State Budget:

Tuition Hike Nixed; Fees Added

Combined News Services

Albany—Although the proposed $200 per year tuition increase was nixed in the 1984-85 state budget passed by the legislature late Saturday night, the revised budget calls for several new fees not covered by financial aid awards.

In a surprise move, both houses of the legislature agreed that, because the tuition increase was staved off, the funds would have to be met—for the state university system to keep its current level of operations—by almost $300 per year in additional fees.

Jim Tierney, president of the Students Association of the State University (SASU), a student lobby group, described his reaction as "shocked. I really thought we had this thing won, but they have turned against us once again."

Senate Majority Leader Warren Anderson (R—Binghamton), in a press conference yesterday, described the many fees and what the funds would be paying for. "The state university students must now realize that the free ride stops here. There are necessary costs in operating a 64-campus university and someone has to pay for them," he said, to heckles from some 26 Stony Brooks who had been lobbying in Albany for weeks now. Anderson said the following fees would be instituted starting in the fall semester:

- Dormitory Damage Fee—To pay for the vandalism incurred in the dorm buildings, all students would be required to pay $56 per semester, unless they are able to pin $56 worth of damage on a fellow student whom they would have to prove caused the damage.

- Toilet Use Fee—Residential and commuting students would be charged $39 per semester for use and abuse of the university public toilet systems. This charge would pay for toilet cleansing, the Tidy-Bowl man's boat, and lunch for the cleaning staff.

- Space Usage Fee—A $23 fee determined by a formula taking into account the square footage per average classroom per number of average classes attended and just sat in by state university students.

- Flatulence Fee—$15 per semester ($25 if you eat a lot of cabbage; $50 if you are on the meal plan) which would pay for the collection and recycling of methane gas produced in the human alimentary canal during digestion.

- Mucus Dispersal Fee—Based on size and resemblance to mucilage of booger. Pays for cost of scraping said booger off a wood-grain surface.

- Solitary Orgasm Fee—Assessed on an average basis for each male student in a quad based on quarts per semester. This fee would pay for the cost of travel for administrators to and from Albany, where they are known to disperse in gallons.

- Toe Pung—$5 per pound per semester on the icky stuff you pick up between toes when wearing sweat socks.

Gov. Mario Cuomo, in a prepared release, said, "I realize these fees are a hardship on students. However, it is our patriotic duty to help our country when it is doing poorly, just as we benefit when our country is doing well.

"To set an example for my constituents, I shall be paying for these fees myself. Although no one enjoys setting aside hard-earned money for taxes, there is a certain pleasure to be derived in performing one's duty as an American."

Polity Vice-President Barry Ritholtz had this to say: "This is yet another example of students being deprived of their constitutional rights. Our privacy is already being violated. Even as we speak the state is installing metal chairs in the lecture halls to catch people who try to sneak by the flatulence fee." Polity is now offering special courses in the one-cheek sneak.

Marburger: Dorms to Be Segregated by Fall

In a surprise memo delivered to all university vice presidents and University Senate members Friday, University President John Marburger called for "an imposition of order" on the campus concerning student use of dormitories, university buildings, and facilities, to be put into effect this fall. The proposed measure is expected to pass without difficulty.

Following what Marburger called the "great success" of segregating dormitories into cooking and non-cooking buildings, he asserted in his 15-page memorandum that "meal plan and non-meal plan are not the only qualities which distinguish individual students" and that it was high time that the rest of the university rose to meet the needs of students from different groups.

The new plan calls for "separate but equal" facilities. Starting from the outside of the campus and working inward, Marburger proposed that the main entrance to the university, located on Nicolls Road, would be changed to the native-Americans-only entrance. Similarly, the present south entrance, located on Stony Brook Road, would become the European-American entrance. The north entrance, at the intersection of Nicolls Road and Sheep Pasture Road, would be designated as an Asian and South American entrance.

As for academic buildings, Marburger said that the interior of the buildings would remain essentially the same but, noce, agian, the names would have to be changed for the purpose of attaining "separate but equal" facilities. For example, the Computing Center would be changed to the Chinese Data Building because, Marburger said, "When you walk through the Computing Center English is certainly NOT the language you commonly hear....I was thinking of calling the building 'Egg Roll Command,' but...."

Other building names will include: The Jewish Social Sciences Building (formerly Social Sciences), The Latin American Students History Building (formerly Social and Behavioral Sciences Building), The Black Building (formerly Earth and Space Sciences), and the James Watt Memorial Cripple Building (formerly Humanities).

