

Gala Inauguration Planned For John Marburger

By Laura Craven

John Marburger will officially become the third president of Stony Brook University on May 1 in a formal academic inauguration ceremony on the athletic fields.

The almost week-long ceremony is expected to bring about 5,000 people to the University in honor of Marburger, who became president last July 1. Holding the inauguration a year after Marburger became president is traditional, University Relations Director David Woods said, and is after Marburger has had a chance to become accustomed to Stony Brook.

"It's been 15 years since we've had an inauguration," Woods said. "It's something we hope everyone will come and enjoy."

Among the more than 70,000 people invited to the gala are all students, faculty, staff, parents and alumni, as well as some community residents. Most colleges in the State have received invitations for representatives, James Black, vice-president for University Affairs said, as well as some foreign colleges. According to Woods, Long Island political leaders have also been invited.

Prior to the inauguration, a community reception will be held April 29 at the Victoria House on Route 25A in East Setauket. On the following day, a faculty reception will be held for Marburger and his wife, Carol.

According to Jim Black, May 1 was chosen as the day for the inauguration because weather researchers have said that in the past 20 years it has rained only twice.

According to Black, academic robes will be worn at the inauguration, a color guard will be assembled, and SUNY Chancellor Clifton Wharton will be here and will inaugurate Marburger. R. Christian Anderson, Stony Brook Council president, will be the master of ceremonies.

Greetings will be made by Anderson welcoming Marburger to the State, county and town. Welcoming Marburger to the University will be greetings from the Alumni Association, the SUSB Senate, the Graduate Student Organization, and Polity, the undergraduate

Memorial Service Held For Ronald Siegel

By Nancy J. Hyman

About 200 people attended a memorial service Saturday for Ronald Siegel, assistant to the vice-president for Finance and Business, who died Wednesday of a heart attack.

The service, which was held in the recital hall of the Fine Arts Center, began with a pianist and was followed by Siegel's poetry read by his daughter, Martha. Following the poetry reading was an address made by T. Alexander Pond, physics professor and former University president.

"We are a young university," Pond said, "inexperienced at loss." He cited Siegel's "unflagging devotion" and "remarkable insight," in regard to Stony Brook and its needs. Pond told the group of family, friends, administrators and students, "He left respect and affection for himself wherever he went," adding, "his devotion to the cause he served enlightened each of us."

Passages from the Bible were recited by the Reverend Walter Rice. The Jewish prayer of mourning, the Kaddish, was recited by Fred Levine, a psychology professor, who remembered that Siegel often shook his finger at him and said, "Levine, you're going to say KADDISH at my funeral."

The memorial service ended with the playing of "Amazing Grace" by a bagpiper in full dress who also performed at a reception in the Administration Building David Woods, director of University R Relations, later said that Siegel, "had a particular fondness for bagpipes."

College Board Provided Race List

Princeton, N.J. (CPS)—The College Entrance Examination Board (CEEB) has provided at least 11 colleges with requested lists of only black or only white high school students, which the colleges then used in their own recruiting programs during the 1979-80 academic year.

Jan Harvey, head of the Student Search Survey, the College Board's Princeton subsidiary that actually sold the lists, says the computer match-ups of colleges and the kinds of students they want is "looked on as a service, not discrimination."

She added that requests for lists of students of one race or another are not uncommon. "Usually," she said, "it's because they offer special minority scholarships or curriculum, and they want to reach the right market."

Harvey could offer no explanation of why a college might want a list of exclusively-Caucasian students, but emphasized the College Board does not ask for reasons.

The lists of students are compiled from people who take any of the College Board's many exams—the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) and other entrance exams for graduate, medical and law schools. Student characteristics are gleaned from the Student Descriptive Questionnaire filled out when the student registers for one of the tests, according to Julia Galuska of the College Board's Education Testing Service (ETS).

Galuska stressed that registrants can choose to simply ignore the questionnaire, or just answer some of its questions.

The questionnaire asks students to identify their high school grade points, how much money they expect their parents to contribute to their college costs, what they intend to major in, and personal traits like gender and race.

The College Board, through its Student Search Survey subsidiary, then sells the information in list form to College Board member institutions and government-sponsored scholarship programs for 12 cents per name.

