Shinobi Uta is a song cycle in five movements for soprano, baritone, and chamber orchestra based on the story of Tosa Nikki. The first literary work in Japanese history conveyed in the form of a diary, Tosa Nikki was written by one of the most renowned poets and writers of its time, Tsurayuki Kino, in 935. His refined skills in Japanese and Chinese poetry were highly acknowledged by the Japanese imperial court during the Heian Period (794-1185). His name often appears in many of the early Japanese anthologies of poetry including the first of its kind called Kokin Wakashu, for which he was appointed one of the four editors responsible for compiling more than a thousand poems from this period. In Tosa Nikki, the author recounts a series of events during his 55-day journey back to Kyoto (then the capital of Japan) from the province of Tosa, where he had been appointed the governor for five years, and also includes 57 poems.

The most fascinating aspect of Tosa Nikki is the fact that Tsurayuki wrote the entire work from the perspective of an anonymous female, only mentioning himself in the third person. His intention is evident from the very first line of the diary: “They say that writing diaries is for men, but as a woman, I am going to give this a try.” In order to emphasize the female voice, he used only phonetic characters (Kana), which were considered to be the writing method for women, as opposed to ideographic characters (Kanji) for men. Tsurayuki’s motive for hiding his gender is not certain, but one can speculate that he was greatly influenced by the loss of his young daughter during his stay in Tosa. Throughout the diary, the author repeatedly reminds the reader of this matter by mentioning a grieving couple (Tsurayuki and his wife). Perhaps assuming the tone of a female writer allowed Tsurayuki to express his deep sorrow more simply and intimately.

Text and Translation

The text of Shinobi Uta – to be sung entirely in the ancient Japanese language – is taken from the very first line of the diary, and 12 (out of 57) poems that directly relate to or allude to the loss of Tsurayuki’s daughter.

I. Introduction and Departure

A group of people prepare for departure from Tosa. Among them, a father (Tsurayuki), who has recently lost his young daughter, is lamenting by reading poems.

(Soprano) 男もすなる 日記といふものを 女もしてみむとてするなり	Otokomo sunaru Nikkito iumonowo Onnamo shitemimutote surunari	They say that writing diaries is for men, but as a woman, I am going to give this a try...
(Baritone) 都へと 思ふをものの 悲しきは 帰らぬ人の あればなりけり	Miyakoeto omouwomonono Kanashikiwa kaeranuhitono Arebanarikeri	Though I have eagerly waited to return to the capital, it is painful to think of my dear daughter who shall never return with me or to me.
(Baritone) あるものと 忘れつつなほ なき人を いづらと問ふぞ 悲しかりける	Arumonoto wasuretsutsunao Nakihitowo izuratotouzo Kanashikarikeru	How miserable is it that I sometimes even forget that she is long gone yet still ask, “where is my little girl?”

II. Rough Journey at Sea

Despite everyone’s wish to travel to Kyoto as quickly as possible, the weather has not been very cooperative. Days of rain and strong winds have made it very difficult to travel. One of the children (a girl) on the boat reads a poem, which suddenly reminds Tsurayuki of his lost daughter. At the same time, the weather calms down and out comes the face of the moon. Tsurayuki reads a poem expressing his lonely soul through the reflection of the moon on the surface of the sea. Then the wind picks up again for another bit of rough sailing ahead. However, people are cheering for more wind at this time, in hopes to quickly pass by where there are believed to be pirates.

(Soprano) 立てば立つ 炙ればまたゑる 吹く風と 波とは思ふ どちらにやあるらむ	Tatebatatsu erebamataeru Fukukazeto namitowaomou Dochiniyaaruramu	When the wind is strong, the waves go high. When the wind dies down, the waves go down. The wind and waves must be best friends who are always together.
(Baritone) 影見れば 波の底なる 久方の 空こぎ渡る われぞわびしき	Kagemireba naminosokonaru Hisakatano sorakogiwataru Warezowabishiki	Looking at the reflection of the moon on the bottom of the waves, is like looking at the reflection of my lonely soul in the dark sky.
(Duet) わたつみの ちふりの神に 手向けする 幣の追い風 やまず吹かなむ	Watatsumino chifurinokamini Temukesuru nusano oikaze Yamazu fukanamu	Please God, do not let this wind die down! Please let our nusa* flow and keep the pirates away.

III. At Hane (a town named “Wings”)

The boat stops at a place called Hane (wings), and a child tells everyone that this town was named after its wing-like shape and then reads a poem. This child reminds Tsurayuki of his lost daughter again. The father then quietly reads a poem to himself.

(Soprano) まことにて 名に聞く所 羽根ならば 飛ぶがごとくに 都へもがな	Makotonite nanikikutokoro Hanenaraba tobugagotokuni Miyakoemogana	If this place was a real wing like its name, we'd all be able to fly to Kyoto in no time.
(Baritone) 世の中に 思ひやれども 子を恋ふる 思ひにまさる 思ひなきかな	Yononakani omoiyaredomo Kowokouru omoinimasaru omoinakikana	Of all emotions you go through in life, there is nothing more tormenting than the sorrow of a parent who has a child.

IV. Forgetting Shells and Forgetting Grass

Another rainy and windy day – and not being able to sail any further – the boat stops at a shore where there is believed to be shells that make you forget about everything. Both Tsurayuki and his wife read poems regarding the shells. When the boat starts moving again, Tsurayuki’s wife reads another poem. She wishes to stop over at another location called Sumie, where she can collect some forgetting grass that is also said to make you forget.

