gun confiscation, and added that a pump-up weapon, if pressurized sufficiently, "could achieve the velocity of a .22 caliber rifle." He also said that carbon dioxide weapons and air pistols are not firearms, which are defined as anything discharging a projectile propelled by the detonation of gunpowder. In one airgun case, the individual was sent a letter by Executive Vice President T.A. Pond requesting that he cease living on campus.

Air Gun Danger

Cornute emphasized the severity of possession of an air gun of any kind, "Knowing that they are similar in appearance to the real thing," and that if someone were spotted with one, Security, upon being notified, would in turn notify the Suffolk County Police because of the chances of someone getting hurt.

Regarding the formation of a rifle club on campus, Cornute said that he does not oppose it "provided that it meets certain guidelines." He said that the rifles must be used in a safe, secure environment, that they must be issued for immediate use and returned immediately afterwards for safe storage.

Against Guns

Cornute stated that some institutions have approved of individual students being able to store their guns in Security headquarters, independent of the campus rifle club, if they are far from home and forced to live on campus during intercession, which is prime hunting season. Cornute added that he is diametrically opposed to Public Safety Officers here carrying guns "unless it could be demonstrated to my satisfaction that it was necessary in the situation," he said.

Standardize the GPA

Editorials

With final exams just three weeks away, the subject of grade point averages has arisen once again. In the past few weeks, several students have called for a revision in the manner in which grade point averages are computed. It seems that many students would favor a policy where failing grades would not be averaged into the GPA and would be deleted from a student's transcript. The justification of this plan is based on the fact that a student can fail a course and take it over and receive a good grade. If the student receives a good grade, then he should have that grade on his GPA because he now possesses knowledge gained from that course.

We can certainly sympathize with a student who receives an "F" on his GPA even though he subsequently learned the course material. Unfortunately, however, the academic system is not conducive to the pursuit of knowledge simply for the sake of learning. At best, the GPA is a very competitive game that does not necessarily reflect the knowledge that a person gained from attending classes. For that matter, grades do not reflect knowledge either. The GPA has a few specific uses, one of which is to act as a selector for students applying to graduate schools. And, as a game, the GPA rules at Stony Brook are fairly reasonable. The drop period, which has been extended to nine weeks, the pass-no credit option, and the possibility of taking an incomplete in a course are all fair alternatives that can help remove a student from a failing situation.

It is evident that an effective change in the computation of GPA would have to be a change that is contrary to our present philosophy on grading which has become widely accepted. A change such as dropping an "F" from the GPA would do little in the way of changing that basic philosophy, and would therefore be ineffective. Students would repeat courses until they got their desired grade which would be unfair to students who got a good grade the first time and do not have the time or money to stay in school for more than four years. In the long run, graduate schools would have to consider how long it took a particular student to finish college as one of their standards.

Dropping Fs from the GPA would not help the students. What would help the students, however, is a standard method of computing the GPA throughout the SUNY system. Currently, there is no uniform system of computing GPAs throughout the State University. In Binghamton, students are graded A-B-C and no credit, and at Albany, students can drop a course up to the last day of classes to avoid an "F." At Stony Brook however, the only way for a student to drop a course late in the term is to completely withdraw from the university, which undoubtedly incurs financial hardship and a great loss of time. This situation is deplorable, and we would encourage a plan which would create a standard system regarding the length of drop periods and which grades to use in computing the GPA. In this way, students would know where they stood in relation to other students.

No Cost Too High

Here we go again. Another editorial about traffic lights. Perhaps this one will drive the point home, instead of waiting for an accident.

The intersection of Stony Brook Road and the road that leads to South P-Lot is highly dangerous. With cars barreling down Stony Brook Road at upwards of 45 miles per hour, and the cars exiting the University edging their way in, it's a wonder there have been so few accidents over the years. But in this case, closeness counts—if it could act as as warning of what could happen.