Marburger then addressed the problem of such buildings as the Student Union and the Administration building, which necessarily received traffic from mixed groups t one time. "I was thinking of separating them [the buildings] by floor, but Campus Operations Vice President Bob [Francis] informed me that they [Physical Plant and Maintenance Operations Center] would find it [installing separate stairways for each floor] to be cost — prohibitive [too expensive]." Instead, Marburger came upon the idea of adding "column lanes" to the floor plan of each building, simply by painting white lines on the floor. This, he argued, would not only keep the different students "in line," but it would prevent them from touching each other as well. Bathrooms would be separated by sink and stall, i.e., the "Whites' Toilet," the "Koreans' Only Sink," ect. "This is the most practice idea I've come up with since I alphabetized my spice rack," the president said. "I only hope the students appreciate all of the work and foresight that has gone into such a modest proposal such as this one."

The details for the plans for segregating the dormitories has yet to be unveiled, but it has been hinted that roaches will be provided to all students, as stipulated by their current Residence Life Housing Contracts.

Kennedy Declares: 'I'm In the Running'

Boston, Mass.— Senator Edward "Ted" Kennedy, in a surprising announcement last night, stated that he will be entering Tuesday's New York primary for the Democratic Presidential nomination.

On one of his six yachts off of Hyannis Port, Kennedy announced that he will challenge the three contenders already in the race. His reason: "Well, uh, so far, uh, you see, I don't think they have, uh, appealed to the uh right peoples."

What the 52 year old Kennedy really meant was that the Reverend Jesse (no relation to Frank) Jackson, former Vice President Walter Mondale, and Colorado Senator Gary Hart are all making pitches for special interest votes except one: the Irish Coalition.

"And, uh, what I propose to do, uh, is make and impact, uh on, uh I mean in, uh or do I really... uh on the Democratic National Convention," he said in uh between chugging his 49th beer. Then he belched.

"I intend, uh, to see what this uh country can do for the Irish," he said to the applause of Jackie, Ethel, Robert Jr., and Joan. Rose arfed like a seal. "Instead of uh," Kennedy added, breaking the rhythm, "seeing what the Irish can uh do fer their country."

The other candidates in the primary had mixed reactions to the news.

Jackson: "Ted who? You mean Jack's bro? Terrific. He's not gonna infringe upon my votes."

Mondale: "Bastard...hey kid, put down your pen. I mean I wish the best of luck to my colleague. Does it really matter though? I mean Vu Iz Der Beefstick?"

Hart: "Well, I won his state already. But, let the word go forth, from this day foward to friend and foe alike...."

Cuomo Ups Drinking Age; Lowers Speed Limits

Hymietown—Governor Mario Cuomo has submitted a proposal to the state legislature that would raise the drinking age to 55 and lower the speed limit to 19 MPH in an attempt to save lives and gasoline.

Drunks from around the state have gathered in Stony Brook University President John Marburger's office to protest the proposal by staging a drink-a-thon. "We know Jack is behind this," said one intoxicant. "He and Mario are good pals, ever since they were on that nuke commission together. First he gives Public Safety mace. Now this. Next thing you know he'll ban sex."

Marburger divorced himself from the issue.

President Ronald Reagan applauded Cuomo's proposal as a step toward "getting back to the good old day when I was a kid." He said he planned to propose it to Congress as a national amendment as soon as he passed what he called "more important amendments like mandatory school prayer and banning women from the work force, which will do wonders for the unemployment rate and male egos."

One university professor present at the sit-in summed it all up. "If we're old enough to hit mid-life crisis," he said, "then we're old enough to drink."

3 Dead As Students Become Possessed

Old Biology— Three undergraduates were eaten alive and four others only partially chewed and squished and in critical condition last night in University Hospital after radioactive roaches got loose on the State University campus.

The consumption of human flesh came about after some undergraduates revealed their alter egos in the basement of this campus building. The squishing, which accounted for some of the injuries, came about after the students were made into "road pizzas" by four units of University Policemen on patrol.

Witness Joseph Al Capone said, "Man oh man, I don't know what happened. The lights went out and I turned around and there's Dan Hank with these four-foot long whiskers and elephant teeth."

Public Safety officers responded as quickly as possible along with 54 Environmental Health and Safety air conditioned vehicles. Police gave the following account: "Students were trying to assemble the Stony Brook Mess, the campus' only weekend newspaper, when LILCO failed once again. Something about the dark made the students turn into radioactive roaches and they proceeded to chomp on the I-Tech machines that they bought with Your Student Activity Fee Money. So we acted like good cops should to radioactive roaches and squished them."

