History Grads Gain More Than Jobs

By RUTH BONAPACE

To most of the history graduate students who ended a four-day strike Monday, they won more than eight jobs. To them, the action meant a step toward bargaining collectively with the State of New York.

"We've set some kind of precedent in our ability to bargain with the Administration," said picketing coordinator Jim Terry. "Graduate students are very naive about these things. We don't know how to operate with the Administration," he added.

Eight Positions Restored

The strike, which began last Wednesday, was prompted by the University's decision to cut allotted teaching assistant (TA) positions in the history department from 50 to 33 in an effort to trim its operating budget. The protesting students argued that the cuts would mean that about five students currently eligible for support next year would be dropped from the program. By restoring eight positions temporarily next year from instructor's lines which are unfilled, no students currently in good standing will be terminated, and about three incoming students will receive TA positions.

"The University does not want to recognize us as employees." We suspect that the way to do it [gain recognition] is by a state wide strike," said Charles Stephens, a strike leader and head of the Graduate Students Employees Union, a group whose aim is to organize TAs into a legally sanctioned labor union.

Currently, graduate students are unionized on at least two major campuses in the country, the University of Michigan and the University of Wisconsin.

Strike Averted

At the State University of New York (SUNY) at Buffalo, graduate students narrowly voted April 2 not to stage a general strike, said graduate philosophy student Barney Oursler, the secretary of that campus' unofficial union. Oursler said this week that his organization has collected the signature cards necessary to become a recognized union from more than half of the eligible graduate students at Buffalo. Stephens said that to become a union the students would have to be recognized as such by either the Public Employees Relations Board or SUNY. So far, they have received neither.

Toll Declines to Comment

University President John Toll would not comment yesterday on the University's position on the unionization of graduate students. SUNY spokesman Russ Gugino said that he did not know if graduate students qualified as state employees but added, "I know that there's been talk over at Buffalo about unionizing."

About 768 of Stony Brook's more than 2000 fulltime graduate students are paid in annual stipends ranging from $1500 to $3000 per year to help instructors teach undergraduate courses and do research. Graduate tuition is $1200 for New York State residents and $1500 for nonresidents this year, and next year it will be increased to $1400 for state residents and $1900 for nonresidents.

Boycotting classes

During the strike the graduate students picketed classes to which they had been assigned and encouraged undergraduates to boycott history classes. While the effectiveness was difficult to determine last week because many students left campus Wednesday for the holidays, most history classes were apparently poorly attended on Monday.

Other Departments Affected

University spokeswoman Alexis White said the history department was not the only one affected by the cuts although it was the only one to go on strike. She said the Administration agreed to temporarily restore the eight jobs after a plan for next years' growth was presented by the history department justifying its need for the TAs. "You can't just have graduate students taking TA ships and not really doing anything," White said.

But, History Department Chairman Joel Rosenthal said yesterday that the administration said that if the lines were to be restored that he would have to accept the extra teaching load of 35 new students. When asked how the department would arrange to recruit the new students, Rosenthal said, "How the hell do I know?"

Cardozo Fires Rage Again

By DAVID RAZLER

Two more minor fires were apparently deliberately set in Cardozo College yesterday, the sixth and seventh in that building since March 1.

Early yesterday morning, janitors discovered a stuffed lounge chair burning after someone had apparently placed a pile of newspapers on it and ignited them. They were able to extinguish the fire themselves. The janitors then called fire marshalls who began a search of the dorm.

Discovered Smoke

During the search, the marshalls discovered smoke coming from a first floor storage closet. They found a recently set fire in the closet in a pile of old papers and tarpaulins, which they were able to extinguish.

University spokeswoman, Jan Hickman said that to combat the recent fires, one of which resulted in the evacuation of the smoke-filled building, all lounge furniture was being removed from the college and placed in a padlocked storage room. In addition, flammable material which could be removed was also being taken from lounges and storage closets. All plastic trash bins will be replaced with metal ones and the fire alarm system will be checked with greater frequency. Hickman added that presently all of the fire switches, sensors and bells were working.

Very Uncomfortable

Cardozo Program Coordinator Dot Cofone said that the students were very concerned about the fires. "Students are very uncomfortable in the building," she said. "They would like to see the investigation continue." She added that the students now respond to fire alarms without the hesitation which they showed last year when the college was plagued with many false alarms.

The Department of Public

Safety held a meeting with the college and discussed procedures to follow if there is a fire.

The first fires took place early in the morning of March 1 and 2, damaging a couch and blackening a wall. Several more fires were set on March 11 and 22 and more furniture was destroyed.

Patrols Not Formed

Although Cardozo students have locked the dorm during the night and early morning, they have not formed patrols to watch the dorm during the early morning hours when the fires have taken place. According to Cofone, the students do not know who is setting the fires, however many rumors have been circulating through the college.