We feel the demand for safety expenditures is not an unreasonable one. Our calls for improved lighting seem futile, since they had apparently not succeeded in securing adequate lighting for this large, massive campus. When freshman Trevor Jones was hit by a car in front of the Tabler steps, we called for increased lighting on the strip of road that runs from Kelly Quad all the way to Tabler. To date, nothing has been done. Students who walk on the sides of that road late at night—perhaps those who live in Tabler and are walking back from a party in Kelly—are still in danger of being hit.

When a driver smashed his car into the gate that bounds the University and Nicolls Road, we called for officials to place a light to better illuminate the gate, so that drivers can readily ascertain its presence and avoid driving into it. But nothing was done.

We urge University officials to apply enough pressure to Brookhaven Town to make the traffic light possible, and to make the mentioned improvements in the campus lighting situation. The cost involved can be easily rationalized when weighed against the possibility of saving a life.

Reader's Response: Different Views of YCS

By PATRICIA CUNNINGHAM

In response to Statesman's article on the YCS Chairman (11/17/76) - based on an "anonymous source" - I have a great deal to say.

I was a YCS student during the year in question in your article, and I have no doubt as to who the ultimate source of your information is. He is an ex-faculty member who envisions himself as a revolutionary - and being powerless to tear down the "system," is lashing out at the only thing he, unfortunately, is in a position of affecting - YCS and Marty Timin.

I knew both parties quite well, and can truthfully say I had an excellent inside view of the problems besetting YCS last year. Hence, I feel qualified to address with some authority all of the so-called "charges" made in Statesman's article.

First, and foremost, I have in all my dealings with Martin Timin found him to be a sensitive, supportive advisor. He made sure, as many students will corroborate, that his substantial criticisms of our work were couched in supportive one-to-one discussions. He simply is not a failure as a teacher.

In your article you quoted your source as saying Mr. Timin "admitted to being a failure as a teacher, and that, instead of bringing students together, he divided them." This is utter nonsense. I attended every Wednesday gathering. Mr. Timin, in the context of trying to analyze what was going wrong with the Wed. gatherings, and to find a positive direction for the group, admitted that the Wednesday gatherings were (so far) a failure, and that the students were divided. A statement of fact, friends, not an admission of guilt.

You report that Mr. Timin "ignored the probing questions of another substantive internal report (done by YCS students) which raised serious doubts on core issues."

May I say that most of us in the program - all but Mr. L and three students - ignored the bulk of the memos and complaints coming from this small group of YCS students led by one dissident faculty member, Mr. L. To begin with, Mr. L. a) supported and in fact was instrumental in the design of the Wed. gatherings, and agreed to the hiring of the Aim Adjunct Faculty member that is mentioned in Statesman's article, and b) Mr. L. did not use the avenues for mature discussion open to him in the faculty meetings arranged weekly by common agreement among the faculty. Instead he chose to divide the student body by bringing up in a rather childish manner all of his complaints in the Wednesday gatherings. He (or his students at his bidding) wrote memo upon memo criticizing Mr. Timin personally as well as the program. The memos became more intense when it became clear that Mr. L was not to be rehired.

Two other points, the first dealing with the "attack" on Larry Krantz by one of the other faculty members, Mr. R. Believe it or not, Mr. R. was trying to help Larry Krantz by showing him how he was taking attitudes and arguments from Mr. L (i.e. that Larry Krantz was not thinking for himself). What he actually said was "If I wanted to, I (or anyone) could tear you apart now" (meaning Larry's arguments couldn't stand up under a real attack because Larry did not have a heartfelt conviction about his points). And "he's a slicker trying to run his number over on you all." Larry, at this point, was a "slicker" and as no one else was challenging him, he was running a number on us (albeit he didn't mean to be).

As to the evaluations - many people evaluated the program positively from both within the university and without. I find it exceedingly hard to believe Mr. Timin "wined and dined" them all successfully.

