SB to Host Rotary Classic

Stony Brook will host this year for the first time the Long Rotary Basketball Tournament, be held December 2-5.

The event features competition among several Long Island schools as well as this year's special quest, the Czechoslovakian National team.

"We feel that it's an honor to host a tournament of this calibre," said basketball coach, Dr. Ron Bash. 'We look forward to having a very successful tournament with a large teams in the world, will arrive at Stony Brook after playing such nationally-ranked opponents as Marquette, Jacksonville, Indiana and LaSalle. The Czeckoslovakian team has seven players over six-foot-seven, including one over

"Czeckoslovakia is probably the third best team in the world," Bash said. "If we win our first game we have to face them in the semi-finals. This makes our task exceedingly tough. Any team that plays Czeckoslovakia is a prohibitive underdog but it should be a good challenge for the players."

Stony Brook will go into the tournament with one of its strongest teams in years with the hope that the home court advantage will be a factor. "The home court will be an advantage but I don't think it will be significant in winning or losing," Bash said. "Most of the teams are our regular Long Island opponents and have played on the court. The whole tournament should prove to be an interesting challenge."

The tickets are priced at $1.00 from Stony Brook and $1.50 at the door for students and $3.00 at the door for adults. The schedule is as follows:

Faculty Senate to Reshape Undergraduate Education

Committee to Reform Undergraduate Education has been created by the Faculty Senate to formulate proposals for restructuring the academic program in light of the recent Institutional Self Study Report.

Committee Chairman Frank Myers, Professor of Political Science, said that the one-month old Committee will present preliminary proposals to the academic departments and to the Faculty Senate in early December and will present its final recommendations next March.

Coordinate Work

The Committee will coordinate the work of other groups concerned with undergraduate education, such as the Arts and Science Curriculum Committee, the Teaching Policy Committee and the Office of Undergraduate Studies.

In announcing the Committee's creation, the Faculty Senate Executive Committee said:

"The Self Study of the University, conducted during the past two years, documents many inadequacies in undergraduate education at Stony Brook. The Self Study points specifically to mismatched expectations, inflation of grades, incoherence of curricula and a generally laissez-faire approach to student-faculty relations as outstanding failings.

"This is the year to begin to correct these and other failings of our undergraduate education."

Dr. Myers said that the Committee is directing most of its attention to the inadequacies of the first two years of undergraduate education. He said that the Committee is studying ways to restructure the academic advisement system; the feasibility of introducing comprehensive tests at the end of the sophomore year for the purpose of identifying those students who need remedial help in reading or writing; and the "practical and philosophical implications" of returning to a more structured curriculum that would stress core courses.

To facilitate the Reform Committee's work, the Arts and Sciences Curriculum Committee has requested each of the academic departments to prepare a report on their undergraduate curricular structure in light of the criticisms of the Self Study. The Curriculum Committee has announced that it will not review requests for curriculum changes from a department until it has received its Committee welcomes suggestions and comments from members of the University community. Persons who wish to offer their advice may do so by contacting a member of the Committee.

The members of the Committee are: Professor of Political Science Frank Myers, Professor of Black Studies Donald Blackman, Professor of Biology Frank Erk, Academic Vice President Sidney Gelber, Professor of Sociology Norman Goodman, Professor of Philosophy Patrick Hill, Professor of Economics Estelle James, Acting Dean for Undergraduate Studies Robert Marcus, Professor of Earth and Space Sciences Tobias Owen, Assistant Dean for Undergraduate Studies Rhoda Selvin, Professor of English Martin Stevens, Professor of Mathematics John Thorpe, Vice President for Student Affairs Elizabeth Wadsworth and Professor of Music Peter Winkler. The two student representatives are Larry Smith and Diedre Maguire.

Names and Faces

Associate Professor of Psychology John N. Neale has received an Early Career Award from the American Psychological Association. The award is the highest honor that the Association can bestow on young scholars.

Dr. Neale received his award for his work in Clinical Psychology. Psychology Department Chairman James N. Geer said that the award is "continuing evidence of the outstanding quality of the faculty in the Psychology Department at Stony Brook.

Art critic and historian Lawrence Alloway, Professor of Art History, has been selected to judge a series of regional art exhibitions in the State of Virginia. The exhibitions, scheduled for next year, are being sponsored by the Virginia Museum under a grant from the National Endowment for the Arts.

Lewis Lusardi, Director of the Center for Contemporary Arts and Letters at Stony Brook, has received an Andy Award from the Advertising Club of New York. Mr. Lusardi collaborated on the production of a brochure for Marymount Manhattan College which stressed the school's development and philosophy.

Yan Bor Ng and Thomas D. Salzer, two juniors majoring in Engineering, have received the Engineering Science Achievement Award for 1974 from the Chemical Rubber Company of Cleveland, Ohio. The award, which was accompanied by a complimentary copy of "Handbook of Tables for Applied Engineering Science," for each of the winners, is presented yearly to a Stony Brook junior or team of juniors who are engaged in a research project.