One Cardozo resident said that he was not too worried about the blazes. However he said that with all of the lounge furniture gone "we have no place to sit down. That's the real inconvenience."

Seminar: Focus on Pre-law

By RENE GHADIMI

New York—Representatives from about 40 New York Universities and Colleges met last Saturday at the Sheraton Hotel for the first annual Regional Pre-Law Seminar. The seminar was sponsored and organized by the Stony Brook Pre-law Society and received a grant from the John Sexton LSAT Preparation Center.

The purpose of the seminar, according to Pre-law Society President Bruce Bryan, was to "provide accurate information about pre-law and to disseminate information that might otherwise be difficult to obtain."

It was a pragmatically oriented seminar, addressing such concrete issues as the rationale behind law school admissions criteria, job opportunities for law school graduates, the applications process, the purpose of the LSAT, and what law school is like. Bryan, a junior, told his audience in his opening welcome speech that "it is your task to transmit this invaluable information to the students of your schools."

The speakers' agenda followed the law school process from its inception to employment prospects of law school graduates. John Sexton, presently enrolled in Harvard Law School, outlined the format and history of the LSATs, interjecting personal examples and anecdotes, recalled from his experiences. He gave "how to" advice, and tips on helpful strategy in applying to law schools.

How and Why

A former member of the Harvard Law School Admissions Committee, Laurence Tribe, spoke to the audience on the hows and whys of law school admissions. Tribe is presently Professor of Constitutional Law at Harvard University.

Assistant Dean of Hofstra Law School David Benjamin, also talked about the Admissions process by focusing on Hofstra's procedures.

Beverly Charles, currently a student at New York Law School, spoke on preparing for law school and described the first year at law school. Charles is the Representative to Law Student Division of the ABA, and Chairperson of the Women's Caucuses for the Second Circuit. Charles described life at law school as highly competitive.

Employment Prospects

Stephen Dickerman, President of PSI-COM Group Ltd., a placement firm for lawyers with experience, spoke on the employment prospects for lawyers. He painted a somewhat sobering and dismal picture. He stressed a critical examination of one's motives and an honest appraisal of one's potential in the field of law. Other speakers included representatives from various law schools and Allin Seward III, Esq., Chairman of the Young Lawyers Committee of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York.

Extremely Successful

Bryan described the seminar as, "extremely successful on the basis of what was said and only partially successful in so far as the turnout was concerned." Only half of the 80 schools invited attended. The poor attendance may be attributed to the very warm weather and the holidays.

The entire seminar was taped. Bryan plans to have the transcribed tapes printed, and distributed to all of the 80 schools. This, he said, should mitigate the disappointment over the small attendance.

The Stony Brook Pre-Law Society plans to distribute letters to the schools which did attend, soliciting feedback on the seminar.

Vice Presidential Candidates Exchange Views

By JONATHAN D. SALANT

(Third in a series)

Polity is seen as having two separate roles—political and social. The three candidates running for vice president of the undergraduate student government all have expressed different opinions on how much of Polity's efforts should be concentrated in each role.

At one end is Sophomore Representative Mark Citrin, who said Polity should primarily concern itself with the social atmosphere on-campus. At the other end is O'Neill Senator Bill Keller, who said if the Senate has allocated the student activities fees correctly, the groups receiving Polity funding can plan the campus activities. "If there's a well-rounded activity going on already, Polity can spend more time in the political arena," he said. In the middle is Judiciary member Brian Winthrop who feels Polity has two equal responsibilities, even though its funding is mainly for extra-curricular activities.

Winthrop, 21, a junior living off campus in Mt. Sinai, is also speakers chairman of the Student Activities Board. Keller, 21, a junior from O'Neill, is a college residential assistant and a member of the University Senate. Citrin, 19, from James College, is an assistant treasurer of the Faculty Student Association and has served on various academic committees.

Different Branches

Each candidate comes from a different branch of Polity—sophomore representative Citrin sits on the Council and is voting member of the Senate, Keller represents his college in the Senate and Winthrop is on the Judiciary. The vice president is a voting member of the

BRIAN WINTHROP

MARC CITRIN

Council and chairman of the Senate, where he also has a vote.

"The Polity Council, of which I am presently a member, is perhaps the most powerful and important branch of the organization," Citrin said. "My experience as sophomore rep will definitely be useful if I am elected. I understand the inner workings of the organization and I would not come into the job virtually untrained."

Should Have Experience

"Anyone running for it should have some experience with the Polity Senate," Keller said. "During the past two years, I have been the O'Neill College senator."

"I've sat in many of the Senate meetings and participated in a majority of the Council meetings," Winthrop said. "I've dealt with all the Council members and quite a few of the Senate members. During the past year, I've had a great deal of experience dealing with quite a few of Polity's problems."

Institutive Policies

As Vice President, I will have a greater ability to institute many of the policies which I advocate."