I am sincerely sorry that Statesman reported these inaccurate allegations without interviewing other students. It was a highly destructive article, and the pity is, not one of the allegations is true. (The writer is an SUSB undergraduate)

Praise in the Face of Accusations

By DEIRDRE MAGUIRE

As a former member of Youth and Community Studies (YCS) from Fall, 1974 to Spring, 1976, I feel compelled to comment on Statesman's article, YCS Members Charge Chairman Incompetent (November 17, 1976), which I found to be garbled and incomprehensible as well as borderline "sensational journalism." The gist of the article, while undeniably negative toward the YCS program, was, unfortunately, entirely one-sided and worse, scarcely a majority opinion. It looks like a case of the mouse that roared.

People who have heard of YCS through normal academic channels will realize it is an alternative program that combines academic disciplines with community experience in the Social Sciences fields. Students within YCS are allowed significant opportunities to design participational processes within the given structure and it is this process that was irresponsibly misused and abused by a minority of the entire YCS group last year (specifically, one ex-faculty member and three full-time students primarily).

It is important first to say that Martin Timin could hardly be described as a failure as a teacher or of dividing students except, perhaps, by someone who holds a personal, emotional grudge against him. It was not Marty Timin who failed his responsibility as a chairman, it was an ex-faculty member that failed his responsibilities as both a faculty member and a teacher. The chance for self-development and development as a group died when this faculty member decided that his personal direction and philosophy was the only correct one and proceeded as systematically, as irritatingly, as persistently and as childishly as he could to impose an authoritarian structure of his own upon the entire YCS group using a small group of students (three full-time, three to four part-time) who parroted his methodology as fanatically as he did.

I feel justified in saying this because I was a member of his sequence for a year and a half until I dropped out of his group because we were no longer able to express personal opinions or beliefs (unless one wished to be "bullied" into submission).

Credibility Destroyed

Time and time again throughout last year, this faculty member destroyed his own credibility through his outrageous accusations against the Chairman and his own personal tactics or reprisals which he tried to foist on the entire YCS group to make it seem a programmatic concern when it was essentially a personal conflict between himself and the Chairman. I find it highly presumptuous and indeed, I am outraged, that at this date he is still trying to continue his vigilant tactics which have no basis in reality (except his own), no place in academia, and, most of all, were the main cause of the disruptions which occurred within the YCS program last year.

Martin Timin is to be commended for his abilities as both a chairman and a teacher in the face of the blatant accusations and one-sided statements he faced last year and is still encountering now.

YCS is an excellent program in spite of this ex-faculty member's distortions. It provides an opportunity for students to think, to understand in a comprehensive and integrated way about themselves and the society in which we operate, both as individuals and communities. It is a program that the Self-Study Report of '72 cried out for and it does indeed answer a need within the university.

I should hope that, in the future, Statesman will veer away from this type of sensational journalism that is not only biased but highly destructive and malignant to the basic tenets of an intellectual community.

COCA Usher Protests Unruly Filmgoers

By RUTH SCHEELER

As an usher at the COCA movies, I have been exposed to the unsavory side of some students. Not only do they abuse us, but at times threaten and harm us. Having no respect for the University (ie. desks, etc.), they have even less respect for us and other students.

In Lecture Hall 100, the number of broken desks is unbelievable. The desks are made of some sort of fiberglass material and can easily break. However, one can still rest one's feet, and not break the back of the desk, by not applying an excessive amount of pressure.

One can understand that during the weekend one likes to relax and forget the weekday worries, but there are some who become weekend worries to us. We become objects of others' frustrations. Some become outraged and violent because a show is sold out and they have no tickets. We suggest that they get tickets for the next show or come back the following evening. But, by now, one should realize that tickets are necessary. There are a limited number of usable desks, and we cannot allow students to sit in the aisles, because of a fire hazard.