In breaking the story of the race listing in its February 18 issue, the newspaper In These Times charges the lists enable colleges to "overlook minority students and concentrate on white only."

Harvey disagreed, stating that the system works "very much to the students' advantage" because it helps them learn of available programs and scholarships.

The lists, moreover, have drawn charges that the College Board engages in a different type of discrimination altogether.

Space Shuttle Doing Well

Cape Canaveral, Florida—Astronauts Robert Young and Robert Crippen turned on the television camera inside the space shuttle yesterday afternoon and told America how great their craft is performing.

Young said, "The vehicle is performing just like a champ... better than anyone expected on the first flight." Crippen, the rookie on the voyage, added that the shuttle "Worked as advertised." He said, "I think we got something that's really going to mean something to the country and the world."

Crippen also paid tribute to the two men who died after a recent countdown dress rehearsal at Cape Canaveral. And Young paid respect to Olin Teague, the former Chairman of the House Space Committee, who died earlier this year.

During the TV transmission, 9½ hours into the mission, Young played the part of the veteran happy to be back in space, saying "It's delightful up here in zero gravity." Crippen said he "Had a thrill from the moment of lift-off."

So far, everything is running smoothly in America's first manned flight since 1975. Only one problem has arisen. A few tiles—designed to protect the craft from heat when it re-enters the Earth's atmosphere—have fallen off the upper sides of the shuttle. NASA officials say that's minor, because the tiles aren't in a crucial area. But tracking stations are now checking to see if critical tiles may have also fallen off the underside of the shuttle—which will take most of the heat on re-entry.

As the shuttle astronauts continue their pioneering flight, the solid fuel boosters that helped put them into orbit are being towed back to Cape Canaveral. They were recovered for use on future shuttle missions and should arrive back at the cape today.

Tel Aviv—Prime Minister Menachem Begin said Israel would support an expanded UN peacekeeping role in Lebanon, but would continue its raids on Palestinian guerrilla bases in the South.

The expanded role for the United Nations troops was suggested by Secretary of State Alexander Haig, who returned from his Mideast trip Saturday night.

Vatican City—Pope John Paul, in an open air mass for Palm Sunday, prayed for peace in Lebanon yesterday. He seemed thin and is reported to be fasting during lent. Some 30,000 people stood under a hot sun beating in St. Peter's Square, as the Pontiff celebrated the mass.

Palm Sunday marks Jesus' arrival in Jerusalem on the Sunday before His death. The Pope said Jesus rode into Jerusalem on a donkey to demonstrate His humility. And he prayed that a shaky cease fire in Lebanon would last.

Syrian troops have battled right wing Christian

London—New clashes erupted yesterday between blacks and police in South London. A police spokesman reports this new violence in the black neighborhood of Brixton, scene of six hours of violence Saturday night.

The police spokesman said that "A large number" of young blacks are "attacking police with anything they can get their hands on." He said some officers have been injured, and arrests are being made. He termed yesterday's new clashes "very violent."

Earlier, more than 1,000 police were sent into Brixton to restore calm. British Home Secretary William Whitelaw toured Brixton yesterday and was jeered by young blacks. He expressed "extreme distress and horror" at Saturday night's destruction.

The Chairman of the House Budget Committee said Congress should enact a multi year tax cut only after federal spending is cut. Congressman James Jones said, otherwise, the budget is too susceptible to large deficits. Jones' committee has already rejected Reagan's three year tax cut plan in favor of a one year reduction. Brady was wounded in the brain during the assassination attempt. He was described yesterday as being "brighter," and is able to initiate conversations—instead of just answering doctors' questions.

Goldin said the Board's financial status reports for November and December 1980 "Indicate the board is controlling adequately its rate of expenditures in relation to its fiscal year 1981 appropriations."

The reports also have incorporated most of the financial management control suggested by the Comptroller and Mayor Edward Koch late last year.

Women's Issues Discussed at NYPIRG Forum

By Matthew Lebowitz and Robert Lieberman

The New York Public Interest Research Group (NYPIRG) sponsored a forum called "Days of Women" last week that dealt with issues such as women in politics, abortion, women in the job market and rape prevention.

