Stony Brook Makes Top Lists University to Host Symposium On Managing Managed Care Second Environmental Writers Fest First Graduate School Fair At USB

TOP LISTED: The University at Stony Brook has made two of the nation's top consumer ratings lists, one published by Money magazine, the other by U.S. News & World Report.

Money magazine's special Money Guide: The Best College Buys Now, which hit the newsstands September 6, ranks Stony Brook fifth in the northeast and 22nd in the nation in terms of America's best higher education buys. To earn a high score in Money Guide's value-based ratings, a college or university must charge less in tuition and fees than schools that provide educations of comparable quality.

In the Northeast, Stony Brook placed ahead of Dartmouth (7th), Columbia (10th), Harvard (15th), Cornell (20th), Wellesley (22nd) and Fordham (23rd).

Earlier this year, four graduate programs at Stony Brook made U.S. News & World Report's listing of America's Best Graduate Schools. Among the top 25 graduate offerings in the nation were Stony Brook's geology, mathematics, physics, and sociology

MANAGING MANAGED CARE: A one-day symposium on "Managing the Managed Care Network" will have health, corporate and insurance professionals flocking to the University at Stony Brook on Wednesday, September 21. Together, they'll explore all elements of managed care including risk management, service delivery and corporate structure re-engineering.

Sponsored by the Harriman School for Management and Policy's Executive Mana-gement Center and the School of Health Technology and Management's Division of Continuing Professional Education, the symposium is expected to attract physicians, dentists, physical therapists, occupational therapists, physician assistants, nurse-practitioners, clinical psychologists and other health care practitioners as well as in-surance and corporate managers and those who are interested in health care reform.

Thomas Barry, managing director of the Investment Banking Group Insurance Division, First Boston Corporation in New York City, NY, will deliver the keynote address. He will speak on "Implications of Managed Care on the New York State Health Care Delivery System."

Also making presentations will be Peter Sullivan, executive vice president of the Nassau/Suffolk Hospital Council; Carmine Asparro, northeast regional network director, Metlife Healthcare Management Corpora-tion, Hauppauge, NY; Gary Lin, vice president, finance and actuarial, Metlife Healthcare Management Corporation, Westport, CT; Dr. Jack Resnick, president of Managed Health, Inc., New York City, NY; Dr. John E. Murphy, president and founder of Integrated Medical Technologies, Atlanta, GA; and attorney Robert A. Wild, senior partner, Garfunkel, Wild and Travis, Great Neck, NY.

WRITERS FEST, SHOW SET: Whether they're seasoned pros or inspired neophytes, environmental writers, photographers and filmmakers are invited to the second annual Long Island Environmental Writers Festival, to be hosted by the Uni-versity at Stony Brook's Marine Sciences Research Center (MSRC) Saturday, October 1 and Sunday, October 2.

But take note: preregistration is required for the festival. Only the first 120 respondents will be accepted. To register no later than Tuesday, September 20, call the MSRC at 516-632-8701.

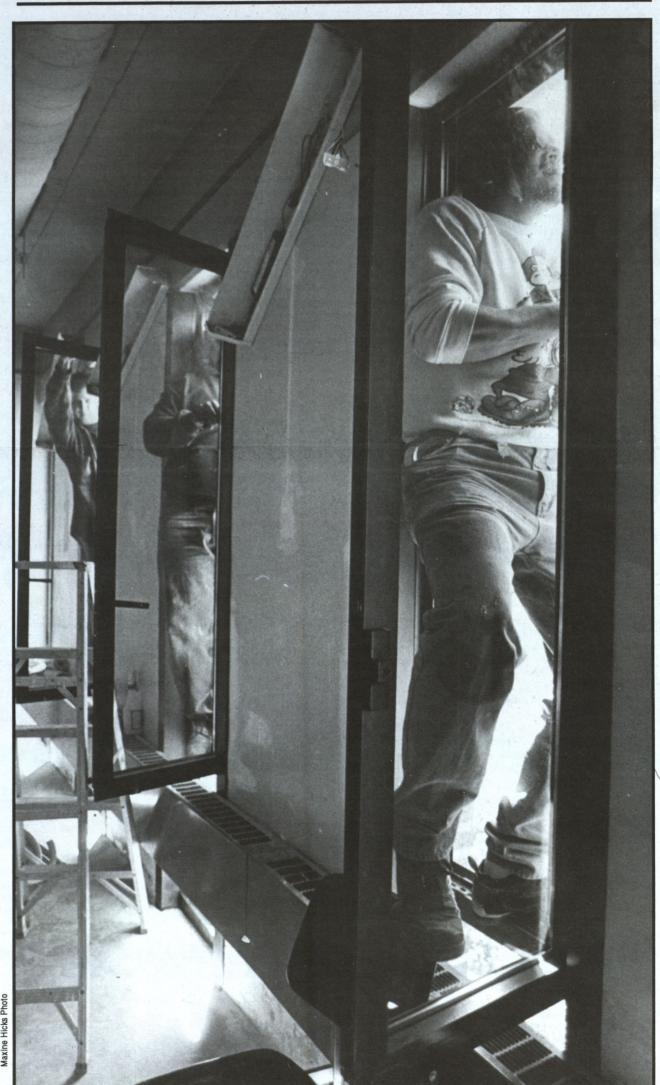

Saturday's events will include discussions, film screenings and hands-on workshops with leading authors and photographers. Panelists will include Pulitzer Prize-winning poet Louis Simpson; National Public Radio commentator and New York Times columnist David Bouchier; and Tom Horton, Baltimore Sun columnist and author of numerous books about Chesapeake Bay. Sessions will cover such topics as creative landscaping writing, environmental journalism and nature writing.