We are more than halfway through the semester and if one just glances through Statesman, one will find in small print underneath the COCA ad...TICKETS REQUIRED. I would imagine that Stony Brook students DO know how to read. The information desk, located in the downtown area of this overwhelming metropolis, is the place where one may pick up these infamous, ever changing color tickets. All one has to do is present an ID card or any other facsimile, and PRESTO!... a ticket of your very own, and it's brand new, never been touched by human hands...of course, the information people aren't human, they're...SUPERhuman.

On these FREE tickets, one may notice, on the right hand side the number 1, 2, or 3...these three numbers seem to mystify everyone. But, they are so symbolic, since there are three shows each evening, one may suppose, and rightly so, that these numbers correspond in some way to the showings. Bravo, my hand goes out to you...a true genius. The number one corresponds to the first showing at 7PM and likewise the other two correspond to the 9:30 and 12:00 shows. Just imagine how much money one can save, one needn't bribe anyone, nor acquire one from a scalper, who could believably relieve you of some small fortune. This brings me onto another topic...that of the projector...

One must admit...machines are only human...and they inevitably become senile from old age. This seems to be our problem. Not only do they break down at the first sight of blood, and sex...but even after they've been fixed the previous week. Alas, I fear one night the poor projectionist will be attacked because of the nearsightedness of these cruel and inhuman (human) creatures.

One need only invite our illustrious leader, Toll, to one of our typical showings, when the projector decides to chew on some film. We might get something done, like get some working equipment. Just last weekend, the creature's power supply started to smoke. I, personally, don't know its brand, but I would happily have given it one of mine. While I was consulting with the horrified projectionist, the entire lecture hall seemed to be seething, and rather upset. I thought they were getting excited over the mailman scene, but who would get excited over a mailman?

In spite of all these "problems," we are doing our best to keep things under control, it isn't easy even with the whole football team. With a little help from students and the administration, something could be done to prevent these unwanted occurrences.

Opposing Imperialism in South Africa

By WENDY GURTON

For over three months the flames of struggle continue to blaze in Azania (South Africa). Despite the savage repression by South Africa's white supremacist ruling class, the struggle has surged forward, involving even broader numbers of people, and becoming better organized.

Since WWII, the U.S. has been the dominant power in Africa and is the main prop of the racist regimes in Southern Africa. The U.S. has over $1 billion in investments in Southern Africa. Plants like G.M., Ford and Chrysler pay workers about $.50 an hour while workers in diamonds and gold mines get $30 a week for 60 to 72 hours of work.

There are three countries still under the minority rule—Zimbabwe, Azania and Namibia (Rhodesia, South Africa, South West Africa). All of these countries are principally backed and funded by U.S. Imperialism, which desperately seeks to maintain power and control for the millions of dollars in profits and also the strategic military importance—the entire southern part of the continent and connecting point of the Atlantic and Indian Oceans.

The struggle against apartheid, against lousy and segregated housing, brutal working conditions, forced use of foreign language in schools have more and more been taken up by South African workers. A special focus is the "pass laws" and "laws of influx control" which force black workers to live without their wives and children while they work in the white-only areas. Many of the men can only see their families three weeks out of the year.

As the struggle surges forward, many of the black "leaders" promoted by the South African ruling class have been exposed as puppets. White liberal spokesmen are being left behind. Students are secretly organizing on campus and compromising leaders are being replaced by leaders committed to furthering the struggle.

At the same time, Ian Smith's Rhodesian government, South Africa's main ally is increasingly under attack from the Zimbabwe people and liberation forces. The liberation forces are gaining more territory, more support among the people, and many new fighters. Smith, Vorster (head of the South African government) and the U.S. are desperately trying to stop it.

Watching all these developments closely is the Soviet Union, a country governed by the expense for more profit, an imperialist superpower like the U.S. Though it has very little influence in Southern Africa, the Soviet Union is trying to use its "socialist" mask and pose as a "friend" to liberation groups so that they can work their way into the scene, like in Angola. The Soviet Union hopes to "aid" the liberation forces so that they become tied to and dependent on them. So far the Soviet Union has had very limited success.