The forum consisted of seven workshops ranging from "Women in Politics" to "The Discussion and Demonstration of a Gynecological Exam" and included former New York State Senator Karen Burstein among the speakers.

Burstein lectured on "Women in Politics" and the workshop discussed the subordinate position women in America have been forced to assume. In her closing statement Burstein expressed the hope that someday soon we will not have to talk about women in politics, but, instead, people in politics. "Days of Women" was an attempt to elevate the social consciousness of women's issues," said NYPIRG's Stony Brook Chairman Blair Horner, "when the very nature of the women's movement is in a state of flux."

Judy Wishnia, associate professor of Psychology, gave the workshop entitled "Ghettoization of Women in the Job Market," and said that women's salaries as compared with men's actually differ more today than in the 1930's. According to Wishnia, women now make only 57 cents per men's dollar as compared to the 1930's when women made 62 cents per men's dollar.

Phyllis Graham of the Long Island Commission for Life was verbally accosted by members of the campus Womyn's Center and other womens groups from the area when speaking against abortion. The pro-choice advocates came carrying signs ranging from "Pro-lifers can afford children," to "Pro-life=Moral Majority=Racism=Sexism-The Klan=Nazis=Oppression" and "My body is not State Property."

Graham spoke against abortion and said that an unborn child is a human being and spoke about dangers of various methods of abortion, as well as legal implications of abortions and murder.

One member of the Womyn's Center said "For every statistic she [Graham] notes in her manipulative speech, another could be found refuting what she said. It's a split issue, people just choose which statistics they prefer."

Mount College Rings Wedding Bells

By Lisa Castignoli

Mount College presented its mock wedding on Saturday. The pregnant bride, Lisa Simkin, and the groom, Patrick Fratellone, pledged their own special wedding vows to each other in the presence of Mount residents and friends. The service was performed by a priest with a broken Italian Brooklyn accent and a rabbi who seemed to have stepped out of the movie "Fiddler on the Roof."

The roles of the priest and the rabbi were splendidly acted out by Mount resident Glen Held. The Italian and Jewish stereotypes were played to the hilt, causing the room to fill with laughter. The mother of the bride was atypical, lamenting the loss of her daughter. The exchanging of rings was accompanied by the usual chaos, with the best man misplacing the ring and frantically searching for it. After recovering the wedding band, Fratellone, the stereotypically nervous groom, slipped it on the wrong finger. Once again, laughter rang out from the wedding party and spectators.

After the service, the happy couple stepped into Fratellone's sun-roofed car in which the couple sped around campus, escorted by the Department of Public Safety; toilet paper trailing in the wind along with an "Almost Just Married" sign.

The reception was held in the Roth Dining Hall which had been transformed into a wedding hall with the use of bright crepe paper, flowers, butterflies and other decorations that exemplified spring. Invitations were sent to friends from other buildings, requesting the honor of their presence provided that they brought food enough to feed themselves.

Lisa's song to her father, "Sunrise, Sunset" was mysteriously changed to "I'm a Big Girl Now" which had a disco beat, causing the couple to create a new disco-box dance step. The way the bride and the father tried to compensate for the change in themes made the situation even more humorous. Cases of champagne and soda, kegs of beer and Sangria were also provided.

Mount College used the money the legislature had allotted to their building for activities to pay for the expense of this wedding. Nothing was missing from this gala event. There were flowers, wedding bands, invitations, a bachelor party, and a bachelorette party, complete with a sensual male stripper.

Mount College provided two days of entertainment for all those who attended.

CRIME ROUND-UP

Foul-Ups at the Fest

An eight foot by 10 foot window was broken on the west side of Tabler Cafeteria at about 1 AM Saturday after Springfest.

While no one was arrested, a six foot white male was seen fleeing the area by Campus Security officers James Farrell and Winston Kerr.

According to Farrell, "The man pointed at Detective Kerr and accused him of breaking the window." Nearby students then proceeded to apprehend Kerr, added Farrell. Consequently the suspect was not captured.

Although no one actually saw the man break the window he is the prime suspect in the case.

Farrell said that he has no animosity toward the student who mistakenly apprehended Kerr because "they were only trying to capture the person they thought committed the crime."