Social Improvements

All three candidates suggested ways to improve the social life on campus. Winthrop] called for the establishment of a rathskeller in the Union, "where students can dance and drink in a comfortable atmosphere for a minimal price." He suggested a committee be formed to conduct frequent campuswide surveys on both political issues and what events the students would like to see Polity put on. Winthrop also called for the combination of the Union Governing Board, Student Activities Board, and the Committee on Cinematographic Arts into one programming group.

Keller said Polity should fund one big activity at the beginning of the year and let the groups receiving student government funding plan the rest of the activities on a regular basis. He said the vice president should keep in touch with various groups and activities on campus. "The vice president of Polity should be the man who gets out to the campus and brings the information to the Polity president." The vice president is responsible for overseeing the operations of SAB, and Keller said he would "do everything I can" to prevent the recurrence of this year's incident when SAB spent most of its major concert funding at the start of the academic year and had little money for this semester.

Several weeks ago, the undergraduate student government took over the Stony Brook Union for a weekend and ran three days of activities. Citrin said this should be done at least once a month. "The cost is minor and the benefits to the students are great," he said. Citrin said SAB should send a survey sheet to the campus to determine the interests of students. "SAB is the main base from which to work for improving the social atmosphere," he said. "What is needed now is the general improvement of student life on this campus."

Citrin said Polity does have some political functions. "We need an organization to deal directly with the Administration and FSA and other University institutions," he said. "Polity has been fairly successful in these endeavors."

Keller called for cooperation between students and faculty for academic reform, including changing the current policy by which NRs change to Fs. He suggested limiting proxies in the Senate to one per senator and called for ongoing workshops on the monetary needs of various groups and how the Polity money is spent.

Winthrop called for a supermarket on campus and changes in the current meal plan system. He urged state funding of athletics, a larger intramural program, and the establishment of a lacrosse team, and a varsity football team. "If the state can give $300 million for a Health Sciences Center, I think they surely can give $3 million for the creation of fieldhouse, more adequate gym facilities and more experienced coaches," Winthrop said.

Secretarial Credentials Discussed

(Fourth in a series.)

Both Kevin Young and Eric Weinstock, the two candidates running for Polity secretary, have served on various University committees. It is their work on these committees, they said, that proves their dedication to fight for students.

Young, 20, a junior from Toscanini, served on the University-wide Residential Assistant Review Committee and the Security Review Board. Weinstock, 17, a sophomore also from Toscanini, is a member of the University Food Service Committee and the University Senate.

"On the Arts and Sciences Senate, I voted to extend the drop period to nine weeks," Weinstock said. "On the University Food Service Committee, I have been instrumental in trying to obtain a voluntary food service for next year."

Member of RA Committee

"I've always fought for student rights," Young said. He said that as a member of the RA committee he led the fight to prevent the merging of the RA and managerial assistant roles and the selection of those students solely by the Administration. Young said he helped set up the Security Review Board after the incident where Chemistry Professor Ted Goldfarb was allegedly harassed by Campus Security.

Young has also done some work with food services; he worked on a plan to bring a different contractor on campus. He is chairman of the Toscanini Legislature and is Polity Housing Affairs Coordinator.

Weinstock is the building senator from Toscanini, and has served on various senate committees. As secretary, he would sit in both the Council and Senate.

"The Council controls the administrative budget which is much too large and the Council is a position where I can be more effective," Weinstock said.

Both Young and Weinstock have different views of the roles of the Council and the Senate. Young said the Council was the executive branch of student government. "I see the Senate as the final body," he said. "A lot of Council recommendations should go to the Senate for approval."

"Oversight Function"

Weinstock said he wanted the Council to "perform its oversight function" over committees like the Student Activities Board. "I would like to see the size of the [Polity] administrative budget cut and I would like to develop a plan where the activities fee for commuters will be reduced."

Weinstock said the Senate was a debating club. "It annoys me," he said. "I feel the Senate can be a very important body if the students elect people who are willing to work. It's the Senate which will make or break Polity."

Young also called for expanded Library hours by giving student assistants course credit instead of money, and to use the Faculty Student Association as a vehicle to improve student services.

FSA Constructs Plans For Voluntary Meal Plan

By EDDIE HORWITZ and ALAN GERBER

The Faculty Student Association Board of Directors has approved a plan that would establish a mandatory freshman meal plan for the fall 1976 semester, and then switch over to a voluntary meal plan for the entire student body for the next three semesters. The plan must now go to University President John Toll for final approval.

The University Food Services Committee, a body appointed by the FSA Board of Directors to investigate alternatives to the present meal plan, recommended a voluntary meal plan to the board in February. Afterward, the plan went to then Acting University President T. Alexander Pond, who returned it without a decision. He said that if he had to render a decision at that time, he would veto the plan, and suggested that the FSA proceed with drawing up proposals for both a mandatory and a voluntary plan.

