

Public Figures to Speak at Javits Conference

By Alvin F. Oickle

Jacob K. Javits served in the Congress of the United States during the administrations of Dwight Eisenhower, John F. Kennedy, Lyndon B. Johnson, Richard M. Nixon, Gerald R. Ford and Jimmy Carter. The foreign policy of each administration was different, but each felt the impact of the Republican from New York.

A three-day conference at Stony Brook this month will examine "Congress and United States Foreign Policy: The Javits Years, 1946-80." The Oct. 24-26 event will bring to campus four U.S. senators, the Senate historian, two Congressional researchers and a dozen professors from around the nation.

Sponsored by the University's Departments of History and Political Science, the event is the Jacob K. Javits Collection Inaugural Conference. Senator Javits gave his collection of public papers and other items to the State University of New York and it is now among the Special Collections at Stony Brook's Frank Melville Jr. Memorial Library.

The conference will be conducted at several campus sites, including the University Commons in the Chemistry Building, the Javits Conference Room in the main library and the Recital Hall at the Fine Arts Center.

Among speakers will be U.S. Senators Arlen Specter, R-Pa.; Christopher Dodd, D-Conn.; John F. Kerry, D-Mass., and Charles McC. Mathias Jr., R-Md. Senator Javits will address the gathering twice—at the Oct. 25 morning session on "The Debate over the War Powers Resolution" (the legislation considered by many as Javits' major contribution to history) and after the closing luncheon Oct. 26, when he will give the concluding remarks.

The faculty planning has been headed by Dr. Michael Barnhart, associate professor of history. Conference arrangements have been made by Stony Brook's Office of Conferences and Special Events, headed by Ann Forkin.

For more information, including luncheon and banquet arrangements, call the Office of Conferences, (24)6-3347.

Dube Supporters Gather

University President John H. Marburger and Ernest F. Dube, assistant professor in Africana Studies, addressed a group of students and others on campus Thursday, Oct. 10 on the issue of Dube's tenure status.

An estimated 100 were in the student lobby of the administration building during an hour-long exchange. Dube is appealing the denial of his request for tenure appointment.

Marburger repeated throughout the lobby discussion, in response to challenges from members of the audience, what he had said earlier in the day in answer to questions from the press. He stated then:

"This demonstration is inappropriate. There is a well-defined process that is in place and being carried out. There is not much the University can do because the process, including the appeal, is still taking place.

"It is unfortunate that the demonstrating students have tended to ignore the fact that there is a regular appeal process that is designed to be free of influence, including possible influences by today's demonstration."

Dube gave the group information about votes taken on his tenure. Marburger declined to comment, but said reasons for the administration's decision to deny the tenure request had been transmitted to Dube, and were part of a personnel file that is available to Dube but otherwise confidential.

Marburger outlined the tenure appeal process: Dube will name one person to serve on an advisory committee; the president will name one person; those two will choose a third to serve as chairperson of the committee. These three will review the matter and submit a recommendation to SUNY Chancellor Clifton Wharton Jr. Marburger estimated the process would require several months. Dube's appointment expires at the end of this academic year.

The demonstration in support of Dube was organized by the United Front, a group that carried out anti-apartheid demonstrations on campus last spring. The Oct. 10 activities started with a gathering at the Stony Brook Union. The group moved through several buildings before arriving at the administration building. As several sign-carrying members made their way towards the president's office on the third floor, Marburger arrived. He invited the group to choose a few representatives to meet with him in his office but remained for nearly an hour answering questions and responding to comments from Dube, Professor Leslie H. Owens, who chairs the Africana Studies program, and others.

Computer Equipment Discounts

Faculty, staff and students considering the purchase of a computer now may take advantage of discounts on a variety of hardware (and some software) from several vendors, through arrangements made by the Research Foundation.

Contracts have been signed for discounts with the following vendors: Radio Shack (20%), IBM (37-40%), DEC (35%), Zenith (47%), AT&T (35%) and Hewlett-Packard (45-50%).

Apple, Sperry and Telex also offer discounts.

For more information, contact Ellie Moschella in Research Purchasing at (24)6-7609.

Current state contracts include a 35% discount on DEC microcomputers and an educational discount of 32% on IBM. For more information on state contracts, call Steve Wainio in Purchasing at (24)6-5926.

SB Appoints Dean for Harriman, New Management Program

By Alvin F. Oickle

Dr. Gerrit Wolf has joined the faculty at Stony Brook with a mandate to create a program in management where none has existed.

A social psychologist who has headed the Academic Department of Management and Policy at the University of Arizona the past four years, Wolf is Stony Brook's first dean of the Faculty of Management and the W. Averell Harriman College of Policy Analysis and Public Management.

