Wadsworth Resigns

By Howard Saltz

Elizabeth Wadsworth, vice-president for Student Affairs, for almost seven years, resigned Friday to pursue other career interests. The resignation will take effect upon the selection of a successor, which will probably not occur before the end of the academic year.

The resignation, announced at a meeting of department heads, was a surprise, even though, Wadsworth said, she had been giving it thought for some time.

"I will have been at Stony Brook for seven years [in December]," Wadsworth said, "the 12-hour day is losing its charm. I have found it stimulating and fun," she continued, "even when I hated it, I loved it. But if I didn't pick up and move on my own, I might stop feeling like that."

Wadsworth said she began to consider resigning early in the summer, prompted in part by the arrival of University President John Marburger and his administration. "Obviously, that started me thinking," she said. "When there are changes, that always stimulates thinking."

Marburger said that a search committee would be formed immediately. He and Wadsworth agreed that a replacement would probably not take over before the end of the Spring 1981 semester, Marburger adding that Wadsworth may stay here as late as July or August. "To some extent, it's up to her," he said.

The search will be on a national level, like the one that brought Wadsworth here. "It's an important, nationally significant University, we should have a national search," Marburger said. "We should get the best person we can find in the nation."

The job of vice-president for Student Affairs includes dealing with all non-academic aspects of the University life. Student Affairs is responsible for housing, admissions, financial aid, orientation, counseling, the Office of Records, the Stony Brook Union, the Career Development Office and international student affairs.

Before coming to Stony Brook, Wadsworth had, for five years, been the director of counseling and training for the YWCA's Jobs Corps program for young women from poverty backgrounds. In 1967 and 1968, she served as master trainer for Newark

New Careers, a United States Department of Labor-funded paraprofessional training for residents of poverty areas.

Wadsworth has also been coordinator of a United States study program for Brazilian university student leaders; director of communications for the Bank Street College of Education in New York City; editor for American Youth Hostels; president of the Vassar Club of New York City; and an English teacher and fund-raiser for various institutions in Rio de Janeiro, Brazil.

Wadsworth, 56, received a BA degree from Vassar College, and an MA and PhD from New York University, doing work in human development, social relations, psychology, social psychology and psychometrics.

"Although we have had our differences in the past and present, I do wish her the best of luck in her future endeavors," said Polity President Rich Zuckerman. "I had the feeling that she would graduate before I did, but I did not expect it to happen quite this soon. Her eventual departure from office will most certainly have a profound effect of the quality of student life."

Another One Bites the Dust

The resignation of Elizabeth Wadsworth, vice-president for Student Affairs, brings the total number of changes among high-level University administrators since last spring to five.

Malcolm Agostini, special assistant to the president for affirmative action, left at the end of last semester to assume a similar position at SUNY Buffalo. Robert Marcus, dean of Undergraduate Studies, also left last Spring to assume the vice-presidency of a Florida college.

Sidney Gelber, vice-president for academic affairs, resigned early this summer to return to teaching. Marlowe Bergendoff, news director at University Relations, resigned in October.

Search committees are seeking replacements for Agostini and Gelber, and another will be formed soon to find a successor to Wadsworth. —Saltz

FSA Eyeing Meal Plan Fee Increase

The Board of Directors of the Faculty Student Association (FSA) may decide tomorrow night whether to add a surcharge of $20 per student per semester to the cost of meal plans to pay for improving equipment and facilities.

A proposal to add the surcharge was tabled at the Board's last meeting, October 30, and will arise again. Just when it will come up again is an area of disagreement, some Board members insisting it will be voted on tomorrow, and another saying that no concrete plan has as yet been formulated.

The surcharge would be used, Board member Mike Kennedy said, to open G-Cafeteria in an effort to alleviate crowding in H-Cafeteria. In addition, other possibilities, such as starting a commuter meal plan and opening a pizza parlor in what was the Benedict Saloon, are being explored. Kennedy said that a complete report would not be formulated until Thanksgiving, and the surcharge is only an option.

Polity President Rich Zuckerman said, however, that the proposal would probably be voted on tomorrow. "I'm 100 percent against it," he said, "I'm insulted to think that a brand new FSA Board of Directors could even consider such an atrocity. Any students that could vote for this have obviously sold out those people that put them in office."

Exorbitant Amount

Board member Owen Rumelt also spoke against the plan, saying that "students are already paying an exorbitant amount for food service that gives them lousy food and generally poor service. To mandate a surcharge would be to add insult to injury." —Saltz

Reagan's Men Seek Change

Ronald Reagan's right-hand men want to redesign American life-making it more like what it was before the New Deal Democrats. The Reagan contingent also wants to make America as powerful as it was after World War II, when we were the only atomic power in the world.

Among those likely to wield power within the new administration is Martin Anderson, from the Hoover Institution of War, Revolution and Peace at Stanford University. He is Reagan's expert on domestic problems, urban affairs and welfare. His theory is that welfare has created a new caste of dependent Americans.

Also from the Hoover Institution is Richard Allen, who has been mentioned as the next national security adviser. He is considered a hardliner on world affairs. Both he and Anderson served in the Nixon administration for a time.

Edwin Meese is another of Reagan's close advisers. And he is likely to become White House Chief of Staff, the post now held by Hamilton Jordan. In that job, Meese would control access to the new President-to whom he is very loyal. Meese is a management man, with less interest in policy. He went to Yale and the University of California Law School at Berkeley.

Another name you will be hearing is that of Mike Deaver. He advises Reagan on public relations and communications.