Clark Begins Suffolk Campaign for Senate Seat

RAMSEY CLARK addresses the students in the Union courtyard.

By DAVID RAZLER

Stating that the major issues facing the country today are those concerning the economic and social welfare of the American people, ex-Attorney General Ramsey Clark kicked off his campaign on Suffolk County for the Democratic Senatorial Nomination with a speech in the Union court yard on Wednesday.

Clark spent the rest of the day touring Brookhaven National Laboratory and speaking at several other fund raising events in Brookhaven town.

Clark said that he believed that both economic and social problems could be solved at once through proper planning. He said that a massive government project to find methods of using solar energy would create thousands of jobs at the same time it solved the national energy problem. He added that money used for energy saving programs would also create jobs in both the businesses of developing new kinds of energy saving devices, and the manufacturing of insulation and similar energy saving items.

He also called for an increase in government spending for education. "Why are we cutting back on education with not one cent cut from the defense budget?" said Clark, "The amount of knowledge doubles every eight to 10 years, making knowledge an even more powerful tool."

Clark also called for creation of jobs in the social sciences. "Do institutions (for the retarded) have to be Willowbrooks? There are hundreds of thousands of jobs to help those who needed to be cared for."

On foreign policy, Clark called for the immediate dismissal of Secretary of State Henry Kissinger. He said that Kissinger had not followed a consistent foreign policy, and that he had created a world situation unacceptable to the citizens of the United States. He added that he felt that United States foreign policy should be revised so the United States would no longer aid totalitarian governments, and no longer use food to make economic deals but to feed the starving.

Later at a press conference for Suffolk reporters, Clark added that he felt that Suffolk was the best site he had seen so far for the government Solar Energy Research Center. The county is competing with several other localities for the federal installation which is expected to bring hundreds of jobs into the area. He also called for moratoriums on new nuclear power plants and off shore oil drilling.

He also stated that he believed that United States policy in the Middle East should be one of providing Israel with all the arms it needs to survive while trying to work out peace. He said that he did not feel that Israel should give up any occupied territory and that he did not see any need for the creation of another state.

Inside Look at SB Council

(Editor's Note: The Stony Brook Council is a group of nine persons appointed by the governor of New York and a non-voting student representative, who serve as the board of trustees for the University. Once a month, the Council meets to hear a report on Stony Brook from University President John Toll and to take various actions. The Council meetings are usually closed to the press; however, Statesman editor-in-chief Jonathan D. Salant was invited to sit in on Wednesday's meeting. Here is his report.)

George Tobler sits at one end of the table; John Toll at the other end. Around sit the other eight voting members of the Stony Brook Council, seven men and one woman. Council student representative Richard Gelfond, Assistant to the President John Burness, a representative from the Alumni Association, Citizens Advisory Committee Chairman Edward Gunnigle, who serves as secretary to the Council, and Executive President T.A. Pond. Tobler is chairman of the Council and calls the meeting to order.

Each Council member takes out a packet prepared in advance by Burness. The packet contains a tentative agenda, a report by Toll, relevant correspondence, and various facts and figures.

After approving the agenda, with minor modifications, Tobler yields to Toll for the president's report.

Toll begins by reviewing the final figures for the 1976-77 budget, going line by line, answering questions from the Council. Tobler said he has gotten reports from Legislators that the University may have some cuts restored. The Council has been meeting with Albany representatives. Toll then moves on to the concerns listed in his written report, which include the appointment of Gunnigle as president and executive director of the Stony Brook Foundation, a progress report on the Polity elections, and the controversy regarding porno star Jennifer Welles' performance last week. It is the last topic which draws considerable discussion from Council members, who complain that the concern in the State Legislature and among state taxpayers is not conducive to getting more funding for Stony Brook.

During Toll's report, Gelfond brings up the fact that his roommate, Glenn Taubman, is running for the Stony Brook Council student representative seat (Taubman is being opposed by William Harts and Tony Vacca). Upon being informed by Gelfond that Taubman has been called his double, one Council member expresses mock horror that the "ghost" of Rich Gelfond will plague the Council for another year.

Toll also suggests that the Council get around to naming the quads and roads on campus, and a committee is formed. The roads have never been officially named and the quads bear the names of their architects (Kelly, Roth, Tabler) or letters and numbers (G,H, Stage XII). Gelfond is the first name the Council selects for the committee, which will consist of seven members, and is asked to choose a graduate student as another committee member. "I trust you," Tobler comments.

The Council takes a yes/no vote on whether or not to approve the minutes (they pass it) and unanimously approve the nomination of R. Christian Anderson to be its vice chairman.

The new Public Safety Director, Robert Cornute, and Assistant Vice President for Finance and Business Robert Chason enter the meeting, and the Council members begin asking Cornute about his views on everything from marijuana to guns. It is the Council who will be involved in the decision with Toll, on whether Security should carry guns. Cornute says he presently sees no need for Security to be armed and says his department will not tolerate any drug dealing on campus.