Stony Brook Provost Homer A. Neal said Wolf was chosen from a national search "to develop and head a new, innovative program" that builds on "the considerable strengths of our successful public administration program" at Harriman College.

Neal continued, "We wish to develop a selective management program which draws upon the strengths of our existing academic and professional programs and we intend to maintain and strengthen Harriman College and its focus on public management. We have identified three other areas—non-profit management, high technology management, and decision sciences—for possible future expansion. The dean will have considerable flexibility in hiring new personnel for the program and in program development."

Dean Wolf's initial goals include expanding the faculty to mount a new program of research and external activities by fall of 1986.

The provost said, "Being both a distinguished scholar and an experienced administrator, Dean Wolf is exceptionally well qualified to develop the ment problems are different from the other sectors'. They are concerned with how to deal with clients, how to deliver services, how to decouple services."

He continued, "Stony Brook has especially strong academic and research programs in high-technology areas, in biotechnology, for example. How can effective management of such services be devised? Indeed, these services are, in turn, becoming more effective because of high technology; for example, robots are doing 'dirty work', contributing to improved productivity but also helping bring about a more rapid personnel turnover."

Harriman to expand program

Wolf emphasized that Stony Brook has no intention of developing a degree program leading to the MBA (master's in business administration). Instead, the Harriman program will expand to include not only public policy but non-profit and general management. "One way to go," Wolf said, "might be through Harriman College's accelerated program, by which a student enrolls after the sophomore year and over the next three years earns both a bachelor's degree and a master's degree. We'll be looking at the possibility of a program requiring the undergraduate major in an academic area other than management, and the graduate degree major in management."

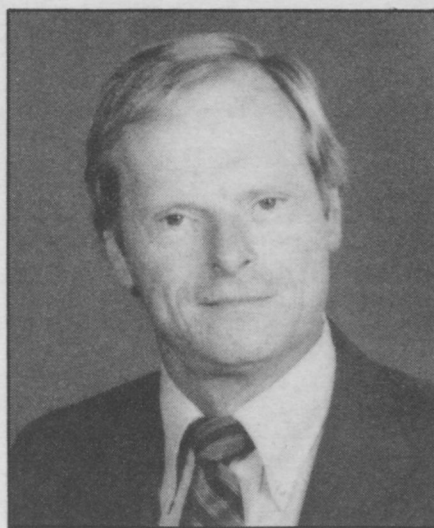

Gerrit Wolf earned his bachelor's degree in psychology in 1963 at Hope College in Michigan and his Ph.D. in social psychology at Cornell University in 1967. He had faculty positions at Cornell, Yale University and Georgia Institute of Technology before joining the University of Arizona faculty in 1981.

His research over the past decade has focused on health services. As an administrator, he has had a variety of assignments, including serving as director of undergraduate studies in Yale's Department of Administrative Sciences, chairing the personnel committee at Georgia Tech and serving as head of Arizona's Management Department. His publications cover a wide spectrum, including reports and essays on negotiations, conflict resolution, organizational behavior and leadership, reviews in management and medical journals and serving as an editor for the publications Decisions Sciences, Medical Care and Cornell Journal of Social Relations.

Dr. Glass Resigns

Dr. David Glass, vice provost for research and graduate studies, has resigned his position effective Dec. 31, in order to devote his time entirely to research and teaching. Glass plans to spend the next calendar year at Carnegie-Mellon University conducting research.

Stony Brook Provost Homer A. Neal said, "David Glass is to be commended for his many accomplishments during the past three years. His guidance in the development of the graduate programs and the research enterprise on the Stony Brook campus has produced lasting major improvements in several of our departments. During his tenure our campus has received numerous significant grants, realized a great improvement in the administration of research support activities, and has seen the launching of major advances in computing, and steady progress in enhancing the overall quality of the University."

specialized, campus-wide program in management studies which we envision. Under his leadership, we expect that Stony Brook will soon establish an innovative management program responsive to the needs for high quality graduate training in this extremely important area."

New directions

Wolf uses the phrases "service area" and "entrepreneurial development" in giving examples of directions for new academic programs. "For centuries management has been developed around the agricultural and then the industrial economies," he explained. The Harriman College programs have been built on management within the public sector. We can, and should, be expanding into the non-profit sector. "The service sector spans all private, public and non-profit areas. Service includes, for example, lawyers, medical doctors and the financial community. Their manage-

University Sponsors Alcohol Awareness Week Oct. 21-27

The University is sponsoring its third annual Alcohol Awareness Week Monday, Oct. 21 through Sunday, Oct. 27.