Bill Schulz (with no t), of Fire Safety gave an alternative account: "Man it was great. Never, never did I see so many people seriously dead before. We rarely get to put out any fires with all the equipment that is paid for by tuition fees, and I wish there were more incidents like this one."

Schulz swears to have seen Capone and staff chomping away on Polity members who they also employ and pay with Your Student Activity Fee Money. Capone denies having sprouted horns, however, a partially eaten source contacted in a hospital bed last night said, "Ya, he was the one. He grew this ugly yellow hair and there was this stench..."

The three dead include Mess typesetters Brian I Con, Belina Anderson, and Paul (out of all the candidates for the Communications Director job in Polity why was he picked) DiLorenzo.

Operations Signs Away Road Conditions

By C. Ment

The Office of Campus Operations has discovered a new and, they say, "ingeniously money saving" way to solve the poor campus roadway conditions.

In cooperation with the Polity Print Shop, they have been drawing up signs to tell motorists what is wrong with the road.

"The one near the North Entrance that says 'Bump' worked so well, that we decided to install them all over the place," said Robert Francis, vice president for Damn-Them Operations. "Gee, well C., it's much cheaper— and tell your editor that's spelled CHEAPER— than paying the maintenance staff overtime," he said.

Francis, no relation to the Ford Coppolas, has ordered 500 signs to be printed. The messages include: "Whole in Road", "Watch Out", and "You'll Lose Your Muffler If You Go Over This One."

And Francis hopes to spread the remedy to fix roads in the university community as well. "I have been in tutch— and tell your editors that's spelled TOUCH— with Brookhaven Town Mascot Henrieta Acampora, who thinks the signs may work to solve the Stony Brook Road Problem," Francis said in between spoonfuls of his Wheaties.

When reached for comment in her pink castle in Belle Terre, Acampora, last night in her frilly nightgown, said: "Beat it asshole."

University President John Marburger has given the project 99.9 percent backing. "I never commit myself fully to anything, you know. But, ah, um, uh, what did Bob say? I'll have to get back to you about your question after consulting my staff— Sally, Dick, Jane, Peter, Nancy, Paul, and Jeanette." Five minutes later, Marburger called back and said "You know I've lost three cars already driving through the campus. It's too bad everyone can't drive state cars like me. Oh well, can I go now?"

As for fixing the roads, Francis said: "I don't think that's physically possible."

Campus VP Bob Francis says that signs, similar to those above, will take the place of actual repairs on campus.

Stony Brook First With Federal Capability

By Ty D. Bowl

A joint project between several Stony Brook professors and students to build a series of nuclear weapons began last Thursday in the basement of Old Biology.

Professor B. Lou Up and several undergraduates submitted a proposal early last summer to President Ronald Reagan to build a series of homemade minute-man missiles and cruise missiles. The missiles, according to the proposal, would be stored under the secret underground passageways of the University that you get suspended if you enter (read the Undergraduate Bulletin). They are to be used only if Shoreham is bombed.

The proposal was approved two weeks ago and sent to Dr. Up. three other universities including Brooke Shield's Princeton, UCLA, and one in Mexico were also asked to come up with similar proposals. Several sources in the Reagan Administration involved with cleaning missiles, said that Stony Brook will be the first University with its own first strike capability.

"That's because they are afraid the Brookhaven country of America will secede and Shultzey wants to keep them in line," the source said.

"I'm glad we were the first to be approved," Up said, "we deserve it. We've been working on this for quite a while. We knew that Reagan would approve the project, but we weren't sure about the first strike."

Despite the great expense of manufacturing such weapons, Governor Mario Cuomo has agreed that the project can feasibly be afforded on the state level, instead of the federal level. "This is an election year, you know. I think we are going to want to keep control over these weapons at the state level because that B-movie actor just might win again." If money gets tight at the state level, Cuomo added, "worse comes to worse and we'll raise tuition by $300-5000 dollars a year and maybe cut financial aid here and there. No one will mind. At least no one that votes."

Potential dangers to the campus have been minimized. "Everything is very safe," Up said. "We push one button and everybody in Ruskie land says Sinatra or Sianarra..."

One student who requested anonymity, said the proposal was "a poor choice of projects. Why didn't they paint the toilets in State XII purple? That would have been just as effective in scaring off foreigners as any bomb factory."