About two hours after it starts, and after a date is set for the next meeting, the Council adjourns and goes out to dinner. It meets again at the end of May, will have a new student representative, and will approve names of the quads and roads, in addition to continuing to watch the operations of Stony Brook.

COUNCILMAN WILLIAM REAGAN flanked by the empty seats of his fellow Republican councilmen, who were absent.

Reagan: All Alone

Patchogue—At last Tuesday's Brookhaven Town Board meeting, Councilman William Reagan sat alone, flanked on either side of him by empty chairs. And not only did he sit alone, but he voted alone, as his two Republican colleagues on the Board were away on vacation.

The absence of Joel Lefkowitz and Robert Hughes caused the town to postpone decisions on several matters, including the new leash law. Reagan, however, was present, and sat by himself, with Lefkowitz' empty seat separating him from Town Clerk Eugene Dooley, a Democrat.

"By Myself"

"I should have gone to Puerto Rico," Reagan said after the meeting. He said he didn't know the other board members would be absent.

During the meeting, he made several comments about his being the lone Republican. Reagan voted against the acceptance of a used truck for the Town of Brookhaven. "I'm here by myself," he said. "I might as well say something." After the meeting, Reagan said he voted against the motion because it would cost $2,000 to repair. "I think it's ridiculous," he said.

Reagan's second moment came following the public hearing on a local law amendment and was promptly overruled by Town Supervisor John Randolph, who wanted to wait until the other two board members were present. Reagan threw up his hands and said, "I'll withdraw the motion. I'm alone."

He didn't introduce any new motions, or even opinions, during the rest of the meeting.

New Meal Plan Proposal

When the board heard of Pond's decision, it resolved that FSA President Bob Curran inform the University that it would not call for bid proposals for a mandatory meal plan. A compromise was worked out in which the plan would be mandatory next fall and voluntary for at least the next three semesters.

Unlimited Seconds

A major issue in the writing of the new bid specifications for the contract was a specification calling for unlimited seconds. The students on the board wanted to accept bids only on proposals that included unlimited seconds. Assistant Vice President for Finance and Business Robert Chason opposed this. He wanted to allow prospective contractors to bid on both a plan specifying unlimited seconds and one without. Chason said that he was concerned about how much unlimited seconds would cost the student and whether it would be worth the additional cost. The board decided, by a 4-3 vote, to only accept bids with provisions for unlimited seconds.

The FSA will accept bid proposals with provisions for 5, 15, and 19 meal/week plans. FSA Secretary Joel Peskoff said the board does not have to accept the lowest priced proposal because it is a private corporation. Besides price, the FSA will look for the best service and a record of the contractor's previous jobs.

Chason said that he expected the final proposal to be finished and submitted to Toll for approval by early next week, and that bids on it will be accepted soon thereafter.

Cornell Occupation Ends

More than 100 Cornell University students, who were protesting the firing of a black administrator, ended their occupation of an administration building early yesterday morning after legal action was initiated against them.

The students, who had threatened earlier to remain in Day Hall until their demands were met, left the building at about 2:30 AM. Many of them emerged with coats or hoods drawn over their heads to hide their identities.

The students left after a temporary restraining order, which called for the students to vacate the building immediately, was read to them at about 1 AM. The students, mostly black, had taken over two buildings Tuesday afternoon, but relinquished one several hours later.

Speaking through a bullhorn, a Syracuse attorney read parts of the order, which was signed by state Supreme Court Justice Frederick Bryant. It had been sought by university officials who stood by the recent dismissal of Herbert Parker, a black who had held the post of assistant financial aid director. The students had demanded that Parker be reinstated and that there be a greater minority role in university policy making.

Price Control End Proposed

The Federal Energy Administration said yesterday it wants to end price control and allocation of home heating oil, diesel fuel and other "middle distillate" oils by July 1.

Administrator Frank Zarb said the proposal if carried out, would have virtually no effect on consumer prices. The FEA said it would hold public hearings and consider comments before deciding whether to send the proposal to Congress.

Under the law, the proposal would take effect after it is submitted to Congress unless either the House or Senate disapproves within 15 days.

The agency has already proposed ending controls on residual oil, a heavy fuel oil, and Zarb said it would act, when appropriate, to end controls on other petroleum products including gasoline and jet fuel. He did not specify any date.

Nadjari Levels Charges

Continuing a probe of the alleged sale of Bronx judgeships, Special Prosecutor Maurice Nadjari announced the indictment yesterday of a Democratic district leader on charges of concealing and destroying evidence sought by a grand jury.

State Democratic Chairman Patrick Cunningham, who also is a target in the probe, was not mentioned in the indictment of John Whalen, 50, although he was referred to in his role as Bronx party leader. Cunningham, who has sought to avoid testifying before the special grand jury, is up for re-election to his state-wide post today.