And he and Meese both worked with Reagan when the President-elect was governor of California.

Then, of course, there is Senator Paul Laxalt. He has been a booster for Reagan ever since they were next-door neighbors, Laxalt as Nevada's governor and Reagan in California statehouse. He is conservative--and led the Senate opposition to the Panama Canal treaties.

Jack Kemp is Reagan's fiscal man--having proposed the 30 percent, three-year tax cut that Reagan ran on.

And as for the Cabinet, Thomas Evans may show up there. He is now Delaware's only member in the House--but he has long been a Reagan ally. He has been mentioned as possible transportation secretary.

The war with Iraq produced a fragile unity in Iran. But the arrest of Iran's former foreign minister, Sadegh Ghotbzadeh, threatens to divide the country again.

The rekindled power struggle between Iranian moderates and radicals spilled over into Parliament today. At issue is the appointment of a new director for the state-run radio and television. The previous official was fired and ordered arrested after allowing Ghotbzadeh to criticize political opponents in a television interview.

Ghotbzadeh himself was arrested for allegedly telling lies about the management of a government TV channel controlled by the Islamic Republican Party. His accusers were followers of party leader Ayatollah Beheshti.

Washington -- President-Elect Ronald Reagan should have little trouble getting more defense money from Congress, possibly even the 20 billion dollars one adviser says he could request.

Congress is already so defense-minded that it approved five billion more for weapons than President Jimmy Carter asked. And voters elected even more defense supporters to the new Congress that convenes in January.

Reagan adviser William Van Cleve told CBS News Thursday that a 20 billion dollar increase next year is not inconceivable to correct deficiencies, particularly manpower problems.

Congressman Joseph Addabbo--a New York Democrat who is an occasional critic of defense spending--agrees that Congress might approve that much, given its current mood.

Pasadena, California -- Earthbound observers see Saturn with a surface of golden clouds. The Poland's uneasy labor peace appears threatened. There is fear about what may happen today, as a Polish court makes a crucial ruling on a union issue.

The new Solidarity Trade Union asked the Polish Supreme Court to drop a court-ordered provision of its pact with the government. That part of the contract affirms the role of the Communist Party as the ultimate union authority--which is just what the workers were trying to escape when they formed independent unions. Several western journalists today reported being turned away at Warsaw Airport, with one reporter saying a police officer cited "a new situation." Polish labor leaders have said they would call new strikes, if the court did not rule as they wished.

Voyager One probe--now scarcely more than 2 1/2 million miles from the planet--shows the gaseous giant to be more colorful.

Pictures sent back by the spacecraft show Saturn's spots and halos, twisting filigrees and swirling ribbons of soft tans, yellows, oranges and browns moved by the planet's winds. Similar bands on Jupiter are thought to be alternating jets of easterly and westerly winds.

Photography team leader Bradford Smith said today that the team is seeing more and more features similar to those revealed during Voyager's pass by Jupiter last year.

Scientists at the Jet Propulsion Lab in Pasadena, California say the spacecraft is in excellent condition, traveling at 35,000 miles an hour toward its closest encounter with Saturn Wednesday.

Hauppauge -- A 24-year-old Wyandanch man is being held on $100,000 bail in the Suffolk County Jail following his arrest yesterday on charges of being the "railroad rapist."

Willie Johnson was charged with several counts of rape, sodomy and robbery in connection with a string of assaults on women in the vicinity of dimly-lit railroad parking lots over the last year.

He was arraigned in First District Court in Hauppauge today on two counts of rape, one count of sodomy and one of attempted robbery, a court spokesman says.

First squad detectives in Suffolk County say they have been investigating a series of rapes at the Wyandanch and Deer Park Long Island Rail Road stations since October 1979. Many of the women were commuters returning from New York City.

New York City -- A tower operator has been taken out of service after he improperly routed a southbound Amtrak turboliner that crashed at Dobbs Ferry with an oncoming Conrail freight train and injured 100 passengers, according to a Conrail spokesman.

The Conrail spokesman, Bob Van Wagoner, says the railroad has not made a judgment on the operator's fault and he refused to identify him. Van Wagoner said the Conrail employee is in his early 30's and has been with the railroad for about a year.

The employee was, in effect, suspended with pay because the Friday night crash is under investigation. Van Wagoner says he will remain off the job pending the outcome of probes into the collision.

Future of SB Concerts Pending Meeting Today

By Laura Craven

The Student Activities Board (SAB) must come up with a plan by 11 AM today to satisfy the Administration, and ensure the continuance of concerts at the University.

According to David Fink, SAB Concerts chairman, a meeting was held on Oct. 28, two days after the Frank Zappa concert, at which the Administration handed SAB a list of demands, for a massive clean up that had to be met by today if it wanted to hold any more concerts. "Administration went about it in such an unconstructed manner," he said, "which shows to me an unwillingness to aid in undergraduate activities."

Sanford Gerstel, deputy to the President, said that there is no list of demands. He said that the administration wants SAB to take proper precautions to prevent a recurrence. "We are asking them to control the crowd," he said.

"This has happened so many times before," said Gerstel.

"This time we want to know how they're going to do it."

Fink said that the Administration insists that SAB clean the gym, the Stony Brook Union, the Physics/Math and Graduate Chemistry parking lots as well as the Administration parking garage and the Fine Arts Plaza after all concerts.

"SAB cannot be held responsible for the Administration parking lot and the Fine Arts Plaza," said Fink, "if they don't want them used, have it closed off."