"I like the idea," said University President John Marburger. "We don't have to arm Public Safety anymore. A small scale missile hitting directly in the solar plexus should discourage any would-be saboteurs in the SUNY system. Hail Reagan."

Testing of the missiles should begin over Hoboken in July.

Statesman Editor Assaulted In Pit Hockey Game

By Jaques Tootite

Pit Hockey. It's a man's game. It's fast, it's hard. And often—it's violent. But sometimes the violence goes beyond the pit. Ask Statesman Contributing Editor, Howard Breuer, he knows. Breuer was listed in stable condition in University Hospital last night; he was assaulted by four unknown pit hockey players while writing an article about pit violence.

"I'm really not sure what happened," Breuer said through numerous tubes under his oxygen tent. "All I know is I was taking down quotes from some spectators when these guys started attacking me."

According to the University Police, several people have been questioned about the incident, but none of these have been arrested. A person who identified himself as a member of Persons United for Cut and Kicks (PUCK) said Breuer was assaulted for "sticking his nose into our fun. This should be a warning to youse udder guys—when da fur flies, stay outta da pit."

Breuer has been working closely with University Police to help identify the perpetrators of the crime, but he says he doesn't recall much. "I remember some guy saying 'Dis should prove there ain't no hockey violence,'" said Breuer, "and then he kned me in the groin."

Anyone with information about the crime should keep it to himself, according to Director of Community Relations Doug Little.

Statesman Contributing Editor Howard Breuer lays helplessly on the ground as Pit Hockey players continue to assault him.

Some internship programs treat students like gophers. "Go-fer coffee"; "go-fer mail"; go-fer supplies". At NYPIRG we do not think this is a very good way to learn or acquire job experience.

NYPIRG interns work as part of a team with staff lawyers, scientists, researchers and organizers. They receive hands-on experience. During the past year, for example, students working with NYPIRG authored published studies, testified before state and local legislative committees, appeared on radio and television shows and, in general, learned what it is like to be a public interest advocate.

University Serves Up Cooking Program

By Julia Kid

In a move designed to quell opposition to the closing of dorms to cooking, University President John Marburger said today that Stony Brook will open up a School of Culinary Arts within the next two years.

"It puts cooking exactly where it belongs," said Marburger, "in the classroom." Marburger explained that now students who "really, truly" wish to cook on campus can do so under faculty supervision.

"The details of the plan I'm leaving up to a campus committee," Marburger said. He indicated that Robert Francis, vice president for Campus Operations, might head the committee because "Fred Preston's too busy fighting off student opposition to my cooking reduction policy. And besides, Bob cooks up a mean dish of peppered hominy grits."

Up in the Polity suite, right across from the television room, the announcement only seemed to exacerbate an already heated opposition to Marburger and his policies. "The students of this institution are tired of being pushed around," exclaimed Polity President David Gamberger as he slammed his fist onto his desk. "And besides, a Cooking School is just plain sissy!"

Meanwhile, the Polity Action Committee on University Crisis Situations, which had been in recess for the past month, met in an emergency session last night to discuss the matter.

"But, think of the possibilities," said brother of Steve, Steven, and I, Brian Kohn, Polity Treasurer. "Imagine. Chicken Cordon Blue with a side dish of mussels soaking in hot marinara sauce.

John Marburger

Then the creme puffs— oh don't forget the creme puffs."

But the committee eventually resolved to fight the idea. "It's plain and simple," said Vice President Barry Ritholtz. "Admin wants students to get fat and lazy so they'll be easy targets when Pubic Safety gets guns." He fears waking up one morning and seeing in the mirror a roll hanging over his Calvin Klein pink Panties for Males briefs. However, he hopes that Belina Anderson gains back all the weight she lost last summer, so she won't be much of a contender when they both run for Polity President in May and have their pictures in the newspaper.

Marburger said that regardless of the opposition, the school is on the drawing boards, with construction to begin next week. "Can't wait," he said. "And neither could you if you had to live in my wife's cooking."

VP Preston to Secede From University

By Levon Fast

Since last semester, the situation between Polity and the HSCSA has dragged along, without much progress. But now, a new development has caused a snag in the drag. In a call to a Statesman reporter last night, Fred Preston, vice-president of University Affairs announced that he is seceding from the university.

"Well, the way I see it, the whole issue has given me a whole new lease on life," said Preston. "While I was checking out whether or not the HSCSA could secede, I found out that there was nothing legally stopping me, either. So I am."