(Soprano) 寄する波 うちも寄せなむ わが恋ふる 人忘れ貝 降りて拾はむ	Yosurunami uchimoyesenamu Wagakouru hitowasuregai Oritehirowamu	Ah, dear big waves, please bring in a forgetting shell to this shore – a shell that they say will make me forget about my dear little girl...
(Baritone) 忘れ貝 拾ひしもせじ 白珠を 恋ふるをだにも 形見と思はむ	Wasuregai hiroishimoseji Shirotamawo kouruwodanimo Katamitoomowamu	Even if there was one, I won’t pick up a forgetting shell. I rather cherish those precious memories of my beautiful girl forever, as that’s the only treasure she’s left for me.
(Soprano) 住みの江に 船さし寄せよ 忘れ草 しるしありやと 摘みて行くべく	Suminoeni funesashiyoseyo Wasuregusa shirushiariyato Tsumiteikubeku	Please captain, sail further and stop over at Sumie as I hear I can collect some forgetting grass there!

V. Arrival

The group of travelers finally arrives at Kyoto with mixed feelings. Tsurayuki and his wife are happy that they have finally arrived, but their house and property have been badly neglected albeit the neighbor’s effort. The feeling of sorrow settles in even more as they look at their old house in new surroundings, without the presence of their daughter.

(Duet) 生まれしも 帰らぬものを わが宿に 小松のあるを 見るが悲しさ	Umareshimo kaeranumonowo Wagayadoni komatsunoaruwo Miruga kanashisa	It’s pitiful to see a new pine tree growing so vigorously, while the girl who was born in this house will never be back.
(Duet) 見し人の 松の千とせに 見ましかば 遠く悲しき 別れせましや	Mishihitono matsunochitoseni Mimashikaba tohukanashiki wakaresemashiya	If children could live a thousand years like these pine trees do, I would’ve never had to say good-bye to my little dear daughter...

Acknowledgments

This dissertation would have been next to impossible without the help of many people, and I would like to show my gratitude to those who got me through the process. First and foremost, I am heartily grateful to Peter Winkler, whose encouragement and guidance have helped me become the composer I am today. I feel truly blessed to have studied with such a brilliant composer and compassionate educator. I would also like to thank Paul Salerni for first introducing me to the joy of composing years ago, and for his warmest encouragement and support ever since. I would not be here today if it was not for his composition classes at Lehigh University. My sincere appreciation goes to Perry Goldstein, who has helped me become a better educator and musician through years of advice while I was a teaching assistant, and to Sheila Silver who has taught me everything there is to know about orchestration.

I cannot express enough how thankful I am to the following people whose generosity and talent have helped me produce an incredible recording of this song cycle: Cherry Duke, James Bobick, William Holmes, Robin Kani, David Diggs, Deborah Andrus, Steve Reisteter, Dan Braden, Miles Salerni, Andrea Wittchen, Tim Schwartz, Julia Lipkis, Peter Lanctot, Domenic Salerni, Nancy Terlaakpoot, Sharon Olsher, David Moulton, Chris Fiore, and John Gaffney. I would also like to thank Nadine Sine, Eugene Albulescu, and the staff members of Zoellner Arts Center for letting me use their facility and instruments for the recording.

Whether it is through friendship, love, or wisdom, I owe my deepest gratitude to those who made me smile and kept me sane through these challenging years: Olga Jacoby, Peggy Gunton, Linda Lipkis, Laura Johnson, Martha Zadok, Deede Cook, Kathy Labukas, Dorothy Labukas, Hsiu-Hsiu, Masako, Cathy, Martin, Yuri, Rina, Ai, Aya, Abhi, Nate, Tom, Joanne, Intan, Eli, and Moomie. Above all, my special thanks go to Joe Labukas, who has become my best friend and inspiration. This dissertation would have not been the same if I had not met him.

Last but not least, I am most grateful to my mom for all that she is.

II. Rough Journey at Sea

F Allegro con brio ($\text{♩} = 138$)

The musical score consists of 18 staves, each representing a different instrument or voice. The instruments listed from top to bottom are: Flute, Oboe, Clarinet in B \flat , Bassoon, Contrabassoon, Horn in F, Timpani, Bass Drum, Harp, Celesta, Soprano, Baritone, Violin I, Violin II, Viola, Cello, and Contrabass. The score is set in common time (indicated by a '6' over a '8') and features a key signature of F major (indicated by an 'F'). The instrumentation includes woodwind, brass, percussion, and strings. The dynamics and performance instructions are indicated by various markings such as 'f' (fortissimo), 'mf' (mezzo-forte), 'mp' (mezzo-piano), and 'p' (pianissimo). The score is divided into measures by vertical bar lines, and specific rhythmic patterns are highlighted with slurs and grace notes.

This musical score page contains two systems of music, numbered 76 and 84. The instrumentation includes Flute, English Horn, Bassoon, Horn, Soprano, Bass, Violin I, Violin II, Cello, Double Bass, Vibraphone, and Harp. The vocal parts sing lyrics such as 'p wa ka re' and 'se ma shi' in System 76, and 'ya' in System 84. Dynamics like p, mp, pp, and rit. are indicated. Measure numbers 76 and 84 are at the top of each system. The score uses standard musical notation with stems and beams, and includes rehearsal marks and performance instructions.