Administration that cleaning the gymnasium parking lot is a reasonable demand. He said that the debris in the Fine Arts Plaza the night of the Zappa performance was not a direct consequence of the concert. He said that there have been many times when he has walked through the plaza and it has been covered with bottles and garbage, even though there had not been a concert the night before.

Although the Zappa concert attracted 6,000 spectators, SAB only broke even, Fink said. "We (SAB) are willing to help out, but I wonder if Administration will help us sustain."

After speaking with Gerstel, Fink said that he wonders if the University is genuinely committed to student activities, and if they are willing to help in the sponsorship, and if they are at all interested in the students."

Infirmiry, Insurance Plan Discussed by SUSB Senate

By Eileen Dengler

Problems concerning the University Health Services were the topic of discussion at the monthly SUSB Senate meeting last week.

The subject was introduced by undergraduate Shari Gross, who related personal experiences at the Infirmiry, including long waiting periods to see a doctor. Lori Rafkin, administrator of Campus Health Services, also spoke on the problems faced by the Infirmiry. Rafkin attributed long waiting periods to part-time doctors with community practices, who report to work late or not at all, and budget cuts that reduced the number of professional employees. She also mentioned the formation of a Student Health Advisory Board designed to handle complaints and problems faced by the Infirmiry.

Alfred Goldhaber, president of the SUSB Senate, said that although the topic was not thoroughly discussed, a health fee may be considered to expand the health services. In the past, a health fee was not governed properly, he said, and to be reinstated there would have to be strict guidelines to make sure the fee goes into the health services.

Other matters discussed included:

- Decreasing graduate students' full time enrollment from 12 credits to nine credits.

- Housing in Stage XVI. According to Goldhaber, a policy formulated last year granted housing priority to graduate, post-graduate and married students. Spots would then be given to the Health Sciences Center (HSC) according to availability. It was then changed, allotting roughly one third to HSC to distribute. Complaints had arisen because of this change in policy. "The president has agreed to set up a housing policy for Stage XVI, involving input from graduate students and the HSC," Goldhaber said, "A committee to set these policies has not been formed yet."

Student Parking Spaces May be Returned Soon

By Eve Marie Harbeson

The dispute between faculty and students over the ratio of allocated parking space in the G-Quad parking lot is on its way to being resolved according to Polity President Rich Zuckerman.

"We want to work with the faculty and prevent a faculty versus student relationship," said Zuckerman.

The faculty was allotted about 150 spaces in the lot when the parking garage adjacent to the Administration Building was constructed. The garage is completed, but none of the spaces were returned to the residents.

Administration is forming a committee that will consist of half students and half faculty. The committee will, on a semester by semester basis, determine the number of spaces that will be returned to residents.

Permanent Split

"We should be able to govern re-allocation space in the lot in two weeks," said Zuckerman.

At a meeting last week, University Business Manager Paul Madonna made a proposal that would provide for a permanent split in the G lot and return 60 spaces to residents.

A similar problem exists in the Langmuir Parking Lot. "What we have been working toward is to save the Langmuir Parking Lot for resident parking and to have a separate lot for commuters," said Zuckerman. He said he would like to see a committee formed that would work toward this.

"A final agreement should be reached in three weeks" said Zuckerman.

Zuckerman and Polity Junior Representative Martha Ripp will be working to change the conditions of the Langmuir lot. Improved lighting, painted lines, and a better drainage system are included in their eventual goals of updating the lot. "Every effort should be made to turn this into a paved lot," said Zuckerman.

Birth Defects Studied by SB Prof

By Peter A. Wishnie

Neural tube defects are the most common birth malformations in the United States. For the past eight years, Dr. James Macri, assistant professor of obstetrics and gynecology in the Health Sciences Center, has done research on this topic. Through prenatal diagnosis, Dr. Macri can reassure families that their child does not have neural tube defect.

The neural tube and the central nervous system are the earliest structures to develop in the human embryo. The neural tube, which develops at the 19th day of pregnancy, is the forerunner of the brain and the spinal cord.

The neural tube is a closed tubular structure by the 29th to 30th day of pregnancy. At this time the mother is not aware that she is pregnant and the neural tube is already forming the brain and the spinal cord. If the tubular structure fails to develop in the head region, this malformation is called anencephaly.

Anencephaly is a condition in which most of the bones of the head region (cranium) are missing and the brain is absent. This child will be born and will survive one or so days of life.

If failure in the closure of this tubular structure occurs in the developing spinal cord, then the fetus will develop spina bifida. Because the spinal cord is not formed properly, the nerves from that point of the spinal cord down are interrupted to varying degrees and the nerves that go to the lower extremities are involved causing paralysis.

About 75 percent of the children with spina bifida develop hydrocephalus, which is an over accumulation of cerebrospinal fluid in the head. This causes the head to enlarge bringing about varying degrees of mental retardation. Spina bifida and anencephaly constitute neural tube defects.

Attention was focused on families that already had a child like this, because once a parent has a child with neural tube defects, the risk of having another one goes up significantly.

Amniotic fluid from pregnancies which were at risk of having a neural tube defect (mothers that already had a child with a neural tube defect) were looked at. The evaluation of alpha-fetoprotein (AFP) in amniotic fluid gives an overwhelmingly successful way of predicting whether or not a family that is at risk of having a child like that, is in fact having one. High levels of AFP is associated with neural tube defects.

The testing is best done between the 16th and 18th weeks of pregnancy. This is when the results are found most reliable. It is also possible to find high levels of AFP in the pregnant woman's blood. By measuring the amounts of AFP, it is possible to tell early in pregnancy whether the mother is carrying twins or a child with a neural tube defect.