"This is the first year that we have gotten input from all the employee unions, faculty, staff, students, the Health Sciences Center and the Hospital," said Awareness Week coordinator Kayla Mendelsohn.

Mendelsohn, director of student activities, continued, "The Week is especially significant this year because the legal drinking age in New York State will change to 21 as of Dec. 1. We want to present information in a positive way—we won't say 'Don't drink', but we will encourage people to understand the implications of drinking and realize what their personal limits are."

Information on alcohol awareness was sent to all faculty teaching physical education and large introductory classes, to encourage classroom discussion.

The event is being sponsored by the Division of Student Affairs Office of Student Union and Activities. Student Affairs received an award from the National Association of Student Personnel and Administrators for last year's Alcohol Awareness Week.

A schedule of this year's Week follows. Events are still being added. For more information, call the Office of Student Union and Activities at (24)6-7109.

Materials have been ordered for a new surface parking lot to be built at the Hospital.

SB Launches National Searches for Academic Deans

By Alvin F. Oickle

National searches are being launched for deans in two of the University's major academic divisions. Meantime, two faculty members have agreed to serve as acting deans and four others have assumed new responsibilities in academic administration.

Stony Brook Provost Homer A. Neal has announced the following appointments:

- Dr. Sei Sujishi, dean for physical sciences and mathematics and professor of chemistry, has joined Stony Brook's Office of the Provost as associate provost. Sujishi joined the chemistry faculty at Stony Brook in 1959. He became dean for physical sciences and mathematics in 1975.

- Dr. Deane M. Peterson, associate professor of astronomy in Stony Brook's Department of Earth and Space Sciences, will serve as acting dean for physical sciences and mathematics until a permanent replacement for Dr. Sujishi is appointed. He has been at Stony Brook since 1970.

- Lester G. Paldy, dean of the Center for Continuing Education for nine years, will assume the full-time directorship of Stony Brook's new Science, Mathematics and Technology Teaching Center on Nov. 1. He has been a faculty member of the Department of Technology and Science since 1976.

- Dr. George J. Hechtel, associate professor in the Department of Ecology and Evolution, will serve as acting dean of the Center for Continuing Education during the national search for Paldy's replacement. He has been at Stony Brook since 1964.

- Dr. Egon Neuberger, professor of economics, has begun a second three-year term as dean of the Division of Social and Behavioral Sciences. He has been at the University for 18 years.

- Dr. Colin A. Martindale, associate professor in the Division of Physical Education and Athletics, has joined the Office of the Provost as special assistant to the provost. This continues a campus tradition of offering faculty members opportunities to serve one-year faculty associateships in the academic administration. Martindale, a sociologist, has been at Stony Brook since 1978.

Gloria Update

The University continues to recover after its unwelcome visit from Hurricane Gloria. However, considering its potential, the storm's touch at the University was relatively light.

Dr. Robert A. Francis, vice president for campus operations, reported that approximately 20 exterior panels at University Hospital had been destroyed, and that it will cost $500 each to replace them. There was $10,000 worth of glass damage on the main campus, and grounds clean-up (removal of fallen trees) will cost approximately $40,000.

The latter effort will "quite a while, at least until the end of this semester," Francis said, because of the large number of trees that had fallen.

About 200 people—fire marshals, stationary engineers, grounds crews, electricians and carpenters—worked on main campus during the storm itself. Approximately 1,000 people were working at the Hospital as Gloria pursued its course across Long Island.

During the period of outages and material shortages that followed, the University offered free showers, drinking water and freezer space to members of surrounding communities. DAKA, Inc., the campus food service, served meals to the public in the University's cafeterias.

See the Zoo (and a waterfall, too)

Stony Brook's Museum of Long Island Natural Sciences is sponsoring a day at the Bronx Zoo on Sunday, October 27 and a geology field trip on Sunday, November 3.

The guided tour of the Bronx Zoo, the largest urban zoo in the United States, will explain the habits and habitats of the animals that live there. Scientist Mike Sichko will lead the geology trip, which will feature a gorge waterfall, lava flow and ancient sedimentary rocks (all within an hour's drive of New York City.)

Reservation deadlines are Friday, October 18 for the Bronx Zoo and Friday, Oct. 25 for the geology excursion.

The cost of the Zoo trip is $12 for adults and $10 for children (cost includes bus transportation and zoo admission fee.) Cost for Museum members is $12 and $10. The geology trip is $12 for the general public and $10 for Museum members (includes bus transportation.)

For more information, call the Museum at (24)6-8666.