A federal court yesterday struck down an unconstitutional New York state law which would have barred Cunningham from office for refusing to testify without immunity before a grand jury.

Cunningham reacted indignantly to the Whalen indictment, calling it a "political smear" by Nadjari, a Republican.

Ford Gets Refund

President Gerald Ford, who paid $94,568.93 in 1975 federal income taxes, only waited a couple of weeks to get a refund check of $11,631.07 from the Internal Revenue Service.

Ford's press secretary, Ron Nessen, released on Tuesday a detailed report on Ford's income tax return showing the President made $251,991.24 last year and had taxable income of $204,605.83.

Nessen said Ford's tax forms were filed earlier this month and that he received his refund check during the past week.

When asked why Ford "seems to get speedier service from the IRS than the rest of us," Nessen gave no answer other than to smile.

Nessen said Ford paid $38,200 more in federal taxes in 1975 than he did the previous year. Gross income included the President's salary, his $50,000 expense account and $1,991.24 in savings account interest, small dividends and a net return on rental property the Fords own in Virginia, Michigan and Colorado.

Correction

Statesman incorrectly reported in Wednesday's issue that Polity presidential candidate Wendy Gurton failed to show up at an interview scheduled for her to air her views and comment on her candidacy. Through a misunderstanding, however, Gurton was under the false impression that excerpts of her platform would be printed—unaware of Statesman's new policy of not printing political platforms. Monday's issue will feature a full interview with Gurton. Statesman regrets the error.

Is There No Truth?

To The Editor:

I do not often resort to such language but I can unequivocally say, without fear of libel, that Bill Harts, candidate for Stony Brook Council knowingly lied in the recent article "Taubman vs. Harts for Council Representative."

When Harts asked, "Where was the Stony Brook Council when they raised tuition and room rates?" he obviously knew the right answer. I was in Albany teaching him how to lobby. The rest of the Council was meeting with legislators. When he asks, "Why didn't the Stony Brook Council representative say anything when the Council gave its approval to cutting back faculty positions?" he obviously knows the answer to that. I told him, too. I was in meetings with administrators, legislators and others students fighting my ass off. I ask where the hell was Bill Harts? He knew exactly where I was. I told him.

Lies and Misinformation

To The Editor:

Lies and misinformation have resulted in a misconception about the Town's use of Community Development Funds. I would like to state categorically that Brookhaven Town can not and will not use Community Development Funds to build low cost housing.

What are some of the legitimate uses for the $250,000 that we might get?

One use that immediately comes to mind is for street lights. At the Town Hall we get constant calls from Brookhaven residents to improve the safety of the area by installing street lights. Presently, the Town's Budget can provide only 100 street lights for 1976. Part of the $250,000 in Community Development Funds could be allocated for the erection of street lights.

Drainage is a problem, and in the Mastic and Shirley area, there are citizens' complaints dating back to 1970 which have been ignored, supposedly for lack of funds. We can use part of the $250,000 for drainage.

There are many problems which can be solved, if the money is available. The argument that Federal Funds are dirty and should not be used by Brookhaven Town infuriates me. We all pay taxes to the Federal Government. Federal Funds are dollars and cents that you and I have paid. I am tired of having our money used for other Towns. If Brookhaven Town does not accept the Community Development Funds, these funds could be used to provide lights and drainage for Huntington and Islip Towns. The Federal Funds should be used for the benefit of the residents of Brookhaven Town.

I would be delighted to meet and talk with any group or individual who is interested in finding out the truth about the Community Development Funds. Please feel free to call or write me at Brookhaven Town Hall, 205 South Ocean Avenue, Patchogue, New York 11772 (Telephone: 475-550).

Inaccurate Information

To the Editor:

I would like to take this opportunity to clear up any misconceptions which might have arisen in response to the article, "Taubman vs. Harts" which appeared in the April 12 Statesman.

Some of the information was based upon inaccurate information which was furnished to me by usually reliable sources. I can not state enough times, that the playing down of Mr. Gelfond's achievements and accomplishments was the furthest thing from my mind. Rather, I feel that he has made a powerful contribution to the Stony Brook Council, especially in light of the fact that he was the first student to hold that position.

My statement regarding the Three Village Inn was taken totally out of context. I did not imply that Gelfond's sole function was to attend dinner engagements. I was only trying to show that my methods of dealing with the council would be different from those of my predecessor.

It is important to me to maintain a nonslanted view of the past, as I hope it is to you. I hope that this letter will correct any deviation from that view.

William R. Harts

Ambiguity

To The Editor:

An open letter to Mildred Steinberg: The Suffolk County Legislature wisely supported a motion to go on record favoring the defense of a law suit against the Town of Brookhaven by the Suffolk Housing Coalition and in effect go to court as amicus curae (friend of the court) supporting the Town of Brookhaven.