According to Preston, he is seceding because University President John Marburger has been questioning the amount of money he has been spending for food and conference trips. "The man's just been hassling me in general," complained Preston. "I think he has nothing better to do now that that dumb report on Shoreham is finished." Preston added that he plans to clean out his office in the Administrator building, and move into a basement office in Old Bio tomorrow.

Reactions to the bold move by Preston were met by strong words by Marburger. "He says he's going to do what?!?" said Marburger, pausing before his next answer. At the present time such a decision would be unwise as it would cause undue unrest and anxiety in our current juncture," said the president. "I'll have Francis...er, I'll release an official response this afternoon."

Perhaps more expressive was Polity Secretary Belina Anderson, who has been negotiating on behalf of Polity on the HSCSA issue since last semester. "Damn Him!" said Anderson, while sticking pins into a voodoo doll of Polity Vice-President Barry Ritholtz. "Now I'll never get the full credit I deserve for solving this, and win the election!"

Stacy Cottone, HSCSA treasurer was reached for comment while in a cadaver lab in the Health Sciences Center. "You really got to hand it to Preston," she said. "He always he his fingers in everything, but I think he put his foot in it this time."

Fred Preston, in the only picture we have of him, says that he is seceding from the university. Statesman photo/Barry Wong

A First Draft of an Oliphant-like Cartoon

Hello, all you Statesman readers out there. My name is Joe Caponi, and I'm Executive Editor of the Stony Brook Press. All the nice people at Statesman asked me to do a guest editorial for their April Fool's Day issue, and, of course, I jumped at the chance to appear in the best gosh-darn newspaper in the Stony Brook area.

This is a fulfilled dream for me. I've always had this fantasy of working for Statesman. I don't know why that is. Maybe its because they do real news coverage, not full-page Q&A interviews with Polity officials. Maybe because they take the extra time to get the facts, and not just make stuff up. Maybe its because of the beautiful women that work at Statesman, like Elizabeth and Andrea. There's something about intelligent, vivacious, beautiful women that really turns me on. Not like the women at the Press, who have the cumulative IQ of a cement mixer. Press women also have long, curly nostril hair, and they only bathe every vernal equinox.

Or, maybe I just want to work for Statesman because you guys don't have to put up with Dan Hank.

So c'mon, guys, whaddaya say? Let me work for Statesman, huh, huh? I don't have to start at the top; just let me do anything. I'll even start out covering Polity meetings. And, I'll get all my stories in on time, and I'll be real quiet, and I won't eat your pizza, and I won't bother anyone. C'mon? Please?

No, huh? Okay, I appeal to a higher authority. People of Stony Brook! If you want to see me get my fondest wish fulfilled, you have to convince these editors that I'm good enough for them. Write to:

'Debbie' Kudos

To the Editor:

We would like to take this opportunity to belatedly offer kudos to Student Affairs Vice-president Fred Preston for banning the showing of the pornographic film Debbie Does Dallas. Our only regret is that he backed down and allowed it to be shown.

Pornography has been documented to be a terrible thing. Incidence of violent sexual assault rises after the showing of a pornographic film. Pornography is offensive to all people; men and women alike.

Although we deplore censorship, we think pornography is worse. We hope that campus groups in the future will voluntarily refrain from showing such filth.

Bathroom Troubles

To the Editor:

You must inform the people of Stony Brook! There are thousands of giant, radioactive boa constrictors escaping through the men's urinals of the bathrooms on campus.

I have tried to alert the authorities to this, but they have ignored me, all but one, who told me to see a good Freudian analyst in the psychology department.

The Truth

To the Editor:

Polity sucks! Boy, is this great. David Gamberg is a snot-sucker! This sure is fun. NYPNRG members should be shot! I'm having a great time. SASU should be boiled in oil! Wish I could do this every day. Mario Cuomo is a child molester!

Really lets off some steam. All the students should be chained in their dorm rooms and thrown raw meat once a day!

See, you guys at Statesman are having this April Fool's Day issue, y'know? And, I send you this letter, y'know? And, everyone thinks that you guys made all this stuff up!

Great idea. You ought to have an April Fool's Day issue every day.

John Marburger
University President

P.S. Oh, yeah. I forgot. You guys at Statesman suck, too.

Arm Public Safety

To the Editor:

You better register mutants now (people with blond hair and brown eyes or people with two different eyes or 6 fingers or like that), because after the war, we won't be able to tell those that were mutated by the radiation from the nuclear wasteland and that are hostile to humans from the funny ones now.

