

Controversy Clouding Oktoberfest

By NATE RABINOVICH

The upcoming Oktoberfest is being coordinated by the Office of Student Affairs and Residence Hall Directors (RHDs) in Tabler Quad. Polity President Keith Scarmato has voiced strong objections to this action.

According to Scarmato, the Oktoberfest, which is scheduled to take place in the Tabler Cafeteria the weekend of October 6 and 7, should be supervised only by the student staffs that had run the event, along with the Springfest, until the spring semester of last year. The fests are student celebrations held once a semester, which traditionally are very popular and very well attended.

Organization of last year's Springfest was also implemented by student staffs in Tabler in conjunction with Vice President of Student Affairs Elizabeth Wadsworth and Tabler RHDs. According to Wadsworth, a general supervision of these events was necessitated by the abuse of facilities in the Tabler Cafeteria, when the events took place. Wadsworth said that during the Oktoberfest last fall, a $15,000 window in the cafeteria was broken, the floor was damaged, and facilities of Ha Kotel, a kosher food cooperative which operates in the cafeteria, were not properly protected.

"Tabler Cafeteria isn't under the supervision of the Quad Director and staff and because it has other tenants, the simplest way to coordinate the planning of the fest involving everyone affected was to do it from my office," Wadsworth said. Eugene V. Debs, another food cooperative also operated in the cafeteria.

According to Wadsworth, shortly after the last Oktoberfest, she was "inundated" with complaints from various sources about how the event was run. Shortly thereafter, she sent out a questionnaire to every residence hall asking about the advantages and disadvantages of having events like the Springfest and Oktoberfest. Wadsworth said that while there was a favorable overall response, she was informed by Residential Assistants

(RAs) in several buildings in Tabler that a number of halls objected to the events. She met with then Tabler Quad Director May Padula, Douglass RHD Carole Rockman, and several students involved with the events to discuss procedures of operation; it was decided that subsequent events would be coordinated through Student Affairs.

Awareness Day Held For the Handicapped

By ELIZABETH MOUSSAS

Anyone walking through the Stony Brook Union yesterday might have noticed an unusual amount of activity. It was Awareness Day, an all day program sponsored by two student organizations on campus to increase people's awareness of the problems of handicapped people.

The events began at 9 AM and included various workshops, films, agency presentations, and a wheelchair basketball game in the gym. The events finished off with a reception in the Stony Brook Union ballroom, sponsored by the March of

Presses Begin Rolling Next Week For Low Cost Polity Print Shop

By RICH BERGOVOY

The Polity Print Shop, which provided low-cost offset printing to University students and organizations, should re-open by next week, according to Polity Executive Director Bill Camarda.

According to Camarda, he will recommend a new printer to the Polity Council today, who should then resume operations in the print shop. "We hope to print the Polity campaign material. There would have to be someone in there tomorrow," Camarda said yesterday.

The print shop has been closed since mid-August, when the Council fired former Polity printer Mike Kelly. "Mike was very good, and expanded the operation rapidly, but there was some concern whether Mike was using Polity equipment for his own business," explained Camarda. Kelly could not be reached for comment.

Polity President Keith Scarmato, a member of the Polity Council, said that he and Camarda had narrowed down the applicants to two, from an original field of five. Scarmato said that ads for the position had been placed in Newsday and other publications. Camarda added that the two final candidates both had backgrounds in printing for educational institutions. But Camarda declined to name them until a final decision is made.

The Polity Print Shop has been operating in the Union basement for the past 2½ years. It is equipped with an offset press, a paper plate maker, and a Xerox machine. According to Camarda, the print shop will also have a metal plate maker and a paper collater, once these machines are repaired.

"Compared to outside printers, we're hoping to keep prices lower across the board," Camarda. He explained that the print shop formerly charged about 1.5 cents a sheet the first 100 copies of offset material, while outside printers charged about 2.5 cents a sheet. "We're a non-profit operation," said Camarda, explaining the price difference. But he added that the shop is subsidized by activity fee money whenever it loses money, as it did last year. According to Camarda, the print shop grossed a total of $13,000 from September 1977 through August 1978.