Besides the AFP test, amniocentesis and ultrasound are also performed on the mother. The ultrasound tests are done by Roger Baime, chief of ultrasound services at the University Hospital. Ultrasound does not only detect anencephaly, but the Hospital is rapidly developing the ability to visualize spina bifida through this technique.

Women who are at risks of having a baby with a neural tube defect were not allowed to become pregnant, but prenatal diagnosis has permitted these women to do so and reassures them that their child will be normal through the availability of these tests.

The AFP tests were so successful that Stony Brook is presently receiving amniotic fluid samples (from centers) around the country from pregnant women undergoing amniocentesis for other reasons than neural tube defects such as Down's Syndrome or if the mother is at an advanced

Memorial Service Planned For Late Theatre Professor

A memorial service for Alfred Brooks, professor in the department of Theatre Arts, will be held Thursday at 4:30 PM in the Recital Hall of the Fine Arts Center. Brooks died August 30.

Brooks came to Stony Brook in 1977 and served as chairman of the Theatre Arts Department. In the Department, he directed productions of "Rosencrantz and Guildenstern Are Dead," an adaptation by Erwin Piscator of Tolstoy's "War and Peace," and Brecht's "Man Is Man." For the 1978 Summer Theatre, he staged productions of "What the Butler Saw" and a Cole Porter musical revue. The Stony Brook production of "War and Peace" was produced Off-Broadway in the Spring of 1980 with a professional cast of actors.

Before coming to Stony Brook, Brooks was for many years a member and chairman of the Theatre Department at SUNY at Binghamton.

Brooks' family has requested that any contributions in his memory be sent to the Robert Casadesus Society, c/o 98 Waterview Drive, PO Box 287, Sound Beach, New York 11789. Brooks took a particular interest in this society, which he helped establish in association with Gaby Casadesus, in memory of Robert and Jean Casadesus. Each year funds collected by the society are used to sponsor an international piano competition for young artists and to award a prize of $2,500.

Music for the service will be performed by the North Shore Pro Musica.

Irving, Dreiser, Whitman Pancake-Eating Winners

By Nancy J. Hyman

Excitement reigned supreme at the semi-finals of the Pancake Cottage-Statesman Pancake Eating Contest Wednesday night at the Pancake Cottage Restaurant in East Setauket.

Old records were toppled by the team from Irving B-1 comprised of Jim Quinn and Jim Pisano. The individual record of 21 pancakes eaten was set by Pisano which contributed to the team record of 37 pancakes.

Ammann A-1's Matt Campbell made a valiant try with 20 pancakes eaten in 30 minutes, but it was not enough to overcome Irving's fortitude. Ammann's David Selwyn was disqualified for leaving the table and when asked why, he responded "because he [Campbell] threw up on me."

In the second competition of the evening, Dreiser A-3's Leonard Rosenfeld and Ike Gorman, with a slow and steady pace, destroyed Douglas A-2's Dave Grossman and Dave Roggen, who resorted to a ketchup and syrup mix.

Newcomers from Whitman A-3, who had just finished a Sicilian pizza with extra cheese and pepperoni prior to the contest edged out the team from Mount B-3 by a score of 35-33 in the team competition. John Mullali and Larry Vediligo of Whitman topped Mike Merenstein and Fred Winter, despite Merenstein's secret of using a ketchup, butter and syrup concoction used to psych out the Whitman team. Merenstein was, however, disappointed that home fries were not served with the pancakes.

Strenuous Training

The winners of Wednesday night's competition returned to their respective halls, rested up and resumed their strenuous training routines. Excitement will once again commence at the Pancake Cottage tomorrow night, November 11, at 9 PM when Whitman, Irving and Dreiser compete in the finals of the King of the Hill Pancake Eating Contest. Winners will receive a grand prize of breakfast for their entire hall at Pancake Cottage.

Professor Studies Birth Defects

maternal age, like 37. These centers want Stony Brook to do AFP evaluations of their samples.

This program at Stony Brook receives samples from over 30 states in this country for this kind of testing. Over 7,000 samples from these centers were successfully diagnosed for open neural tube defects at a rate of one in 300. Stony Brook is the only center in the entire nation that has a program like this.

One thousand families were looked at that have a history of neural tube defects. Within that group, the risk of neural tube defects recurring is about two percent. Every one of these affected fetuses were detected. Out of the 1,000 mothers that were at a high risk of having a child with a neural tube defect, not one normal fetus was terminated.

In the future, more than 90 to 95 percent of the newborns with neural tube defects will be born to mothers that are not at risk, such as young girls in their first pregnancy or mothers that have one or two normal children. There will not be any history of neural tube defects in the family, and there will not be any reason for the family to seek prenatal diagnosis.

The only way that these fetuses can be diagnosed is through the screening method. In this case, the maternal serum AFP is measured; not the amniotic fluid AFP.

David Brock, of Edinborough, Scotland, found that if the fetus has an open neural tube defect, the blood of the mother will contain elevated levels of AFP. This finding led to the first mass screening program for neural tube defects using maternal serum AFP evaluation in the United States. This Stony Brook program has now evaluated over 20,000 pregnant women by screening for AFP.

This program is entirely voluntary. The mother must elect to have her blood screened for neural tube defects. At about the 15th week of pregnancy, the obstetrician will draw a tube of blood from the mother and will mail this tube to Stony Brook Hospital. At Stony Brook, the sample will be evaluated for serum AFP.