The research of two Cellular and Comparative Biology Department professors on the migration and singing patterns of birds is recorded in a Science documentary series produced by the Public Television System. The research of Department Chairman Charles Walcott on pigeon chasing activities is described in an episode entitled, "Bird Brain - The Mystery of Bird Navigation," which will be shown on Channel 13 on February 23 at 7:30 p.m. The research of Assistant Professor Douglas Smith on the singing patterns of Red Wing Blackbirds was discussed in another episode which was televised earlier this month.

Study Think Foreign Study Think Foreign Study Think

Have you considered spending a semester studying abroad? Applications for the spring semester are being considered until December 1 for the Urban Studies Program in Tel Aviv, Israel and the Carribean Studies Program in Kingston, Jamaica. Sophomores, juniors, and seniors are eligible.

The Israeli and Jamaican programs are only two of the many foreign study programs offered by Stony Brook's Office of International Education. Under the direction of Dr. Lawrence DeBoer, the Office advises students of foreign study opportunities from its headquarters in the Library, Room W3520.

Tel Aviv Program

The Urban Studies Program in Tel Aviv (USTA) is jointly sponsored by Stony Brook and Tel Aviv University. A main theme of the program is the study of the sources of social cohesion, integration and solidarity in contemporary Israeli society, especially in the urban setting of Tel Aviv-Jaffa. The academic program will consist of Hebrew language studies, courses in the humanities and social sciences, and courses in guided research on aspects of urban life and institutions. The program director is Professor Sasha Weitman.

The distinguishing feature of the USTA is that it combines an immersion into the everyday life and institutions of modern Israel with classroom discussion and research projects.

Jamaica Program

Through arrangements with the University of the West Indies (UWI) and several institutions and agencies in and around Kingston Jamaica, the Jamaica program offers selected SUNY undergraduates an opportunity for an unusually rich

The program focuses on Jamaica as a Caribbean country. Topics studied include the history of the West Indies and Jamaica; its economics and political and sociocultural development and institutions; West indian and Jamaican education and social welfare; the history of Black nationalism in the Caribbean and Pan-Africanism and international implications of race relations in the Caribbean.

semester of study and field work.

The course includes extensive readings on Jamaica and the Caribbean, lectures by members of the faculty of UWI and prominent leaders in Jamaica, plus a seminar conducted by the program director. Each student also undertakes an independent study project developed in consultation with and supervised by the program director or a member of the UWI faculty. The Program Director is Professor Lebent Bethrune.

To obtain information about costs and dates, and to obtain an application, students should contact the Office of International Education.

Hillel Sponsors Jewish Free University

"You Thought Your Mom Made Good Chicken Soup" is not a cry for a cook-off- but rather the title of a course, among many courses, being offered at the bargain price of $1.00 to all interested people through the good wishes of the campus chapter of Hillel, the Jewish Student Organization.

The Jewish Free University, just getting started and possibly the only one on a Long Island college campus, is offering the services of Stony Brook faculty and students, and local residents - including a Rabbi and a cantor - through a series of $1.00 courses encompassing such areas as Jewish Literature and Philosophy, Hebrew Language, Biblical and Talmud study, Jewish cooking and dance.

The courses are given week nights, either on campus or at the Hillel House, which is located across from the North entrance to the University on Sheep Pasture Road.

For further information, please contact Richard Siegal, Hillel director, at 751-7924 or Michael at 475-3058.

ADIOS?

About a year ago, "This Week" began publication as an experimental "printed bulletin board" which students, faculty and administration alike could both use and read for internal commun-

Despite start-up problems, the publication seems to be getting established as a useful campus communication tool. But, even as this happens, budget problems have caught up with us. There never was any explicit funding for "This Week." Its printing and typesetting costs have been absorbed by cutting corners in an already tight office budget that hasn't seen an increase in several years. Unfortunately, just about all the corners seem to have been cut from the budget for the balance of the current University fiscal year. The worst blow to the budget came from a sharp increase in printing costs for the Undergraduate and Graduate bulletins.

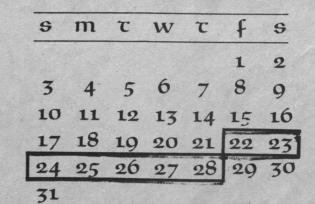

Efforts are being made to find the funds necessary to tide us over, but with the generally tight campus budget situation, the outlook is not good.

This message, consequently, is by way of an advisory to our users and readers that "This Week" probably will have to suspend publication from the end of classes in December through the start of the new fiscal year on April 1 when new funding should be available.

There will be no issue next week due to the Thanksgiving holiday, but there will be at least two more issues, on December 5 and 11. If "This Week" must be suspended, we'll have some suggestions in the December 11 issue on using other campus communication vehicles during our hiatus. process of the transfer of the