Most of the print shop's business came from campus organizations. "We do a lot of in-house stuff" said Camarda, "Polity minutes, SAB concert posters, and student publications, like the Stony Brook Moon. We could probably do Fortnight — that would probably be our limit. We could also probably do resumes for students."

Camarda said that the print shop would cut down its operations from 40 hours a week to 20-25 hours a week. Another change for the newly re-opened print shop will concentration on campus customers rather than community customers. Camarda added that he would more closely supervise the operations of the new printer.

The Polity Print Shop was established in 1976, at the suggestion of then Polity President Gerry Manginelli and Treasurer Mark Minasi. "We were paying a fortune for outside printing, which we realized was totally unnecessary," explained Camarda.

Tel Aviv, Israel (AP) — Would-be Jewish settlers used fists to fight Israeli troops who began to evict them yesterday from an outpost set up on the West Bank of the Jordan River in defiance of the Camp David accords.

The Hague, Netherlands (AP) — About 800 pounds of hashish with a street value of almost $400,000 washed up on beaches near the Hook of Holland earlier this week, police said yesterday.

Police said they believe the hashish, which was packed in cans and sacks, was dumped overboard by a smuggling vessel forced into port unexpectedly by heavy weather. Authorities said the smugglers probably feared a customs check and discarded the contraband.

Washington (AP) — President Jimmy Carter's welcome yesterday for President Jaafar el Numairi of the Sudan was interrupted by an unexpected visitor — a sparrow that flew around the White House Oval Office.

Numairi had entered Carter's office through the French doors that lead from the Rose Garden. The sparrow apparently made its entrance at the same time.

While the two leaders were meeting in the adjoining Cabinet Room, the bird flew out through doors that had been left open in the Oval Office.

New York (AP) — The publishers of New York's three biggest dailies took no action yesterday to reopen talks in the six-week-old newspaper strike, saying they were waiting for a sign from the striking pressmen.

The publishers of the New York Times, Daily News and New York Post met at length and then put off a decision on whether to accept a top federal mediator's bid to reopen the stalled negotiations in Washington.

Washington (AP) — If the energy required to maintain the fat on overweight Americans was used to generate electricity, it could supply the annual residential needs of Boston, Chicago, San Francisco and Washington, D.C., according to scientists Bruce M. Hannon and Timothy G. Lohman at the University of Illinois at Urbana.

New York (AP) — Israeli Prime Minister Menachem Begin found himself embroiled in New York gubernatorial politics yesterday but quickly took steps to extricate himself from an embarrassing situation.

Reacting to reports in the press yesterday that he had indirectly endorsed incumbent Governor Hugh Carey, a Democrat, in his November reelection bid, the prime minister called Carey's opponent, Republican-Conservative candidate Perry Duryea, and invited him to the Regency Hotel for a meeting.

Anxious to show he wasn't playing favorites in the gubernatorial campaign, Begin told the press at the start of the meeting: "Governor Carey is my friend. It's true, he's been in Israel. But Mr. Duryea is my friend, too. As you see, I don't interfere in New York state politics." Smiling and looking relaxed, the prime minister told Duryea of the Camp David summit reaction:

"There is rejoicing in Israel. There is rejoicing in America. Some others are objecting. But, as the French say, 'C'est la vie' — That's life."

New York (AP) — An Ithaca businessman held a statewide conference on juvenile justice here yesterday a day after it was learned he was wanted on charges of being a fugitive from Texas and Arkansas.

Iranians Protest

ON WEDNESDAY, 15 IRANIAN STUDENTS and sympathizers from the Red Balloon marched on the Stony Brook Union, to protest what they called, "U.S. military support of the fascist regime of the Shah." At 11 AM, they assembled in front of the Union, carrying placards which proclaimed "Support Iranian People, Smash Fascism," "Shah is a Murderer, Down With The Shah," and "Iran Is Another Viet Nam, U.S. Get Out of Iran." For two hours they marched and chanted.

Fischer Outpolls Manginelli in Senate Primary

By MIKE KORNFELD

The official results of the first race are in, and Gerry Manginelli is out.

The final results of the vote reconvening at the Board of elections offices in Yaphank show the former Polity president 310 votes short of victory in his bid for the Democratic nomination for the first district State Senate seat. The declared winner, Neil Fischer, a certified public accountant, garnered 3,390 votes, while Manginelli received 3,080.