An elevated maternal serum AFP does not necessarily mean that the mother is carrying a child with a neural tube defect as compared to an elevated amniotic fluid AFP which means that the fetus most likely has a problem. This problem can be a neural tube defect or some other rare disorder.

If the sample is elevated for serum AFP then the obstetrician will send Stony Brook a second sample about a week later. The second sample could fall in the normal serum AFP range. In this case, the risk of the fetus having neural tube defects is low. However, if the second sample is still elevated, then Stony Brook will offer further clinical evaluation which begins with genetic counseling of the parents.

The next step is ultrasound performed by Baime. Ultrasound could detect if the mother is pregnant with more than one fetus. Multiple pregnancies give an elevated serum AFP. Stony Brook has detected over 100 multiple births and because of this there is now a normal distribution of serum AFP levels in multiple births.

If the serum AFP level is elevated in either single or multiple pregnancies, then there is a shift from the screening test to the diagnostic test, which is the test where the amniotic fluid is drawn.

Not Necessary

The Board of Directors of the Faculty Student Association (FSA) will, in the near future, decide whether to increase the cost of the meal plan $20 per semester. Some disagreement exists as to when, or if, an actual proposal will be made, but it is nonetheless important, since the Board is considering such a plan.

We believe that no increase is necessary. The fee charged is already exorbitant, and appears even more so because of poor facilities and the poor quality of food. It seems that these services should be provided at the current cost, not an additional one. The proposed improvements are not luxuries, they are things that should exist now for the amount we pay.

It is commendable that the FSA wishes to improve facilities that really do need improvement. But increasing the students' meal plan costs is not the way to do it.

Essential Service

The recent announcement that the Stony Brook Volunteer Ambulance Corps would be funded in part by the University is indeed a welcome one. Too often politics, stubbornness, and red tape get in the way of doing something constructive—and in this case, essential. We are pleased that SUNY Central has realized both the importance of this service, and its responsibility to make sure that it exists.

Finally, those who constantly voiced their support of the Corps should be thanked. The Polity Council, members of the Corps, and concerned administrators and students should breathe a sigh of relief knowing that their efforts were not wasted.

Correction

An article in Friday's Statesman incorrectly stated that the cost of using ballot boxes for a Polity election was $200. The actual cost is $2,000.

Inconsistency

To The Editor:

I was very offended to read that Elizabeth Wadsworth, vice-president for Student Affairs, overruled a decision made by the Irving College legislature to show an X-rated movie as a way to raise money for the college and to reimburse the residents who so generously had raised money to rebuild their end hall lounges.

Obviously, there was no doubt in the student representatives' minds that they want the movie since a motion to reconsider their original motion (to have the movie) was voted down. The Legislature chairman signed the Facility Use Form but the Residence Hall Director did not. This is an example of the implementation of the Facility Use Form to regulate the students' lives.

If the students of this campus cannot even make their own decisions to show a film in their buildings, then the Administration has no right to complain about the vandalism, drinking, etc. that occurs on campus. If we are old enough to know not to vandalize, then we most certainly are old enough to make our own decisions as far as what kind of fund raising we would like in our dorms.

Admittedly, there are some people against the showing of the film. They could well have had their sound reasonings; but if the College Legislature had decided they want the movie, they are the ones who represent the students. So if they had felt that they were not representing the majority of the residents, they would not have voted the way they had.

I feel it is about time for the Administration to work for the students, as they should, rather than against them. Wadsworth had no right to overrule the Legislature when a decision was made by students for students. I ask Wadsworth how come she did not stop the showing of other X-rated movies last year.

This is the kind of inconsistent bureaucratic decision-making that frustrates the students, thus causing a negative image for the entire Administration.

Report Card

To The Editor:

As a staff member who has been at Stony Brook for nearly nine years, I thought I would write to issue a sort of report card to our President, John Marburger.

A: President Marburger walks around a lot.

F: Last summer, President Marburger said that if changes were to be made, he would have to carry them out soon, before the honeymoon wanes. What changes?? The same old people are in the same old places and the system remains the same.

C: After all, we have a new highly-paid Vice-President for Communications.

• Student Life:

D: The place is as anti-intellectual as ever and the quality of life about as bad, although the President seems to be trying.

• Cultural Life:

D: For a school Stony Brook's size, the cultural life is pathetic. And I'm not talking about Frank Zappa.

VIEWPOINTS

Reagan and American Views Coincide

By Robert A. Cantillo

I was pleased to find Jon Esser's letter in the November 7 issue of Statesman. I realize that in printing a letter which includes such harsh criticism of the "popular" administration, your paper is openly accepting the burden of many follow-up letters on the same subject. These letters will doubtlessly include a few responsible essays both in support and in contradiction to the ideas expressed so articulately by Mr. Esser. I also anticipate that you will receive many reactionary letters composed in the absence of a true understanding of the subject at hand, by those who oppose not only the beliefs of Jon Esser, but also his very existence.

While I would like to congratulate Esser on perhaps the finest letter I have ever seen in your paper, I would like to contest one point he seemed to misstate. It is my contention that Ronald Reagan's election did not occur in the absence of adequate consideration to the major issues that face the American people, but that it was the result of a popular consensus of voters that had access to a wealth of information regarding exactly what he would do if elected.

