Did you know that every year Kaplan sees over 1,000 pre-med and med students apply to our part-time MCAT teaching positions?

We are an extremely popular employer for students studying the health sciences who are looking for part-time jobs that allow them to apply their academic knowledge, help others, and professionalize their public speaking and communication skills. That said, we have created this guide with up to date information about teaching for Kaplan. Please review this document and reach out to us if you have any questions or would like to apply.

THE POSITION & REQUIRED QUALIFICATIONS

As an MCAT Instructor, you will be trained to teach Kaplan's MCAT test prep course to local pre-med students. In this leadership role, you will be expected to provide exceptional instruction and demonstrate subject matter expertise on the verbal reasoning, biological, and physical sciences sections of the MCAT. To qualify, you must have an MCAT score at or above the 90th percentile on all sections of the MCAT or have an extremely strong academic background on the content of the MCAT. Most applicants have completed their pre-reqs and have prepared for or already taken the MCAT.

WORKING HOURS

Once you accept a class assignment, you can expect to work 10-15 hours a week for the duration of that class. Classes generally meet 1-2 sessions per week and on nights and/or weekends. In this role, you will work with the Faculty Manager for these areas, to select class assignments that complement your current academic commitments or med school interview schedules.

COMPENSATION

You can expect to earn approximately $1900 – $2100 for the first MCAT class you teach. Your starting rate may vary based on qualifications such as MCAT scores, relevant teaching/work experience, and performance during training. You will be paid for all time worked, whether it's at home answering emails and preparing for lessons or during class when you're teaching. We also have a fantastic performance-based raise program where you will be eligible for a raise in as little time as 3 months of teaching.