This way, when we venture into the barren zone in search of dangerous mutants to terminate, we will be able to tell apart freinds from foe. Maybe public safety could give them cards or something. PS, you better let the men of the campus cops carry the guns that every man is born a right to. Or else there will be few to protect the meek from the ravages of fornication crazed mutants with triple penises. A man is only as big as his gun.

Barry's Pooches

To the Editor:

They say it's a dog's life. Well, we should know.

We are the dogs of Barry Ritholtz, the vice-president of Polity. We feel it's high time that someone knew the truth about Barry.

First, we both agree that we don't like the way he treats us. Every morning, he forgets to wake us up in time for class, and we have to go sprinting after the P-Lot bus. This isn't fun.

Perhaps the thing that cheeses us off about Barry is his weird behavior. He puts on these real dark glasses around 11 PM and smokes some funky-smelling stuff. Then he tosses darts at a picture of some girl named Belina and says over and over, "Like hell you're going to be president!" What could this mean? Is it normal?

I guess this letter is really a plea to the humane societies—we're hoping they take us away so we can get a normal owner. In our opinion, Barry would be safer with "Digger the Dog," and not real, impressionable puppies like ourselves.

A Real Public Notice

The deadline for changing from a Pass/No Credit grading option to a letter grade or vice-versa, and to withdraw from a course, has been changed from last Friday, March 30, to this Wednesday, April 4.

Like we said, this is a real public notice. We wouldn't make something like this up, even if this is the April Fool's Day issue, even if we did make that stuff up on page one. Honest, to God, we wouldn't want to fuck up your lives, or anything. We just want to have a little fun, okay. So, like, all of you remember: it's not too late to withdraw from that 300-level course you signed up for without any of the prerequisites. Go to it, folks.

Really. We're not kidding.

UNION "BALL" ROOM

Long Lines for A Little of Doug

Stressing sexual education, poking fun at masturbation and warning women about the consequences of penetration, sex therapist "Dr. Doug" Little discussed "Matters Sexual" with a sold-out audience in Lecture Hall 100 last night and demonstrated that sex isn't all that matters.

The host of WUSB FM's "Sexually Speaking," who is an Associate Professor of Psychology at New York University's Cornell Medical Center and Director of Community Relations for University Police, began by explaining his ideology, which is educational not therapeutic. Couples coming to him with a sexual problem, he said, are given a "Sexual Status Examination." Little tries to "find out how two people make love, for me to have an audio-visual picture." Using sexual statistics and his professional expertise, he said he gives advice. Occasionally Little is baffled and refers a patient to someone of greater knowledge or specialization.

"It's O.K. for me to ask the most intimate personal questions in the privacy of my office, even if it is bugged," he said. "I have to find out what turns you on in bed. How you are sexually aroused. In one couple, the woman never had sexual gratification. In another, the man had a strong erection when he saw a cow. You must be willing to say with which hand you masturbate. Like, I'll be perfectly honest with you—I use both."

Little said we are "very lucky" to have sexual statistics to work with, referring to a Masters and Johnson study 10 years ago which first used a lab setting for such testing. Although he acknowledged that the subjects included "poor prostitutes," Little said the results of such tests are useful. "In the United States today, 30 percent of sexually active women don't have sexual satisfaction. They should only meet me!" Little said he relies on such "scientific evidence" to advise patients as to the normalcy of various behavior. "And hey, if they do something abnormal, I'll take the cuffs out," he said.

"Many other things than sex matter in a marriage," he said. "like companionship and communication, except when you marry a cop..."

Declaring that he intended to "bury some myths about sex," Little joked about the man who thought masturbation would cause him to grow warts or hair in the palms of his hand, or go blind. "But then Gary grew up." He scoffed at an eighteenth century doctor who said that girls who touch their clitoris get tuberculosis. "Just let me kiss it and the boo-boo will go away."

Little added that a woman douching with Coca-Cola in the afternoon will not prevent pregnancy. "There are thousands of spermatozoa in one man's ejaculation. Do you know how many are needed to get a woman pregnant? One fast one," he said, adding he has quick ones.

Little said he gets over 100 letters a week and 4,000 calls during his hour-long show on WYNY's 10 lines, usually taking about 22 calls on the air. He said the calls run "about 50-50 between sexual and relationship questions. His funniest call, Little said, came from a man who said his girlfriend liked to toss onion rings on his erected penis. "Anything two adults do in the privacy of their own home is OK with me, he said. "And anything they do in my office is O.K. too."

Lesbianism, Little said, "we don't know the reason for. And as a cop, yuk, I can't understand. One thing we do know is that a homosexual experience doesn't make one homosexual." He advised an uncertain young person to wait and "see what life brings, and make up your own mind when you're sure what you are."