Non-Students Arrested

Two male non-students were arrested in Tabler parking lot and charged with possession of burglars tools, attempted petit larceny and loitering, Saturday at 2 AM after Springfest.

Thomas Golden and Steven Rand were apprehended while in the act of breaking into a GM Firebird. The perpetrators had in their possession a wire hanger fashioned to break into a car, screwdrivers, and wrenches. In addition, Golden was armed with a knife.

The two were previously arrested for siphoning gas on campus about a year ago.

Asian Students Hold Annual China Weekend

CHINESE DRESSESS modeled at China Weekend.

By Reza Sigari

The annual China Weekend, hosted by the Asian Students Association, held Saturday and Sunday, was hailed as a great success.

The program consisted of two parts: a cultural show in the Stony Brook Union lounge, and performance in the Union auditorium.

One of the highlights of the program was a play which depicted student life at Stony Brook.

Other highlights were a play portraying the story of the monkey king, a King Fu exhibition, a choir performance, and a dance exhibition.

The cultural part of the program included a cooking demonstration, a stamp exhibit, origami paper folding, and a demonstration of the art of picking up marbles with chopsticks.

SB Approved To Run Drinking Driver Program

The New York State Department of Motor Vehicles has again approved Stony Brook as the Suffolk County site for its state-wide Drinking Driver Program. This is an educational program offered for drivers who have been convicted of driving while intoxicated. These drivers may choose participation in this program as an alternate to having their license revoked for six months.

Stony Brook has been running the Drinking Driving Program in Suffolk County since 1975. Some 8800 Suffolk drivers have participated in the program since then.

Drivers convicted of driving while intoxicated are given incentives to participate in this program. In addition to avoiding the revocation of their licenses, registration and attendance allows them conditional driving privileges. They are granted the right to drive to work, to the program locations and to include three hours of pleasure driving per week.

Once enrolled, drivers must attend program sessions once a week for seven weeks, for a total of 16 hours. Each session consists of films, lectures, group discussions and assignments, all designed to help increase the driver's awareness of problems related to drinking and driving. Classes are held in the Social and Behavioral Sciences Building on campus, and also at the Riverhead County Center and Southside Hospital in Bayshore.

The Director of the Drink Driving Program is Hope Dipko, assistant director of Stony Brook's Center for Continuing Education. For further information, Dipko may be reached at 246-5938.

A pick-up truck overheated and caught fire, in the parking lot across from Ammann College, Saturday at 5:53 PM.

According to Christine Smith, a passenger in the truck, "there was lots of smoke and a little bit of flames."

"It was an accidental fire, possibly the gas leaked and the manifold ignited," said Stony Brook Fire Marshal, William Finamore.

A unit from the Setauket fire department, and Public Safety officers were on the scene. Difficulties in getting the hood open were cited.

Setauket First Assistant Fire Chief Richard Doran said, "We had a bit of difficulty with the hood and locking mechanism." After the hood was opened, it took about 20 minutes to out the fire.

Serious Scrutinizing

Two recent Statesman articles about members of Public Safety being arrested are of concern to us, and should be to members of the community as well.

Public Safety Officer Michael Tiemeyer was arrested in January for violation of probation, criminal impersonation and traffic violations.

On March 25, Officer George Wolynski was arrested, allegedly for sexually abusing a University Hospital employee.

The two incidents are unrelated, and we believe they do not represent public safety officers in general, but they do make apparent the need for a stricter means of selecting individuals whose jobs are to protect us.

Perhaps it is no coincidence that two public safety officers have been arrested and fired this year, and a third dismissed after making a racial remark against a black officer, in light of a statement by University Business Manager Paul Madonna. Madonna, who ran Public Safety this semester until last week, and whose job it still is to oversee the department, said that "We do not do criminal screening under our own auspices. We only do a normal interview and reference screening check."

Well, an interview and reference screening are fine for an employee who is not given the authority to protect people and keep peace. Perhaps a more serious scrutinizing is in order.

Keep in mind that this suggestion is not without cause or merit and does not deal with hypothetical situations. The fact is that two public safety officers were arrested within two months, the latter for a shocking act. It may now be time to do something about it. Time consuming? Yes. Expensive? Yes. Burdensome? Again, yes. But look at the option.