Yes, Reagan was a participant in our perverted brand of media centered politics, but usually, success in such a popularity contest is solely dependent upon a campaign entirely different than Reagan's. Usually, positive results are based on a system in which each of the two principle candidates, after ruthlessly fighting to the top of his own party, proceeds to target his principle adversary and, of course, completely ignore the existence of any "third or fourth" party candidates. The object of the game is to convince the public that one's opponent is less capable than one's self for reasons that are based on fallacious logic and are cloaked in ambiguity. He avoids, at all cost, vital issues, but instead stresses issues upon which his opponent has made the careless mistake of taking a stand. This approach is successful despite the fact that these issues may be irrelevant or insignificant when compared with real issues. The "winner" is the candidate who is best at portraying a middle of the roader; one who can make everyone happy, while at the same time, convincing the public that his opponent is off in left field, despite the fact that their platforms are essentially identical.

Reagan did not use this well-used and time-tested formula. He has repeatedly come across as being blatantly to the right of the political spectrum. He has expressed his "conservative" wishes to increase military spending, and to cut "wasteful" spending in such areas as: housing, education, environmentalism, etc. He has consistently voiced his opposition to such movements as ERA, legalized abortion, safe energy, etc. He has in the last two weeks, set the civil rights movement back 10 years, and has continued to support the ridiculously wasteful MX Missile System. In short, he has given the American people every indication of what he would do if elected, and was elected anyway.

Reagan's election as the 40th President of the United States was no fluke, it was not due to any political ruse, nor can poor voter turnout be blamed (it was indeed remarkably high). The "mob" did not stuff the ballot boxes, he did not make use of an underhanded smear campaign, natural charisma, or stirring patriotic speeches: his politically risky right of center platform is what got him elected. This is fair indication that his views coincide with those of the majority of the American people (registered voters at least). He is in essence a true representative of the ideology of the American people, and we now share his responsibility.

I would like to conclude by saying that, if in a few short years, we are dissatisfied with an uncooperative administration which has allowed the economy to steadily worsen, while large corporations reap obscene profits, the lower classes swell and take on an even greater burden with less help from their government, and the United States becomes once more involved in the self-righteous policy of inflicting capitalism on second and third world nations, moves closer toward war, and allows our ecology to do down the tubes, we, as well as Reagan, are to blame.

Ambulance Corps Saves Lives

By Marc Teitelbaum and Ronnie Mason

In response to the viewpoint by Robert Patino, which appeared in the October 31 Statesman, we have several comments and suggestions.

It is too bad that so worthy a cause as citizen First Aid, which can certainly stand on its own merits, must be supported in such rhetorical and self-righteous terms. Instead of scolding the anti-war activists of ten years ago, Patino should have taken the time necessary to highlight a few simple facts:

Citizen First Aid and Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation (CPR) are proven lifesavers, and in many cases the victim is a relative or friend of the rescuer. This means that if you learn First Aid and CPR you may someday save the life of your parent, sibling, child or best friend. This fact makes learning these skills a most selfish and worthwhile endeavor, made easy by Patino and the Safety Services instructors.

If Patino had concentrated on the overwhelming benefits of his programs, he would not have found it necessary to misstate recorded facts about ambulance service in general, and the Stony Brook Volunteer Ambulance Corps (SBVAC) in particular. In doing so, Patino does all ambulance and rescue squad volunteers a great disservice.

Particularly, his suggestion that the SBVAC takes more than two to four minutes to arrive on the scene of any campus emergency call is untrue in essentially every case. He should also have noted, in all fairness, that any citizen rescuer in this county who might assist on the scene of a medical emergency before an ambulance arrives would have received their training through their local fire department or ambulance corps, and not through any organization primarily connected with the American Red Cross.

The campus ambulance corps has always maintained that Safety Services provides an important service, but one which is entirely different from the ambulance oriented training and certification programs of the SBVAC. Citizen first aiders have advantages as far as the crucial time element is concerned, but lack the experience, equipment, and reliability of ambulance service. To imply that the former is in any way superior to the latter is as ludicrous as arguing that Paramedic Units are more beneficial than doctors and a well staffed and equipped emergency room. There is no justification for even comparing the different links in the emergency care chain. Each has its own merits, and the disadvantages of each are obvious, and should at least be accurately stated.

Long before Patino arrived on campus, the SBVAC had earned a well deserved and secure niche in the Stony Brook emergency care scheme. It is worthy of praise without the reservations which are asserted in Patino's article by way of inaccuracy and ignorance.

Unless Patino can guarantee, as the ambulance corps does, to be on the scene within two to four minutes of a medical emergency, with experienced personnel, modern equipment, and the ability to transport the victim to a hospital, he should refrain from casting aspersions which place false and unfounded doubts in the minds of community members as to the efficiency and reliability of their campus ambulance corps. One sentence of stilted praise does not negate the derogatory tone of Patino's entire article.

If the reader is one of the vast majority of individuals who have not been trained in the lifesaving techniques of First Aid and Cardiopulmonary Resuscitation, they should do the following immediately, if they care about those with whom they spend their time:

First sign up for the excellent courses offered by Bob Patino and the Safety Services staff. In the meantime if you need help in a medical emergency, call your local ambulance service (6-2222 on campus), or the operator, then try to find someone who has already been trained, if you can reasonably do so.

Remember, First Aid and CPR do not actually save lives, but they definitely prolong them until paramedics and emergency room personnel can save them with definitive treatment, which cannot be provided by an unequipped layman. Even in these courses, students are taught to call for an ambulance as soon as possible, since in the most critical emergencies rapid transport and professional prehospital care remain essential.