Manginelli, 25, attempted to put together a strong grass roots coalition to wrest the Democratic Party nomination from party designee Fischer. While reconvening of the votes cast in primary and general elections is a common practice, it is not all that often that the release official results exceeds a week. But the closeness of the race, coupled with charges of voting irregularities, delayed an official Board of Elections decision for nine days.

Both candidates maintain that they were hurt by the storm which occurred on Primary Day. Said Fischer, "had it not been for the rain, we would have won by a much larger margin." Manginelli disagreed. "We would have benefitted from a good voter turnout, and the rain prevented this," he said.

Not only was the election close, it was also plagued with voting irregularities. Several polling places in Yaphank, Coram, and Stony Brook closed hours prior to the official 9 PM closing time. According to Manginelli, at least two people who brought flashlights to illuminate the mechanical voting machines at the Mount School in Stony Brook, were not allowed to vote because of the storm.

"Those are not irregularities, they are acts of God," said Democratic Commissioner of the Suffolk County Board of Elections Frank Coveney, in defending the decisions made by polling inspectors during the storm.

"I think our inspectors exercised good judgement under the circumstances," he said. According to an aide to Coveney, State Supreme Court Judge John Jones has said he saw no reason to keep the polls open during the storm. Jones could not be reached for comment. But speculation about possible election challenges now seems moot.

Fischer, asked to reflect on the primary campaign and the upcoming general election said "It's a new experience for me. You learn a lot about people — their needs, and desires," he said. Fischer contends that unfair taxation is the most pressing problem for Long Islanders, and says he will continue to emphasize the need for equalization of taxation in his campaign.

Stressed Concern

He stressed his concern about the present method of funding public education, but unlike Manginelli, Fischer does not support a shift to a state income tax as a funding mechanism. Rather, he would continue to use the property tax to fund education, but would add a limitation level based upon real income.

"This would make the property tax less costly, and more equitable," he contends. He also said he would seek a general redistribution of property tax dollars to areas where they are most needed. Fischer said he will not cater to special interest groups, but would like to meet with students and form a student support committee. Fischer looks forward toward taking on Senator Kenneth LaValle (R-Port Jefferson) in November.

The final tabulations in the First

GERRY MANGINELLI

District Democratic Congressional primary are also in. They show the victor John Randolph leading his nearest challenger, Pat Russell, a Stony Brook graduate student, and a teaching assistant in the medical ethics program at the Health Sciences Center, by 351 votes out of over 12,000 votes cast. Steve Klar placed third with 1,644 votes, followed by John Casese with 850 votes. John Minto trailed with 412. Randolph will face Republican-Conservative William Carney and the Liberal candidate, in November.

Scarmato: Wadsworth Controlling Oktoberfest

Affairs] to gain control over other events on campus. Scarmato felt that "last year, Student Affairs was able to gain control because of division within Polity."

Statesman reported several weeks ago that both Residence Life and Student Affairs intended to supervise the operation of on campus bars in coordination with the staffs of those businesses.

When asked if these efforts as well as those dealing with the operation of events in Tabler were part of an overall attempt to manage student operations on campus,

Wadsworth replied, "Yes. I think that for too long student and staff people have been careless about how they managed many events and how they managed many businesses and facilities."

"Among the results have been excessive damage, some victimization, unsafe and insecure conditions, and a failure to protect people and facilities. The action I'm doing is merely minimizing bad outcomes."

The two Tabler RHDs that are involved with the coordination of this year's Oktoberfest with Student Affairs are Larry Siegal of Toscanini College and Larry Beer of Sanger College.

"I see my and Larry's role as strictly supervisory," Siegal said when asked what functions he and Beer were expected to perform. "We've been working with students, helping them do things that they wouldn't ordinarily do by themselves," Siegal said, later adding that "We're supervising in the sense that if someone needs advice they'll know we're available."

When informed of Wadsworth's statements, Scarmato said, "I think that's a nice euphemism for saying, 'We've been incompetent for too long and we have to justify our existence on campus'".

FSA Honors Three Seniors With Scholarships

By MARK SCHUSSEL

The Faculty Student Association (FSA) awarded scholarships to three seniors on Wednesday. FSA President Joel Peskoff made the presentations in a luncheon ceremony held at the End of the Bridge restaurant.