LETTERS

Staying to Fight

To the Editor:

In the April 6 issue of Statesman, Marty Falk wrote a letter ("Disgusting and Disgraceful") complaining about a rally of communists which, he said, "reached a new all-time low on Wednesday when the speaker showed his ecstatic joy over the attempted assassination of President Ronald Reagan." His letter contains a number of distortions and omissions.

The communists he speaks of are members of the Progressive Labor party (PLP), the group which puts out the newspaper Challenge/Desafic. It's true we expressed our pleasure at hearing that Bonzo's friend almost had his just rewards. In fact, most people we've spoken to have also said the same. Very, very few people have expressed sadness at hearing the United States' number one fascist had his lungs scratched. We certainly did not say, as Falk claims, "Hinckley's a hero." Hinckley's a sickie—so crazy even the Nazi Party threw him out. We did say that in order to destroy this system and its racism, unemployment, and imperialist wars, mass violence must be used. That's mass violence, not terrorism. Shooting Reagan will not change conditions; there are more capitalists waiting to take his place (witness Bush and Haig foaming at the mouth at the thought of more power). To change conditions, power must be taken out of their hands (which includes killing many, if not most, of the capitalists and their hard-core supporters) and put in the hands of a politically revolutionary working class. This is what the PLP works toward—organizing for revolutionary ideas among workers and students, all the while struggling against the various manifestations of capitalism (such as on March 21 when we and our friends in InCAR led hundreds in kicking the KKK out of Meriden, Conn.).

Falk also distorted our view on Russia. Russia is not a communist country; it is a state capitalist country. Trying to badmouth PLP by saying go back to Russia, just won't wash. People who read our newspaper and/or are marching with us on the revolutionary holiday May Day (May 2 in Washington D.C.) know differently.

So, Marty, as you are "astonished [at how] Stony Brook seems to turn out communists," you really shouldn't be shocked. Communists are simply people who see and have decided to fight the fact that racism, sexism, imperialist war and unemployment are all caused by the capitalist system. We don't want to "pack it up" and move to whatever country you'd like to see us move to. We're staying here to fight. I suggest you do the same.

Jerry Schechter
Progressive Labor Party

Sesame Street

To the Editor:

So Marty Falk thinks radical dissent at Stony Brook is "disgusting and disgraceful" and "should not be tolerated." It reminds me of the Russian attitude. Just like General Haig, who refused to extend the visa at Georgi Arbatov by a few days, thus banning him from a debate against Senator Nunn on Bill Moyer's show. Haig said "but the Russians don't let Americans on their T.V." I thought America was supposed to be different.

Stony Brook breeds Communists like Harvard breeds lawyers, does it? I would say political vegetables, with a fair sprinkling of neo-stalinists like Falk. At London University, where I have spent several years, the political policies and actions of the Student Union are decided democratically at a weekly mass meeting. Here, Polity is about as political as Sesame Street.

Where's all this democracy we're supposed to be defending? Where is the public debate on U.S. policy in El Salvador? It's left to a handful of people on the campus who are actively committed to democracy to raise the issue, people who are then condemned by some for being "against freedom." I advise all of you who still have an open mind to come to the El Salvador Teach-In, on April 22 in the Stony Brook Union Lounge. Find out who you might shortly be called upon to fight and why, if we follow the path of Haig and Falk.

Accept Variety

To the Editor:

I am a member of the homosexual community in this society, on this campus. I am appalled at the tone of the first two of three articles on "Gay Life at Stony Brook" in last week's Statesman. I happen to know that the writer is not gay and, more importantly, these eyes have an extremely poor perspective of the subject.

It is a fact that this person did not attend any of the Gay Fest activities although they were open to all, straight or gay. Why wasn't the emphasis put on the array of talent, speakers and seminars which were the most extensive ever assembled on Long Island, if not the entire state. Perhaps it slipped her mind (if she cared to ask) that dozens of people worked many hours (during mid-term week) to put Gay Fest together. If the writer had taken a little time and shown up, she would have seen how successful it was and perhaps not devoted the first half of the article to its few non-successes; inaccurately if I may add. There were more mistakes in her article than in Gay Fest.