He approves of today's women being "not aggressive, but assertive," in asking a man out for a date, "if the woman wants to take the risk of being turned down or getting squirted with mace here or there."

Little called oral sex "nauseating," saying, "You don't have to engage in all possible positions. Not everyone has to hand from a chandelier." He said he prefers doing to being done and as an alternative, Little said, "I would suggest a Public Safety night stick."

STAGE BLUES

by Dennis Britten

CUES: If you happen to be in the vicinity of the Fine Arts Center, be sure to watch your step or else you might trip over the charred rubble, which is all that's left of the building after a massive fire burned it to the ground yesterday.

The university community is understandably in a state of shock, but in the true spirit of show business, Terrence Netter, director of the Fine Arts Center, said this season's schedule will not be affected. Netter said that in all likelihood, the number of outdoor concerts will increase.

CASTING: Auditions for the Gay and Lesbian Alliance (GALA) production of Spenser's "The Faerie Queene" will be held today at 2 PM in what used to be Theatre I of what used to be the Fine Arts Center. Members of GALA are out there now shoveling a path through the Fine Arts debris, so let's all show our appreciation and come to the audition. As if they didn't have enough problems already. For the second time this week, the door to the GALA office was removed from its hinges and found in an obscure location on campus. The latest drop off point was the bottom of the swimming pool in the gymnasium (In a related story, Patriot swimmer John Donnelly was rushed to University Hospital yesterday after he dove into the pool and hit his head on the door) While GALA President Paul Halaj fears the chlorine in the water may have corroded the metal door, he urges everyone to have a gay outlook and come to the audition. "I guess you could say we have an open door policy," Halaj said.

Have an entertaining week!

The Ba Is Out to Lunch

giggles from you right there on the spot.

C'mon. You know how it is. What about you guys who spend all night in the Library? All of us schnooks could think you're really doing something with your lives, making a great personal sacrifice. Some of us could think that, but not the Ba. Nope, ya can't pull the polyester over my eyes. You guys spend all that time in the library, slaving away, because you love yourselves. That's right, you guys—and gals I guess—don't have to go carousing for a good piece of orgasmic pleasure because you've got yourselves to love. Yeah, you're all gonna be doctors and live it up—all because you're in love with yourselves!

But wait a minute. I bet you never thought of this. Didn't you think that us narcissists like nothing better in the world than to have people be in total agreement with us. To have people share our perceptions of ourselves. Well, hold on to your door knob, friends, because today the Big Ba makes the open admission that this is the reason he writes this column. Yup, you guys are my reason for writing. Every Wednesday, look for the guy peeking over the shoulder of anyone reading the old rag—you can bet your collection of Partridge Family bubble gum cards that it'll be your beloved 'shrooms columnist. And if you want to make him happy, tell him you couldn't stop laughing the last time you read his strip, so you had to give up the habit.

We're all narcissists, though. Yup, every single one of us. Woody Allen, an old buddy of mine, said it best. "I love mastur—What's wrong with masturbation," said Woody. "It's having sex with someone, I love." Ain't it true! What about you guys who spend all night in the library, with nothing better to do. You guys aren't foolin the Ba. He knows what you're all up to when your not burnin' the midnight oil. He knows that wrist ain't from playing tennis.

You guys can't hide anything either. I happen to know for a fact that every girl that's ever rejected me—and it ain't been that many—has spent many a night dancing in tight jeans, or doing more than reading the Sunday edition of the New York Times.

Self-love. Think about it. Think of all the achievements of mankind and the motivating force behind them all. Dedication? Intelligence? A Thirst for knowledge? Nah...Just look at why this is written for the answer: the sweet feeling of fame, fortune and being loved. C'mon gang, laugh. Just laugh a little bit—a wee little bit. Just tell me what I have to do. Ya want more words? Well, here goes. Ya see in my house my mother...

(Editor's note: The above strip had to be abruptly cut because of a lack of space and a lack of patience)

Yo gang! The Ba is back. Back to bless all my cherubs with that sardonic, witty view on the mundane idiocies in our lives.

Today's subject is narcissism. We've all suffered through it—I know I have. You know, when you're walking down the street on a sunny afternoon and can't but help watch your sleek figure glide by on the store window. Of course I make believe I'm actually looking inside the store. Do you?

Self-love. Yes, I like to go by that old motto coined by my pal Woody Allen. Remember. The one about masturbation," said good ole Woody. "It's the only chance I get to have sex with someone I love."