If you wish to make an even greater commitment and receive more extensive training in emergency care, or are considering a career in prehospital emergency care, contact the Stony Brook Volunteer Ambulance Corps at 6-2285, and leave your name and phone number, or attend the general membership meeting held at the beginning of each semester.

(The writers are ex-safety officer and current president of the SBVAC, respectively.)

Stock Market Report

By Kenneth Van Camp

The present system of reporting stock market transactions has existed for well over half a century--and the time has arrived to change it. Newspapers regularly report stock changes in an irresponsible manner that can only be described as sensationalism. Worst of all, this method of reporting serves to create panic in the market.

One of the best examples can be found in the reporting of a stock decline last year. After stating the fall of the Dow Jones industrial index of 26.45 points, the Associated Press (AP) provided its historical perspective: "the record decline was 38.33 points on October 28, 1929, during the Great Crash that preceded the Depression." A glance at these figures would lead readers to believe last year's decline was of a magnitude comparable to 1929's; 26 points is not very far from the 38 point loss in the Great Crash. But what AP failed to report last year was the relative decline.

When the Dow made a record loss in 1929, it was coming down from a level of 298.97. The net loss on that day was about 13 percent. But last year's significant decline came from 884.04, and constituted only a three percent loss. The reason for the large difference is simple: inflation has driven up the Dow Jones index, and therefore changes in the market produce more sensational fluctuations.

This misleading method of reporting stock activity is not an exception to the rule, but is very common. In the same article, AP also reported the Dow Jones decline marked "its largest decline since it tumbled 26.99 points on January 9, 1974..." Once again, a different picture is seen if we examine relative declines. The 1974 loss they describe amounted to 3.13 percent, but on November 18 of the same year a loss of 3.50 percent was posted.

In this case my correction was not major. The modification to AP's opening statement that "the stock market took its steepest drop in more than five years" is small. But the problem is that these misleading statements are widespread and occur often.

The New York Times, a newspaper that prides itself on avoiding sensationalism, stated that last year's decline sent "the stock market to its heaviest loss in nearly six years." I noticed with some relief that The Wall Street Journal refrained from presenting any such historical background.

Inflation must be accounted for in reporting any business transactions--not just market activity. But it is especially important the media take steps to avoid sensationalism when dealing with a volatile subject like stock changes. Such is the stuff of which panics are made. (Continued from page 12)

His backhand shot slipped between the legs of the Maritime goalie at 17:57 of the first, and the period ended with the score 2-1.

The second period saw Maritime explode for three goals in the first eight minutes. They completely controlled the play during this time, keeping Kwass quite busy. Despite the fact that Kwass gave up seven goals, he could only be faulted on the fifth. After a soft shot from in front, he tried to clear the puck to the right boards. Unfortunately a Maritime player was standing in between Kwass and the boards. He intercepted the puck and shot it past Kwass.

Coach Rob Lamoureux blamed the Pats' poor second period on lack of manpower. "A lot of the guys had midterms, and we only had two full lines with three defensemen. Maritime had four lines and four sets of defensemen. By the second period, our guys were already too tired to keep up with their players, who were all well-rested," he said. The Patriots scored their second goal late in the period, and went to the locker room trailing 5-2.

If the Pats were going to get back in the game, they had to score early in the third period, and they did. The coach had them fired up and they were flying. Richie Katz got a pass from leftwinger Jeff Corbett, and he deflected it in for a power play goal just over two minutes into the period. The Pats continued to control play as Katz just missed a goal when he hit the right post on a hard shot from in close. Maritime picked up the puck, skated it into their zone, and scored their sixth goal, finally putting the game out of reach. Their final goal was just salt in the wound as they boosted their record to 3 and 0. The Pats are 0-1-1. Their next game is Tuesday at 3:30 PM at the Nassau Coliseum against Fairleigh Dickenson University, with whom they split last year.

WEATHER WATCH

Compiled by Meteorologists Bob Hassinger and Chris Grassotti (Courtesy of the Stony Brook Weather Observatory)

Summary:

A storm now located over northern New England is pulling much colder air into our region. As a result, an active northwesterly wind and below normal temperatures will be the rule in the Northeast at least into Wednesday. A ridge of high pressure building in from the west will ensure that this colder air remains relatively dry.

Meanwhile, mild and fair weather will characterize the middle third of the nation while, in the Rockies, a weak storm is taking shape and could threaten us later in the week.

Forecast:

Today: Partly sunny, windy and cold. Highs around 50, dropping into the 40's toward evening.

Tonight: Fair, windy and very cold. Lows 26-31.

Tuesday: Partly sunny, continued windy and cold. Highs 42-47.

Wednesday: Sunny, breezy, not quite as cold. High near 50.

Patriot Football Finally in Playoffs

By Raymond Stallone

The last time Stony Brook qualified for the post-season football playoffs, John Toll was the University President, Kent Witt was the club's all-American running back and Fred Kemp was the head football coach.

Toll moved on to the University of Maryland in 1978, Witt became the manager of The Mad Hatter in St. y Brook after graduating in 1978, and Kemp stayed on as the head coach of the Patriots. It's been five long years, but the Patriots have earned a return trip to the National Collegiate Football Association Playoffs (NCFA).

A 10-0 victory over Niagara University on Saturday boosted the Patriots' record to 6-1 and clinched a berth in the championship playoffs, which begin in New England next weekend. Stony Brook's initial trip to the post-season playoffs was in 1975, when an 8-1 squad lost to Westchester Community College, 28-8, in the national championship game at Hofstra Stadium.