I was angered by the first segment. I am enraged by the second. We who choose to belong to the Gay Student Union (GSU) are part of a large, thriving organization who average between 30 and 40 people most every week at our meetings. We get hundreds of different people in our office throughout the semester for companionship, conversation or counseling referral not to mention many hundreds of phone calls. Does this sound like "The small, the invisible, the few... GSU?" Get real. The only penalty I've had from being gay on this campus is reading your bullshit. How can we expect understanding when people like you are telling equally naive people about "... the high price of admission," and "... the (severe) penalties for joining this club..." The only thing people have to give up to be part of GSU is loneliness and the only penalty from it is freedom. Accept Variety.

Personal Freedom?

By Skip Spitzer

Personal freedom for the people in this country can be defined as our ability to do as we feel in light of our constitutional rights and legal constraints; it is our capacity to do what we truly want, as opposed to what others make us want. Yet everyday we are denied a part of this freedom: we are prompted to consume bread with dangerous preservatives such as monosodium glutamate, BHA, BHT and nordihydroguaiaretic acid with beguiling advertisements; we tend to accept nuclear energy because Con Edison assures us that it is the only way to beat the high prices of the OPEC nations; we want Revlon's products but haven't been told that thousands of rabbit's eyes have been slowly burned away in order to test them — perhaps we would be too disgusted to want them if we knew; etc. etc. etc. There are a myriad of examples.

But it is not so much a question of whether or not preservatives are bad, nuclear energy is the only way or rabbits are worth saving, as it is a question of our manipulation when trying to make rational decisions on such issues.

Similarly, a crucial portion of our personal freedom is eliminated by North American politics: platforms tend to include a lot of promises that never are fulfilled; votes are largely influenced by massive amounts of money devoted to advertising — advertising that primarily tries to maneuver opinion and only secondarily tries to educate; actors use their skills to come across well in debates regardless of their actual qualifications; etc.

But most important is the role of the United States Government itself in influencing our personal freedom. During the draft of the Vietnam era, the government told eligible young men that the army would give them a skill and that the country would be proud of them. More than 50,000 deaths later, however, many of the returnees felt that the military establishment didn't give a damn about them, the country wanted desperately to forget them, and they had been made suckers by the lies of the government. The government took our personal freedom and gave our draftees cancer, unemployment, drug addiction, psychiatric problems, and birth defects.

During the Watergate days, President Richard Nixon told us that he was fundamental and hear opposing ones — innocent.

Today we are told that military aid to El Salvador is a good thing. A recent letter from Senator Alfonse D'Amato states that "assistance to El Salvador protects the interests of the U.S. . . . and aids the government in maintaining civil order while counterbalancing Soviet and Cuban-inspired subversion." If the "interests of the U.S." are preventing a chain of revolutions throughout Central America — liberation for the oppressed (remember the American revolution?) — in order to protect U.S. big business investments, and trying to demonstrate world imperial superiority, both at the expense of justice, freedom, human rights, equity, etc., then he has a point. If the viability of our economy and "diplomatic macho" presuppose repression abroad, perhaps we should take a critical look at the systems responsible for it. If it doesn't, then we should bring the repression home or do away with it altogether. If "civil order" means economic conditions which condemn the majority of the people to poverty, military conditions that aim to passify the majority of the people with terror, and political conditions that render the majority of the people without voice, again he has a point. And as for subversion, it comes from the self-determination of the people. Nothing sets the grounds for Soviet and Cuban involvement more than American support for the junta; millions in military aid and military "advisors" leave the Salvadoreans with no other choice.

But again, it is not so much a question of whether we should have been in Vietnam or should support the junta (indeed, my arguments have not been completed), as it is a question of our manipulation. There are many ways of seeing an issue. And we have learned in the past that our government not only has a narrow perspective, but also sometimes elects a policy of disinformation. Our level of personal freedom is dangerously low. Before you sit down and watch you tax dollars flow — from food stamps, educational grants and loans, and other social services — to the military, stand up and take a closer look. Don't accept what the government, The New York Times, or I, tell you, but rather, gain some personal freedom and check it out.