The above motion was carried by a 13-5 vote, and you were one of the five who objected to the idea of defending the Town of Brookhaven. You are quoted as saying, "The Town's zoning laws are exclusionary in a certain sense." Just what do you mean by a "certain sense"? In my opinion this vote and your explanation is indicative of a lack of responsiveness to those who you claim are your constituents.

You are paid a handsome salary, plus expenses for a part-time position and your legislative productive ability is glaringly noticeable by its absence. Your negative vote indicated your desire to discard the zoning laws of Brookhaven, and open the door for the hordes of speculators. Is it possible that you have a magic formula that will create low cost homes and apartments, or to permit subsidized housing that will increase the school enrollment along with additional public services, which will not increase the cost to the working taxpayer? If so, notify Mayor Beame and he will be indebted to you.

As an elected official your responsibility is to serve the interests of the public, as opposed to a political motivation that does not speak to the issue at hand, and is camouflaged by an ambiguous statement.

Knoshing Bad Milk

To The Editor:

I am writing this letter to you because I have gotten six bad quarts of milk at the Knosh this week. I have been stuck with bad milk previously, that I have bought from the Knosh. Last year, there was some article in Statesman about someone getting bad milk at the Knosh. I have gotten stuck with bad food at every other Horn & Hardart facility on campus as well, except for Kelly cafeteria, because I only ate there once in the two years I have been at Stony Brook. At least if they are going to charge these outrageous prices we should be guaranteed eatable food. Many of my friends are afraid of buying dairy products from the Knosh. They are surprised if it tastes okay.

Now that I am a sophomore and I don't have to be on the meal plan, I buy most of my food at Pathmark. I think nothing of keeping milk in my refrigerator that I buy from Pathmark for two weeks.

On Sunday I bought a quart of milk at the Knosh. Monday morning it was bad. The milk was dated April 16. Monday was April 12. I threw it out.

Tuesday night I bought a quart of milk at the Knosh. Wednesday morning it was sour. I brought it back to the Knosh. The lady in charge gave me two "new" quarts of milk to replace the bad ones. When I got back to my suite I tasted the milk and immediately it was nauseating. I brought it up to Polity right after that. Everyone there agreed with me that the milk was bad. Someone from Polity or someone directly related to Polity and myself went down to the Knosh. We talked to the lady in charge. She tasted the milk and said it tasted okay but naturally I didn't believe her; she was obviously trying to make me shut up! She gave me two quarts of milk dated April 19. I brought it up to Polity; they said that it was turning bad and not to expect to have breakfast tomorrow morning. Today I woke up and found that the milk dated the 19th had turned bad. I went to Mr. Moffett and I told him the milk story. He went down to the Knosh. The manager gave me credit and Tom Moffett told Luther to check up on his distributor.

Bring Home the Pats

The Stony Brook baseball team got lucky this year. Fifteen of its 19 playing dates were scheduled as home games. The home field advantage: knowing the field, no travel, home fans, additional time for the players to be students.

But no. The playing field, which the Queens College coach refused to let his team play a double header on last year risking a double forfeit was not renovated as it was supposed to be. There would be a two week delay before the Patriots would be able to play on their own field. Until then they would play at the Main Street Elementary School field in Setauket or at Suffolk Community College's field in Selden. Wednesday's game, three weeks into the season, was played in Selden.

We all know how long it took for the showers to be fixed so we could use the pool—a semester and a half. Work has not even begun on the baseball field. The bids for a contract are just now going out. We condemn the physical education department, under the direction of Elaine Budde, for its inconsideration to the members of the baseball team and its rooters.

We hope that by next year, when by coincidence the Patriots are scheduled to play half as many home games, that their home field will be available.

Queens vs. Adderley: 9 Walks, 3 Hits, 0 Runs

By GERALD REIS

Selden — Through 3 1/3 innings, Queens College had scored four runs off Stony Brook starting pitcher Mike Sweeney on three hits, five walks, and two Patriot errors. At that point freshman Jon Adderley relieved Sweeney with the score tied at four. Adderley allowed three hits and nine walks, but no runs the rest of the way, as the Pats upset Queens, 10-4 Wednesday at Suffolk Community College.

"I wasn't following through," Adderley said, explaining his wildness. "It's always been a problem. I was throwing too much with my arm and not enough with my body. "He wasn't bending his back enough," Patriot catcher Gary McArdle said. "When he comes over with the back he can be very good."

"College ball is different than high school," Adderley said. "In high school you could get away with throwing the ball down the middle, but in college, if you lay the ball down the middle, they're gonna hit it. You have to try to move it around, and I haven't gotten it yet."

Adderley had to work out of trouble every inning except the fifth. Over the last four innings, Queens left 10 men on base, bringing their total to 16. "I told Jon to give it all he had," McArdle said, "because we had Ray [Helinski] ready to come in next. His change was the most effective because he was keeping it down low."