On Sunday, MSRC will offer a choice of two field trips, to either the Flax Pond Salt Marsh or the Nature Conser-vancy's East Farm Preserve. These trips will be held rain or shine.

HANGING OUT: Framed by the new windows they just installed, a trio of construction workers perch on ledges of the Frank Melville Jr. Memorial Library to complete their section of a $2.7 million makeover that includes a new roof and replacement of 900 windows. Scaffolding along the south and west sections of the building will remain in place until mid-October. Work on the eastend of the building will start in October, limiting pedestrian access to that side of the Library for several months.

"Wake up! The 20th century is almost over," cautions Bradley Lubman, musical director of the Stony Brook Symphony Orchestra (SBSO), the university's outstanding graduate ensemble. The 1994-95 concerts will highlight 20th-century composers, with an occasional backward glance at some classics. All SBSO concerts are on the Main Stage of the Staller Center for the Arts at 8 p.m.

To open the season on Saturday, October 1, the SBSO will present Aaron Copland's "Music for the Theater," Johann Strauss's Overture to Die Fledermaus, and Shostakovich's Symphony No. 15 in A

The orchestra will give the world premiere of Alexander's Symphony No. 1 on October 9, and Thursday, October 13 Saturday, November 12. That concert will Sunday, October 16. also include Brahms' Symphony No. 1 in C

On Saturday, December 3, the SBSO will perform a selection of modern works: Ives' Central Park in the Dark, Debussy's Prelude to the Afternoon of a Faun, Ravel's "Valses Nobles et Sentimentales," Varèse's "Intégrales," and Gotkovsky's Trombone Concerto, featuring soloist Julie Josephson, winner of last year's Concerto Competition.

The spring season will include a performance of Bach's Mass in B minor in conjunction with the Stony Brook Camerata Singers on February 25, and music by Lubman, John Adams, Xenakis and Stravinsky on April 1.

Tickets are $10. To order, call the box office at 632-7230.

Extraterrestrials and Anne Frank will take to the stage this coming season (but not at the same time), when Stony Brook Theatre, the performance wing of the Theatre Arts Department, presents a lineup of comedy and drama.

University Medical Center representatives meet with Governor Mario M. Cuomo and First Lady Matilda Cuomo at breast cancer roundtable

University Medical Center was well-represented at an invitation-only roundtable on breast cancer with Governor and Mrs. Cuomo held August 30 at Bennett X-Ray in Copaigue.

Joining the Cuomos and radiologists from across the nation were Dr. Donald Harrington, Professor and Chairman of Radiology; Dr. Allen Meek, Professor and Chairman of Radiation Oncology and Executive Director of the Comprehensive Cancer Center at University Medical Center; Stephen Villano, Associate Dean for Public Affairs; Melanie Dale, R.N., an oncology nurse who answers calls at the Medical Center's Cancer HELPLINE and Lorraine Pace, M.S., the Medical Center's breast cancer education specialist.

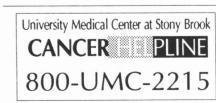

"I was very impressed by the speakers from the advocacy groups who emphasized the importance of education and preventive service," Dr.

"This is where the state could make a big impact short term. I agree wholeheartedly that education needs to begin in the high schools or even junior highs as it probably is the developing breast during teeange years to early twenties which is most susceptible to cancer causing agents such as cigarettes, birth control pills, diet and radiation."

Dr. Meek added, "These are controllable risk factors, many being lifestyle choices. The point that children can then bring this information back to the home and 'educate' their parents is excellent. Screening services should be more accessible and patients should be able to get mammograms without a physician referral--anything to lower the barriers. One problem this creates however for the radiologist is who is then going to take care of an abnormal mammogram. Women in their 40's should have mammograms every year and I think this point was well made by the radiologists who were there."

WELCOMING THE NEW YEAR: Alumnus Bob Axel, '86, (above) practices blowing the Shofar for services here last week marking the start of the Jewish New Year. Orthodox and Conservative services were held on campus for Jewish students, faculty and staff. The holiday period ends tomorrow, September 15, with Yom Kippur, a major holy day observed by fasting and prayer.

KICKING UP A STORM: An unidentified Plattsburgh State player (left) attempts to wrest the ball away from Stony Brook's Wilson Pun in a season opener that saw the Seawolves win, 1-0. Seniors Greg Alexandre and Corey DeRosa led the Seawolves to victory. Alexandre scored the only goal of the game at 48:15 converting a pass from Pun. DeRosa, Stony Brook's goalkeeper, recorded four saves in registering the first shutout of the year. It was a big win for Stony Brook. Powerful Plattsburgh came into the game with an 18-1 record.