On May 3, there will be a rally at the Pentagon in protest of U.S. intervention in El Salvador, racism, "Reaganomics" and the draft. If you would like to put an end to these practices, come and make a statement — help others gain personal freedom. If your views are not in accord, be fundamental and hear opposing ones — you might find that you are misinformed. If you have no opinion, find one. Don't be manipulated — strive towards total personal freedom. How can anyone live within a true democracy without it?

April Fools Issue Was No Joke

By Frank Jackson

In regard to the Statesman April Fools Day issue, while I commend Statesman for trying a little variety, if humor was the goal of that issue, then there really was no need for Statesman to go through the trouble of putting together a separate issue — any regular Statesman issue would have met the same goal, with less trouble. I mean, come on, you have to admit, misspelled words and names, wrong quotations, and the inadequate presentation of the facts, are not just confined to the Statesman April Fools Day edition — they are liberally sprinkled throughout every issue of Statesman.

I like a good joke, probably more than the next man, which is why I am a regular Statesman reader. Thus, if humor was the intent of the article regarding myself and Julio Brea there would be no problem. However, humor was not the intent of that article. Under the guise of wit and satire, two talents that really don't exist in the meager and shallow pool of Statesman talent, an article was written founded on misconceptions. I think it was a malicious act, with public discreditation the goal — not humor — a fact that should have been clear to almost all who read the article. Granted, as one who has chosen to place himself in the public arena I must, and have, taken the bad with the good. But enough is enough. I feel that Statesman has deliberately slandered my name by putting forth untrue and/or distorted allegations and I have sat in silence long enough. My only real problem has been my consistent advocacy of views, and/or groups that don't sit well with the Statesman Editors. For example, I have advocated decreased funding for Statesman, and using those excess funds to increase the budgets of other struggling quality publications such as The Shining Star, Black World and the Stony Brook Press, with the latter hopefully becoming a triweekly.

You would think that Statesman would support this plan. "Let each become aware" is their motto, and what better way for this notion to take a giant step forward from its current low position on campus than with the presence of a number of equally viable publications?

I will accept an apology for Statesman's neurasthenic fixation with me.

However, from this, and other incidents, I do not feel, in a view that is shared by many, that Statesman is not an impartial news gathering source for the campus. Thus, another publication should be given the Student Activity fee monies allocated to Statesman to perform that function. To this end I urge all to lobby in the Polity Senate.

Further, to all who have been through the Statesman grind, join myself and others who will be testifying before the Polity Senate. It must be made clear to the campus that what Statesman does is not journalism. Malicious public discreditation, and character assassination cannot be carried out in the name of "news" or "news based humor."

On the other hand however, as I really think about it, I may be getting myself and others all revved up for nothing. I happen to be one of the few people who actually read Statesman's "news stories" somewhat seriously, most only read the ad's and personals, clip out the coupons then just throw the "rag" away. (The writer is a senior political science major.)

WEATHER WATCH

Compiled by Meteorologists
Chris Grassotti and Bob Hassinger
(Courtesy of the Stony Brook Weather Observatory)

Summary:

A strong high pressure system centered over northern New England will keep up in a cool, moist flow off the Atlantic for the next 24 hours.

This flow will begin to weaken with the approach of a potent frontal system now pushing through the Midwest. As this front moves through the area later tomorrow we can expect some significant rainfall. Wednesday promises to be unseasonably cold; rounding out a three-day period of less than ideal weather.

Forecast:

Today: A mixture of clouds and sun. Breezy and cool with the chance of a shower. Highs 53 to 58.

Tonight: Becoming mostly cloudy. Breezy and damp overnight. Lows 43 to 48.

Tuesday: Cloudy with rain developing. Rain could be heavy at times and a few thunderstorms are also possible. Highs around 60.

Wednesday: Clearing, windy and much colder. Highs in the low to mid 40s.

Presidential Inauguration

student government. Included in the ceremony, Black said, will be the traditional processional where University faculty members, students and visitors will march into seats. Following the Procession, the National Anthem will be played and then an Invocation and a benediction given by Rabbi Waxman from the Stony Brook area. Black said that community input in the inauguration is very important.

Following Marburger's inauguration by Wharton, Marburger will make an inaugural speech. A recessional will then follow. A reception will then be held in the Fine Arts Plaza for all marchers and wine and cookies will be served. On Sunday, International Students and host families will be having something to welcome the Marburgers, according to Black, but Black was not sure of what exactly they were going to be doing yet.