Desperate for Solution

It is in this context, facing a rising storm of struggle of the African people and remembering the aggressive takeover of Angola by the Soviet Union, that the U.S. (Kissinger) is so desperately trying to come up with a "solution" to the South African problems, so that they'll be able to maintain their colonies and profits and keep Russian influence out.

The Kissinger plan, supposedly a "plan for majority rule in Rhodesia," is really a plan for continued enslavement of the people of Zimbabwe. According to the plan, a transition government would be set up in Rhodesia immediately to draft a new constitution and direct the transition to majority rule within two years. This "council of state" as it was to be called, would have 50 percent black and 50 percent white membership. Some might think that's a step forward over the present white settler role, but the imperialists always have something up their sleeves.

First of all, a provision requiring a vote to pass any provisions insured white control. The chairman of the council would be a white appointed by the Smith regimes, as would the key ministers of Defense and Law and Order, the police powers of the state. Not to mention the fact that the black members they had in mind were nothing but sell-out tribal chiefs and puppets of the old rulers.

Ian Smith and the Rhodesian government quickly endorsed this "plan" but all they and the U.S. got out of it was a slap in the face. The liberation forces vowed to continue the armed struggle as the only way out for the people of Zimbabwe and the presidents of the black African states of Tanzania, Mozambique, Botswana, Zambia and Angola also rejected the proposal saying "if accepted [it] would be tantamount to legalizing the colonialist and racist structures of power." The Conference in Geneva has been a dismal failure for the U.S. and British imperialists and the Smith and Vorster regimes. The leaders of the liberation forces have stuck by their rejection of the phony "Kissinger plan," using the talks to press their demand for immediate transfer of power to the people of Zimbabwe. Smith, hoping to put pressure on the liberation forces, has walked out, calling to the U.S. to "stop Communist aggression." (Where have we heard that one before?) Our own rulers, eager to defend their billions of investment and control of the area, mean that this is the time for us to take a firm stand against continued U.S. involvement.

Apartheid and white minority rules are on the defensive. The whole system of exploitation—the Smith and Vorster regimes are on the way out and we can help give it a death blow with our support for the liberation struggle.

Letters and Viewpoint

Let Us In

To the Editor:

I want to know when SAB is going to wake up to the fact that people are waiting on those lines for concerts, not cattle. At the Grover Washington/Melba Moore concert, a huge line of people was treated to still another Stony Brook indignity - waiting on line in 20-degree windy weather for over an hour. At intervals, concert security would attempt placation: we were told that the groups had to do sound checks, and it was "in their contract" to have an empty gym for those sound checks.

The point is (SAB, are you listening?) that if you schedule a concert for 8:30, you don't run the sound checks at the same time or later. Also, the fact that there was no compassion on the part of SAB - that the important issue was the performers' contracts, and not the people, who paid $3-$5 for the privilege of freezing-is inexcusable and inhuman.

The end result of SAB's negligent attitude was that the freezing and fed-up crowd literally mobbed the door when it was finally opened.

Some of the concert-goers became hysterical, and the eye of the security guard was blackened. What an ugly and unfitting way to start a night intended for enjoyment.

SAB concerts - Bill Dorr - Wake up! Don't bother running concerts if you don't have the know-how to see that they run smoothly-or at least try to put yourself in the position of the people waiting on that line... and let us line up inside.

Biased Presentation

To the Editor:

I must take exception to both the substance and form of a front page article in your edition of November 17. The good faith of your reporter is not in question: I know him to be fair-minded. However, the whole presentation of the YSC problem is biased and unfairly presented. For one thing, it bespeaks uncommonly ignorant and uncivilized petty-mindedness to mention the "wining and dining" of a visiting committee or its members: ignorant, - for Stony Brook does no longer pay for visitor's meals that are anything but the hamburger variety, and visitors travel long and inconvenient hours to come and perform their duty, which there is no doubt they perform in strict conscience.