The winner of the top award was Robert Patino, who received $350 in recognition of his work in establishing Stony Brook Safety Services, an organization that provides safety services and instruction on campus. Patricia Martinez received $250 for her work in establishing the March of Dimes Young Adults Coffee House. Roslyn Rona also received $250 for organizing Women in Transition, a counseling service to help housewives make the transition to student life. All three of the winners will use their awards to help pay for their educations.

According to FSA Chief Operating Officer John Songster, the awards were created last year when the FSA Board of Directors approved an annual, undergraduate scholarship based on improvement of campus life and academic excellence. The Board placed an ad in Statesman and sent letters to department chairmen, to notify all potential applicants of the criteria for the awards. Only seven students submitted applications, out of which three were chosen by the judges and approved by the Board.

The purpose of the FSA scholarships is to return some of FSA's surplus money to the campus, according to Songster. The FSA is a non-profit organization which supervises and supports many campus businesses such as the Union Bowling Alley, the James Pub, the check cashing service, and many campus laundry and vending machines.

Patino, a political science major, would like to go either into law, politics, government or medicine.

According to Songster, Patino received the top award because his contribution most benefitted the campus as a whole.

Martinez, a psychology major, would like to pursue a career in child psychology for the handicapped. She feels that "people should become more aware of the handicapped."

Rona, a social science major, intends to become a social worker. She said that she "appreciates FSA for recognizing the non-traditional student on this campus."

Watch for Big Brother

Statesman has repeatedly warned the student body that the administration is gradually trying to rake back all the power it lost to the students in the 1960's. In our last issue, we admonished Polity not to lose its fiscal responsibility because returning the $800,000 of student activity fees to administration control is the ultimate goal of those enriched bureaucrats.

So far, administrators had seemingly good excuses to tighten their clamps. Then they saw that some dormitories did not have program coordinators (even if the student staff did good jobs by themselves) they decided to hire Residence Hall Directors (RHDs) so that they could supervise the residential colleges more closely. This year, some RHDs have taken unilateral action without consulting college legislatures. This is the first step.

For many years, the Oktober and Springfests in Tabler Quad were run smoothly by the students. Despite the inevitable vandalism that results from parties of this size, Vice President for Student Affairs Elizabeth Wadsworth suddenly noticed this problem and decreed that only the RHDs may run the fest now.

There is only one weapon to use in this case. Polity should resolve that none of its funds be spent on activities that the students cannot administer by themselves. Why should we spend what is essentially our tax dollars on something that we have no say in running?

Setting It Straight

There are some who may have taken last issue's editorial concerning the Polity Judiciary's decision to allow Polity President Keith Scarmato to sign checks as an attack on the ability or integrity of Scarmato. And no doubt some felt it presented a defense of Polity Treasurer Randy Brown whose delinquency is not disputable.

To set the facts straight, Scarmato has been doing a damn good job as Polity president and under the immediate circumstances, Statesman has no reservations about his check signing activities. Nor do we feel that Brown deserves anything less than what he deserves when he is attacked for the way he is operating, or more importantly not operating.

But Statesman's warning should not be taken lightly.

If the Polity president can sign checks, the Polity treasurer does not have to, and if the next Polity president attempts to do so, he can take more control over student government than is safe for the future survival of Polity as an effective student government.

One Last Word

Perhaps now that the election is over, it's a moot point, but we are sorry that Gerry Manginelli was defeated in his bid for the Democratic nomination for State Senate seat in New York's First District.

Manginelli was and is one of us. As Polity president he stood up for the students' rights, and as a political candidate, he also spoke of the concerns of a neglected segment of our community, the student population.

And Manginelli's defeat was not only a defeat for students, it was a defeat for the notion that reformers can beat the organization hacks, and a defeat for the notion that young people should have a voice in government. We can only wish him good luck in all his future endeavors, and hope that his impressive showing against great odds has alerted the Democratic Party of the effectiveness of youth oriented campaigns.

We hope that Gerry Manginelli will continue to remain in the forefront of state and local government and that the Democratic Party will recognize his great potential, his campaigning strengths, his effectiveness in dealing with people, and his commitment to improving society, and will run him for office in the future.