Lacrosse Team Plays An All Around Game

By Steve Weinstein

With a total team effort, the Stony Brook lacrosse club pelted the Merchant Marine Academy, 14-6, on Friday to up its record to 5-3.

Once again, the duo of Terry Russel and Steve Pollack caused havoc for their opponents. Pollack had three goals and three assists while Russel added two goals and two assists. Don Kane, who played his best game of the season, scored three goals. Bob Fagan also tallied two goals for the Patriots.

Goalie Pete Saros played another good game as Ivor Blossfeld and Glenn Gillen kept the defense strong throughout the match. Midfielder Dave Bagno won six of seven face-offs in key situations.

The Patriots have now reeled off four consecutive wins and are anxiously looking forward to their last two games of the season against Queens College and St. John's University.

"This team has really come together," stated attacker Pollack. "St. John's is a Division II school and we want to prove to them and to ourselves that they can be beaten!"

"I'm thrilled about the way the guys have been playing," exclaimed coach John Ziegler. "Our new offense is designed to spread out the scoring among different players. For example, Jim Bianco and Don Kane scored their first hat tricks of the season. We cut down considerably on our penalties and just played a good all-around game."

Softball Wins One, Loses One

By Gwen Kissel

"We didn't play spectacularly, but we still had a great time," exclaimed Detra Sarris as the Patriots returned from their road trip. After travelling for almost five hours on Thursday, the Women's Softball team arrived at Binghamton only to find that their game had been rained out. Hoping to improve on their 0-4 record, the team then travelled to Oswego and Utica, where they rallied each in a double header. Facing SUNY Utica Tech for the first time last Friday, the Patriots slammed in the runs for an overwhelming 25-10 victory. The Patriots broke out early, scoring at least one run every inning. While Stony Brook rallied for eight runs in the sixth inning, Utica was far from catching up. "We really killed them," said team member Ellen Arocho, who contributed one home run and three base hits to the score. Ann Champney, Mary Ann Partridge and Michelle Scott hit one home run each, and Carol Tompkins' 12 RBI's also helped boost Stony Brook out in front.

However, their second game that day proved to be more of a battle, as the Patriots fell behind 12-3 to Oswego. Struggling from behind throughout the game, the Patriots did not give up. Batting two for three was Stony Brook's right fielder, Lori Leftoff. She alone was not enough to catch up to the Oswego team.

A little hesitant, but determined to fight, the Patriots again faced Oswego last Saturday. The only run of the game was a double in the sixth by Sarris. Stony Brook was again defeated, this time by a score of 8-1. "The game was a real good game. We were right with them up until the sixth inning. Oswego just scored three runs in the sixth and added three more in the seventh to win," said Patriot Coach Judy Christ.

The Patriots 21-3 victory over Utica in the second game on Saturday, gave Stony Brook an overall record of 2-6 for the season.

According to Christ, "Oswego's biggest advantage was their hitting. They hit and we couldn't get a lot of hits in a row. We're not doing as well as we expected to before the start of the season," she added, "but we're improving in each game and we'll do okay."

"We played much better as a whole, we just had a couple of tough breaks," said Arocho. Captain Barbara Bischoff summed up the weekend adding, "we won two and lost two to a good team, but we played well. It was a very long trip."

Stony Brook hosts St. John's tomorrow at 4 PM.

Heavyweight Champ Joe Louis Dead at 66

Las Vegas, Nevada (AP)—Former heavyweight champion Joe Louis, "The Brown Bomber," died yesterday of cardiac arrest. He was 66.

Louis was only 23 when he reached the top of the boxing world by knocking out heavyweight champion James J. Braddock in the eighth round in Chicago in 1937.

His boxing career spanned 17 years—almost four of which he spent in the army during World War II. He hung up his gloves for good in 1951 after an unsuccessful comeback attempt against Rocky Marciano. In all, Louis won 68 of his 71 professional fights—54 of them by knockouts.

Louis earned nearly $5 million during his career but he had little to show for it when he quit. As a result, he was in constant difficulty with the government on income taxes.

In recent years his difficulties were physical. He suffered a stroke in 1970 and was confined to a wheelchair.