For another, any expression of justification on Professor Timin's part is presented in the most jaundiced, slanted way, as if he had to plead for anything.

My conclusion as a member of this faculty is that while students enjoy anonymity to protect their grades - which is of course right and fine - faculty do not enjoy any protection from the crudest slander. Your headlines are sensationalist. That is not right in a free student paper.

Tabling Callousness

To the Editor:

Now that the new tables have been established in the Union, I believe that someone should explain why craft sales and literature tables have been missing in the Union for the past year. Being co-founder and treasurer of the SB Crafts Club, I have had direct experience with the Union table situation.

Last year, the area which housed tables for craft sales and literature was mysteriously declared a fire hazard. Tables had existed in this area for years prior to the banning of tables, yet now (September 1975) they were declared a fire hazard as they blocked access and egress from the door of the Union basement to the main Union doors.

Paradoxically, the new tables have been constructed precisely in the area which was originally declared to be the source of the fire hazard. And these tables are permanent whereas the old craft and literature tables were temporary and movable.

The logic behind the fire hazard ploy is beyond my understanding. Suffice it to say that someone wanted those tables removed (the real reason will probably never be known) and when their removal was complete, that person or those persons had a change of mind and decided to replace the tables.

Of course, the only persons to suffer were the craft and literature people and the general Stony Brook population. This sort of callous approach to the student population is reprehensible and continues to be too typical of the Stony Brook administration.

Rent Strike

To the Editor:

As members of the University we have experienced heat outages, hot water outages, electrical complications, roaches, all which make life on this campus difficult.

We sign contracts as people, as do people in the community who sign housing agreements with their landlords. These people have recourse, rent strike. We also have recourse, we can do the same. This sort of action forces the landlord into a situation where he must comply with the demands of the tenant. To be more explicit, these are not demands, these are in fact what the landlord is obliged to abide by because he wrote them.

Polity is calling a rent strike for the spring semester. What this means is that we will pay only the first installment of our housing bill, thus you will not be deregistered! When time for the second payment comes around it won't be given to the University. This is our bargaining power. They cannot and will not throw 5,000 students out of their rooms. This is strong action. This is also reality because the University will then be forced to comply with their housing contract. Our demands are not for luxuries they are for basic human necessities that they are obliged to supply us. This will not be effective unless we take part in this endeavor.

This must be a united effort.

CAREER CORNER

By LAURIE JOHNSON
CONVERSATION WITH A HOSPITAL ADMINISTRATOR

Student: I've been hearing a lot about the field of hospital administration lately, but I'm not really sure just what is involved. What are the responsibilities of a hospital administrator?

Administrator: The responsibilities of proper financial management, the employment of personnel, the direction of professional, medical, nursing, and technical services, and the supervision of housekeeping activities, all fall under the jurisdiction of the hospital administrator. In larger institutions, the hospital administrator is aided by a staff that may include associate administrators and assistants who are delegated much of the responsibility for the day to day operations of the hospital. The hospital administrator is also expected to take part in community affairs and to act as the liaison between the community and medical groups. The administrator must also take part in fund-raising activities and educational programs.

Student: Who supervises the work of hospital administrators?

Administrator: The chief hospital administrator is responsible to the hospital governing board or a board of directors which serves voluntarily and without pay.

Student: What are the educational requirements for entry into the field?

Administrator: One must complete four years of undergraduate study, and then complete a two-year graduate program in hospital administration, health care administration, or business administration with a specialization in health care. Usually a one-year administrative residency is part of the graduate training.

Student: If an undergrad is contemplating a career in hospital administration, what kinds of courses should the student take to prepare for entry into a graduate program?