Did you ever wonder about how you really feel about yourself? I mean really wonder. Take the Ba. Your favorite humorist is writing this strip because he really does love himself a whole lot. Forget peeking in store windows on Wednesday. No sir. The Ba peeks over the shoulders of all you guys who are reading Statesman, making sure you're reading his column and laughing I try me darndest to get some

time
is your time
April 4—April 13

Prime Time is ten days of departmental activities and advising offered every semester before and during advance registration. It is the time when your attention is necessarily focused on your academic plans for the next semester and beyond. To plan well, you need to consult faculty members. During Prime Time, academic departments and programs schedule events and additional advising hours to maximize your contact with the faculty. You can talk formally and informally with faculty about your choice of a major, a minor, course selection, graduate school, and any other questions you have relating to your academic interests and program. If you have already chosen a major, you should seek faculty advice concerning the completion of that major and University graduation requirements. You can use Prime Time to explore research opportunities, internships, study abroad, and honors programs.

You are encouraged to attend any program you find helpful or interesting. Faculty and staff of the sponsoring departments will be in attendance. Enjoy the camaraderie with them and other students.

The schedule of faculty advising hours for Prime Time, April 4-13, appears in the Undergraduate Bulletin Supplement. Faculty advising schedules for the weeks before and after Prime Time are posted in department offices.

Kemp Rejects Offer from Stony Brook

Fred Kemp

By Walt Erboy

In a surprise move yesterday, Graham Spanier, vice-provost for Undergraduate Studies, here announced that the university offered the head coaching job for the football team back to Fred Kemp, the man who held the job until he was fired some two months ago. And more surprisingly, according to Spanier, Kemp refused to consider the offer—declining immediately.

"We all feel like a bunch of fools," said Spanier. "We didn't really mean to fire him, we just wanted to take his job away."

Kemp, who admits he is currently unemployed, said the matter is one of pride. "I wouldn't work for that idiot bag university again if they paid me; and they're willing to. They messed up with Howell, and now they're coming on like they're benevolent gods or something....what they really are, are asses.

Spanier, downplaying Kemp's comments, said that the university hopes Kemp will reconsider. According to the vice-provost, Kemp did say he would come back as head coach only under one condition.

"All we have to do now," Spanier said, "is make hell freeze over."

THE DREADED WHITE SPACE

New Recruit For Patriots

By Jeff Eisenhart

Lookout, Georgetown! Beware Houston! Here comes Stony Brook. Next season these two powerhouses will have to contend with the patriots. The patriots? Yes, because this week, Stony Brook received a signed letter of intent from Dick Kendall's last and finest recruit, Kumba Bombutanaba, a 7'-9" center from Africa.

Bombutanaba, 18, from Nigeria, is a third cousin to the Houston Cougars All-American Center Akeem 'The Dream' Olajuwon, and he is a descendant of Tarzan. This season he led his tribe, the Watusies, to the Village Title, when he averaged 37 points per game.

The giant African rejected offers from U.C.L.A., DePaul, Georgetown, and Maryland in order to play for Stony Brook. Why? According to Bombutanaba, the key reason why he chose Stony Brook was because "the food is good."

How did coach Dick Kendall win the recruiting war? Kendall said, "I told him this was a great school to be an engineer, or a witch doctor, and besides that's why I'm a basketball coach. I also told him the Stony Brook athletic field was a great place to let your pet lion and elephant run free for exercise.

Players were thrilled with their new teammate. Assistant coach Gerry Weisman was reached. He said, "This apeman- I mean kid- will take us out of the jungle and into contention. I knew we weren't going to lose the recruiting war."

What Weisman was referring to was the loss of recruit Benny Anders. Anders, the supersub for the Houston Cougars, quit his team in December and according to Kendall "was headed for Stony Brook." But Anders said, "They didn't offer the physical education courses I wanted and besides I'm not as dumb as people think I is." He later rejoined his team.

Bombutanaba is very excited about coming to Stony Brook, especially after being told there is no scholarship and that he has to pay for his own education. He was last seen wandering through his village muttering, "I didn't know that, I didn't know that..."

With this giant addition to the Stony Brook squad, next season promises to be a winning one for the patriots.

Chariot racing cheerleaders Liz Wasserman and Andrea Rosenberg are sure to miss Thursday's meet (see blurb directly above and over to the left somewhat). They were arrested for horse-fondling yesterday and were put behind bars. "This whole thing is becoming such a nag," Liz was heard to say.