While Queens was wasting their opportunities, the Patriots won the game with a string of hits in a six run fifth. After designated hitter Jamie Miller opened the inning with a walk, and Mike Caneva sacrificed him to second, four straight singles by Billy Ianniciello, McArdle, Steve Kelske, and Mike Garofola knocked Queens starter Billy Danler out of the game. Reliever Bruce Pfeiffer walked two, and then Miller, who started the rally, drove in two runs with a bouncer up the middle.

Before Wednesday's game, Queens was 4-0 in the Knickerbocker Conference. "They're a better ballclub than they showed," said Stony Brook coach Rick Smoliak. "They must have played super to beat Tech and Pace. We were fortunate to catch them on a bad day. The important thing for us is that we got the big hits when we needed them."

The umpires were the object of criticism throughout the day. Twice Smoliak ran out on the field to protest calls by the base umpire. Adderley and McArdle were upset with the home plate umpire's version of the strike zone. "Once I asked the umpire for a new ball," McArdle said. "I told him the one we were using didn't have any strikes left in it."

Queens wasn't happy with the umpires either, as their first base coach was thrown out of the game after disputing a close play.

Stony Brook is now 4-2 in the conference and 9-6 overall... The Patriots play a doubleheader against York College Sunday at Creedmore Psychiatric Center in Queens Village beginning at 11 AM.

Billiards Expert 'Cue Ball' Kelly: 'Pool Is What Keeps Me a Young 80'

By RON COHEN

He looks and sounds like the average grandfather, but then again the average grandfather can't say that he is the only man in the history of billiards to bank 15 balls in rotation starting from the 1 to the 15 ball or claim to be the only referee in the world that spent every penny that he earned to promote the game of pocket billiards.

The man is 80-year-old 'Cue Ball' Kelly and while devoting all of his life to the game of billiards, he currently can be found every day in the pool room in the Union basement. Kelly, who has taught the game of billiard to such celebrities as Peter Falk, Jackie Gleason, and Desi Arnaz, is currently teaching students at Stony Brook the art of pool.

"Before I came here I had heard how bad a place Stony Brook is," Kelly said. "The kids are a little crazy here but I like it. Since I've been here the business has gone up steadily."

Successful Exhibition

Last year, Kelly put on a free exhibition at Stony Brook and afterwards there was a petition with 500 names on it asking for him to stay here. He has been teaching the game in the Union poolroom since the beginning of the spring semester.

"The kids look up to me and respect me," said Kelly, who was elected to the Billiards National Hall of Fame in 1974. "One kid here who thought he was a hustler tried to play me and I cured him. When I got through with him, he found out that he really didn't know what the hell is going on. Some kids come in wild here but I straighten them out real fast."

Born Carl Zingale, Kelly was the second of 24 children, he said. He learned about the game of pool in the streets of New York at the age of 11 and started gaining recognition in 1930 when he won the New York State Billiards Tournament. It was also back then when he started the 'King of the Hill' Tournaments throughout the country.

"I put this game on the map," said Kelly. "When everyone was hungry I'd feed them with tournaments. At one time I spent over $90,000 in 12 years to feed the bums, only because I knew what it meant to be hungry. I guess you could consider me a pool player's best friend. Every pool player knows that when they are down and need help that I'll be there to help him."

Kelly claims that he's happiest when he can take a young person out and make a champion pool player out of him. He is very proud of the fact that 50 years ago he was the first to promote a black man in a World's Billiards Tournament. To this day Kelly can be found spending many summer days in Harlem playing pool with the youths in that area.

"The game of pool has cleaned up a lot since the old days," said Kelly. "Years ago the game of pool had a bad image, but today the pool halls have been cleaned up of bad influences and more people play it now than ever."

Besides playing pool, Kelly spends a great deal of time doing benefits for the Heart Fund, March of Dimes, Cerebral Palsy, Wounded Vets, and Catholic and Jewish Funds. In addition, he has made several television appearances. Appearing on "The Mike Douglas Show," "The Tonight Show," and on May 14 he will be a guest on "The Joe Franklin Show." He claims that he has traveled over a million miles over his career and that he loves every minute of it.

Kelly is the most respected referee in the nation. He has refereed over 10,000 games during his life, including for every champion since 1920. "Pool is what keeps me a young 80," said Kelly, who will be getting married next month to a 72-year-old woman. "Getting married won't slow me down either. My future wife knows that I still plan on running around the country."

"I've done almost everything during my life, I know every racket in the world but I keep my mouth shut and that's why I'm still alive. I have to live every day to the fullest since I might drop dead tomorrow. If I look in the newspaper tomorrow and don't see my name in the obituary column, I know I'm safe for another day and go out to make people happy. Everybody has a purpose in life and this is mine."