Administrator: On this question, opinions differ. Some graduate programs in hospital administration prefer liberal arts graduates, believing that a broad education is the best background for the "generalist" the future administrator must be. Other graduate programs prefer candidates well grounded in fundamental courses in personnel and business administration, accounting, psychology, etc. Still others favor candidates with a background in the sciences and health care administration.

Student: Well, with all these options, how does a student know which is the best curriculum to follow?

Administrator: Since requisites for admission to graduate schools vary, it is wise to write to the individual schools for information about requirements and policies.

Student: How do you find out which schools offer such programs?

Administrator: There are around 50 universities in the U.S., Canada and Puerto Rico offering graduate degrees in health and hospital administration. To find where they are located, one should refer to a directory of graduate programs which can be found in most career development offices or in library reference rooms. Or, by writing away to The American College of Hospital Administrators, 840 North Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, Illinois 60611, one can receive an accurate listing.

Student: What about salaries in the health care field?

Administrator: Naturally, they vary, depending on the size and location of the facility. For assistant administrators with master's degrees in hospital administration, but lacking practical experience, the customary beginning salary is about $12,000 to $15,000. Salaries for hospital administrators range from approximately $18,000 to as high as $50,000 in larger institutions.

Student: Sounds good, but what does the future employment trend for hospital administration look like?

Administrator: The recent emphasis on health care programs has created an unmet need for administrators. For the future, opportunities for advancement are unlimited. The changing role of the hospital as the central focus for the community's health needs not only will increase the demand for administrators but it will broaden the nature of the executive's position and open new challenges requiring managerial skills.

Junior Varsity Loses Opener; Varsity Wins Third Straight

The agony of defeat came early this year for the Stony Brook junior varsity basketball team. In fact, it came a little too early. Wednesday evening, the opening game of the season, the Pats were on the losing end of a high scoring contest, 88-75 to Farmingdale College.

"We played terrible the first half," Coach Randy Manning said. It might have been a case of the freshman jitters, Manning said. Eight of the 11 men on the squad are first year men, although, freshman Freston

Warner had a good shooting night.

After being down by 29 points, the Pats started to show their potential. Going into the second half, the Patriots played much more aggressively. "We played 100 percent better in the second half, although not up to our ability," Manning said. They cut the 29 point deficit to 13 points. "We will improve," Manning said. "We have more height than last year and the team is fairly balanced."

Team play and not individuality is the most important aspect for the Patriots this year, according to Manning, who is in his second year as JV coach. "We're striving for balance," he said. "Everyone will get a chance to shoot the ball." Manning said he is very optimistic about the rest of the season. "We can beat any team if we played up to our potential," Manning said. The Patriots will get a chance to prove that against Westside College this Monday evening.

The Stony Brook basketball team won their third game in as many outings Wednesday defeating Queens College, 96-78.

Sophomore roommates Wayne Wright and Larry Tillery combined for 44 points in the victory. Center Bill Anderson was still out of action with a pulled groin muscle. The Patriots are now at Binghamton State University for the Binghamton Invitational this weekend and return home against Medger Evers Monday night at 8 PM.

Hockey Club Finds First Victory Disappointing

By MANNY CALADO

With a record of 0-4 going into Wednesday's game, one problem the Stony Brook hockey club didn't anticipate facing was overconfidence. But facing another 0-4 team, that possibility exists. Scoring two goals in the third period, however, the Patriots managed their first win of the year.

"We knew Maritime wasn't that good," said goalie Warren Landau, "and we have been playing a lot better."

Landau was referring to the steady improvement in the Patriots' game performance as witnessed by their recent 2-1 loss to N.Y. Tech, in which they outshot their opponents, 15-5 in the third period. The Patriots' first meeting with Tech resulted in an 8-0 loss in which they were outshot 45-15.

Despite Stony Brook's confidence, Maritime took an early two goal lead in the first minutes of play. "We felt great and went in a little cocky, we thought we had the game wrapped up," said starting goalie Michael Flaherty.