"It certainly is a satisfying feeling knowing that we'll be playing for a shot at the title," Kemp said. "I've been coaching at Stony Brook for seven years and this year's team is the most talented and determined group I've ever had. We've won some games rather easily, but oftentimes, we have had to rally from adversity."

Once again, it was the playing conditions rather than the opponent, which hampered the Patriots in frigid Niagara. A rain-soaked field quickly turned into a 100-yard quagmire of mud during the first quarter, preventing any sustained offensive attack.

Fully aware that a tie could cost the Patriots to fade from the playoff picture, senior quarterback Jim McTigue opened up with a passing game in the second quarter. Throwing caution to the wind, McTigue unloaded a bomb from his own 18-yard line to tight end Dave Welch. Welch hauled in the pass at Niagara's 40, and sprinted to the end zone for a spectacular 82-yard touchdown play. Gus Baco, who added a 37-yard field goal in the third quarter, kicked the extra point following Welch's first touchdown score of the year.

"We really needed that score before halftime since the playing conditions were so poor and it's important to get on the board first when you're on the road," Kemp said. "Everyone knew there was no way our defense would give up a touchdown in the second half."

FRED KEMP

Limiting Niagara to a rushing output of minus four yards and a total net offense of 78 yards, the scarlet and white defense recorded its second shutout of the campaign. In eight regular season games, the Patriots have permitted an average of only nine points-per-game.

Forcing turnovers, a trademark of the Patriots' defense all season, helped maintain the Patriots' dominance over the Eagles. Two interceptions, one each by Steve O'Brien and Ron Zippo, and two fumble recoveries sealed the Eagles' fate.

Although the Patriots determined their own fate by securing a win, the fate of the nation's other top playoff contenders determined what the post-season matchups will look like.

The NCFA has placed the nation's top-rated football clubs in three playoff brackets. Since the Patriots are in the B bracket, they will draw a bye this weekend while Worcester (Mass.) State plays St. Leo's College. A victory by Worcester will set up a Stony Brook-Worcester semi-final contest on Nov. 22. In preliminary play-off action this weekend, Providence meets Stonehill in the A bracket and Massachusetts Institute of Technology squares off against Bentley in the C bracket. The national championship game will be played on Thanksgiving weekend in New England.

"I guess there are not too many people left on campus who remember the playoffs in '75," Kemp said. "I just hope this year's football team can capture the national championship to give us all something to remember them by."

THE STONY BROOK ICE HOCKEY TEAM in action.

Stony Brook Hockey Loses to Maritime

By Scott Whitney

Uniondale — The Patriots Hockey Team came up short Thursday against a strong Maritime College team. The Pats were out-worked, outshot and, as a result, out-scored 7-3.

It was a much rougher game than their first, a 3-3 tie with Rutgers, with plenty of hard checks throughout. Maritime's players were much bigger than Stony Brook's, so the Pats usually ended up sprawled on the ice.

Like their last game, the Patriots found themselves trailing early. This time it was 1:02 into the game when goalie Greg Kwas was beat from in close. Maritime added another goal on a power play at 7:59 into the first period. Kwas made three excellent saves in a row before Maritime finally lifted the puck over him as he lay on the ice.

The Patriots cut the lead in half when leftwing John Keigham scored on a breakaway.

Men's Cross Country Team Plagued by Injuries

By Lisa Napell

The Stony Brook Men's Cross Country team ran to 15th place Sunday afternoon at Van Cortland Park in the Bronx. There were 25 schools in the competition, many of which were "out of our league," according to Coach Gary Westerfield.

It seems that almost the entire team was out of it on Sunday. Phil Miranda, who has been the team's first runner in all season wasn't there. Without Miranda, there was a hole in the lineup, but Steve Rigby stepped quickly forward to fill it. Coming from behind, Rigby has been a fifth or sixth place man all season. However, Rigby took first place for the Patriots with a time of 28:39 for the five mile course, finishing 87th overall. "I finally talked him into running up to the level he's capable of," said Westerfield.

Second for Stony Brook was John Devitt who ran "slower than usual" according to Westerfield, due to a knee injury. Also slowed down was Ted Isoldi who "came down with something" on Saturday night. "He just ran because we were there and he had to," said Westerfield.

Mario Wilkowski took fourth place for the Patriots with a time of 29:41, almost 45 seconds faster than the last time he ran at Van Cortland Park, and the first time he has placed so high in the team standings, said Westerfield.

Ephram Kahn placed 116th overall and fifth for the Pats. "That's not good for him at all," said Westerfield, "he can run faster, but he had sore legs Sunday." Following Kahn was Larry Schiller with a time of 31:15, which is about two minutes off his usual time. "It was a bad day all around," Westerfield said.

Also finishing for the Patriots were Chris Sherman, Hank Verga and Rich Deveraux. In addition to the regular meet, there was a women's meet in which two Stony Brook women ran; Susan Liers-Westerfield took fifth overall with her best time in Van Cortland Park, 20:39 for 5,000 meters and Diahann Kelly who took 12th overall with a time of 21:44. Both women took home their first medals of the season.

In addition there was an alumni coach run. In the five-mile run senior Paul Cabbot, who was Patriot captain last year and has used up all of his cross country eligibility, took second place overall with a time of 17:17. He was followed by Paul Dudzick, coach of Stony Brook's women's cross country team, at 22:19, and the women's track coach, Kim Hovey, who came in at 24:50.

The Patriots' next meet will be their last. They will end the season with the National Collegiate Athletic Association's Division III regional championships in Albany. "We should do well," said Westerfield, "somewhere in the top eight teams."