Correction

In the same story, headlined "Freshman Student Is Struck by Car," Senior Electronic Computer Operator Bernard Skoll, the driver, insists that Pierre was not struck by the car, but rather that she struck the car.

Applause

To the Editor:

As a work study employee in the Polity office I find it difficult not to applaud the Polity Judiciary's decision on the ability of the president to sign checks. Statesman's worry about the treasurer never showing up at the Polity office has been a reality since the beginning of the semester and is a direct cause of the political maneuvering that has taken place.

However, I must agree with Statesman that it sets a bad precedent for the future. It cannot be assumed that the president will always act responsibly, or at least more responsibly than the treasurer. It seems to me that the way to deal with an ineffectual or indifferent elected official is to have him recalled. While admittedly this is a pain in the ass, it represents a legitimate recourse rather than usurping the power of the position politically.

Ronald Stuart Cohen

Objection

To the Editor:

I, as a member of the Polity Judiciary, object to the implications set forth in your editorial dated September 20, 1978. The impression that the editorial conveyed is one of blame and fault upon the Judiciary ruling involving check signing. However, the blame lies not on the Judiciary for making the ruling, but on the elected official who neglected his duty and to vague and ambiguous Polity Council Legislation. This legislation left it unclear as to who indeed does have check signing powers.

What the Judiciary had to vote on Tuesday night wasn't whether the President of Polity may or may not sign checks, but rather, whether or not the Student Council can put anyone it deems necessary on the Polity account. This means anyone: me, the president of Polity, and even the treasurer — anyone.

The unfortunate consequences that arose from this situation were that if the Judiciary deemed the legislation unconstitutional for the Student Council to put the president of Polity on the Polity account, it would also be unconstitutional for the Treasurer to be put on the account. This is because only legislative bodies, not judicial bodies, can put stipulations into legislation. If this were to be the case, we would no longer have any legislation that would allow even the treasurer to sign checks. Therefore, to the majority of the Judiciary, the only possible solution, due to faulty legislation, was to declare the Student Council's legislation constitutional. If they had not, at this time, the only person that would be able to sign checks would be the Executive Director.

The ruling, therefore, should not be blamed on the Judiciary. What is presently needed is a treasurer who is constantly doing his or her job, and the new legislation being introduced specifically outlining who checks will be signed by and under what circumstances. That will have to be taken up by either the Council or Senate.

Handicapped Awareness

Dimes.

According to Monica Roth from the Office For The Disabled, the idea of Awareness Day came from the People United to Support the Handicapped (PUSH), an organization of handicapped students here on campus. Roth said they organized themselves with Volunteers Involved Together for Action in Life (VITAL), an organization that recruits and places volunteers in jobs on campus and in the community.

The workshops conducted included such topics as Transportation for the Handicapped, Tours for the Handicapped, Employment and Education for the Handicapped, Organizing the Handicapped, Attitudes towards the Handicapped, and New Legislation for the Handicapped.

Senator Kenneth LaValle (R-Port Jefferson) lead the new legislation workshop. LaValle reviewed the provisions of the Rehabilitation Act of 1973 and discussed the problems of implementing federal and state regulations concerning the handicapped on a local level.

"We have reached an enlightenment period as far as legislation for the handicapped is concerned, but we have not brought about a sensitivity on the part of the general public to the needs of the handicapped," said LaValle. He added, "This is why we're having this Handicapped Awareness Day."

Films were shown in the Union auditorium all day until about 4 PM. The films covered different aspects of a handicapped person's life, and how integration is achieved.

An obstacle course for a wheelchair was set up in the main lounge of the Union for handicapped students to try. Also in the main lounge were representatives of various associations connected with handicaps, and a videotape of handicapped people discussing the problems they are faced with and how they deal with it.

Following these events was a wheelchair basketball game in which the Stony Brook team played Farmingdale. The final event was a reception.

Stony Brook student David Green commented, "I think they did a nice job. I think that anyone who attended it got something out of it."

Pittsburgh and Boston Keep the Pressure On

With barely two weeks left to play in major league baseball both the American and National League Eastern divisions are still up for grabs.