Patriot coach Bob Lamoureux said that the team went in feeling that "they were going to take these guys apart." However, Lamoureux approves of the team attitude. "I'm glad to see them going in that way," he said, "better than going in feeling down."

New Goalie

After giving up the second goal, Flaherty was lifted and replaced with Landau. Flaherty approved the change "I had to tighten up," he said. Lamoureux said that Flaherty's "mind was not 100 percent in the game."

The move apparently changed the tempo of the game as the Patriots scored three goals before the period ended. The first tally was by Ira Gorman, followed by Mitch Cuttler and Tom Moresco.

The game moved in Maritime's direction again in the second period as Maritime scored twice to take the lead. The third Maritime goal was scored as Landau chased a loose puck and failed to beat the forward who put it underneath him. "I hesitated—I should've beaten him to the puck," Landau said. The fourth goal was scored on a three on one drive.

Lamoureux said that during the second period the Patriots has "no coordination, attack or drive."

The third period saw an about face in the Patriots' play, as they took the play away from Maritime. And a between period lecture by Lamoureux might have been responsible. "He explained that we didn't play well...we should be killing these guys," said Landau. Rich Bianculli, put it more emphatically, "He bawled us out and psyched us up for the third period," he said. Lamoureux said that "it was a combination of both."

Flaherty Returns

In addition, Lamoureux replaced Landau with Flaherty. "Warren was not playing up to par," Lamoureux said. "He was a little unsteady in the second period." Both of the coach's strategies proved successful as Steve White and Bill Schultheiss scored to win the game.

But the team did not rejoice over the win in the locker room. "We were happy to win but disappointed in the way we played," said Bianculli. "We should've won by a larger score."

The Patriots have hopes for the play-offs this year. The top four teams in the seven-team conference qualify. "The team is going to make it," Bianculli said. "We are going to win a lot of games. I can only see improvement."

Stony Brook Swimmers Keep Their Place

By DAVID SIEGEL

When the NCAA set up its Metropolitan Conference swimming divisions, it must have known what it was doing. It seems that way because when a team representing each division got together at Stony Brook for a meet Wednesday, they finished in the same order as the division they're in. Division I school St. John's University finished first. Stony Brook from Division II, second, and Division III New York University, third. St. John's defeated Stony Brook 64-45 while Stony Brook beat NYU 80-31.

"During the course of the season, we compete against teams in the same division," said Stony Brook coach Barry Fox. "The meet exposed us to different levels of swimming." Fox called the meet a tune-up for Saturday's meet against Brooklyn College. Fox had chance to experiment with his team and find some variety with his swimmers. He achieved some success with Larry Ahlgren, a junior transfer who had two impressive races, including a fine :51 in the freestyle 100 of the medley relay, although Stony Brook finished last. Later, Ahlgren swam a strong 500-yard freestyle. Freshman Lucas Sotillo had a good time in the 1,000-yard freestyle, 12:04, finishing third.

Two Wins

Stony Brook did manage to win two races against St. John's but had to go for records to do so. Paul Smirka, who earlier swam a 1:05 in the 100-yard breaststroke portion of the medley relay, tied his own school record in the 200-yard breaststroke in 2:26.7. The Patriots narrowly missed the school record in the 400-yard free style relay, but still managed to edge out St. John's. "We were going for the school record, but didn't quite make it," said sprinter Steve Morreale. "Eventually, though we are going to do it."

First Victory

Last Wednesday Stony Brook won their first divisional meet of the season, defeating Adelphi University, 6-33. Their overall record is now 2-1, with their toughest match of the season coming up Saturday when the Patriots travel to Brooklyn College.

Brooklyn has done some travelling this year. They have dropped from Division I to Division II and are expected to give Stony Brook a run for the division that the Patriots won last year. "It is going to be a cliff hanger," said Fox. "We haven't beaten Brooklyn in years. Yet, I think we have a good chance this year."