In the American League East, the Yankees remained two full games ahead of Boston as Catfish Hunter and Rich Gossage combined on a five-hitter, and the New York Yankees scored three runs in the fifth inning, two on Reggie Jackson's opposite field double, and four more in the seventh to crush the Toronto Blue Jays 7-1 last night.

Bucky Dent started the fifth inning rally with a one-out walk, took third on Mikey Rivers' double and, after a walk to Willie Randolph, scored New York's first run on Thurman Munson's sacrifice fly.

Jackson then cleared the bases with his game-winning hit, lashing a one-strike pitch from loser Bailor Moore, 6-8, into the left field corner.

Randolph's triple scored Rivers with the first Yankee run in the seventh. Munson followed with a single and Lou Piniella and Chris Chambliss then connected for run-scoring doubles.

Hunter, 11-5, scattered four hits before giving way to Gossage at the start of the seventh. Gossage picked up his 24th save, tops in the league.

And while the Yankees were assaulting the Toronto pitching staff, Boston was keeping pace behind.

Dennis Eckersley scattered six hits for his 18th victory and Carlton Fisk snapped a prolonged slump with an RBI single in a three-run first inning as the Boston Red Sox defeated the Detroit Tigers 5-1 last night.

Eckersley lifted his record to 18-8, going all the way for the 14th time. It was his ninth victory after a Red Sox loss the game before.

Rick Burleson opened the game with a single for Boston and Carl Yastrzemski walked with two out. Fisk followed with a run-scoring single, snapping an 0-for-22 string.

Meanwhile over in the National League, the Pittsburgh Pirates continued applying the pressure when pinch-runner Matt Alexander stole second and scored on a pair of wild throws on the same play in the 14th inning yesterday giving the Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory over the Chicago Cubs.

The victory moved the Pir within a game and a half of front running Philadelphia Phil who were rained out in Mont

Houk Ends Long Career

Detroit (AP) — "I finally came to the conclusion it's time for me to go fishing," said Detroit Tiger manager Ralph Houk, as the 59 year old veteran of 40 years in baseball announced his retirement.

"I made a decision to retire after the season and spend some time with my wife."

Tough Decision

Houk said "it was a tough decision to make. We have a fine club after four rough years. It was not an easy thing to do. I was fortunate I could finish my career in Detroit, where there are so many fine baseball fans."

Houk said the Tigers have given him a job as consultant but added, "What that means I don't know."

The Tigers struggled under Houk's first four seasons, changing over from aging veterans — who brought Detroit a World Series title in 1968 — to youngsters brought up from the minors.

Detroit, although fifth in the American League East, has a much better record 81-70 going into Thursday's game than last season when it finished fourth, and the club is loaded with players of three years or less experience.

"These kids will give the people a ballclub they'll remember a long time."

Hodas Saves James D-3 From First Game Upset

KEITH DAVIDOFF avoids tackle in first week of intramural play. Statesman/ Stu Sak

By LENN ROBBINS

Six intramural football teams got a head start in the win column this week. These teams are James D-3, James D-2, Langmuir C-1, Benedict E-2, Douglass B wing, and Gershwin B wing. The following capsule summaries summarize last week's action: With less than one minute left in the game, Henry Hodas took a Keith Davidoff pass and raced in for the touchdown giving number one ranked James D-3 a come from behind victory over Benedict AO-BO, 18-13.

Mitchell Stars

Doug Mitchell took an option pass from quarterback Rich Masterson and hit wide receiver Craig Ray early in the second half as James D-2 pulled out a 7-6 victory over Benedict E-0. Mitchell also added the extra point.

With the score tied 6-6 going into the fourth quarter, Langmuir C-1 exploded for 28 fourth quarter points to rout Langmuir D-3, 34-6.

Jesse Karpman pulled in two touchdown passes from quarterback Ricky Gilbert as Benedict E-2 defeated Langmuir D-1, 13-7.

Douglass B-wing totally shut down Toscanini B in the biggest domination so far in intramural play. Toscanini was never in the game as Douglass was overwhelming in the 23-0 triumph.

Gershwin B-wing is 1-0 by virtue of a forfeit.

If you would like to have your teams intramural scores appear in Statesman, the winning team must call 6-3690 between the hours of 6 PM and 8 PM on Tuesday and Thursday or between 12 and 2 PM on Sunday.
