- Enrollment for the fall semester almost broke an all-time record, says Ray Maniuszko, who as director of the university's Institutional Studies, keeps track of enrollment figures. The all-time high was 17,697 recorded in the fall, 1991. After 15 class days and through the close of business on Thursday, September 22, the University at Stony Brook enrolled 17,617 students, 1,748 of that number members of the fresh-

DEALING WITH DEPRESSION. Ten two-hour workshops for women focusing on learning skills that can help them live with and overcome depression, will be held Tuesday evenings starting October 11 at the University at Stony Brook's Psychological Center.

"Depression is an illness that will afflict approximately 10 million Americans each year, and women are twice as likely as men to experience a lifetime episode of depression," says Tova Ferro, who coordinates the on "Coping with Depression," workshop, which is timed to mark National Depression Day on October 6.

TEAMING FOR THE ENVIRONMENT: Stony Brook's Marine Sciences Research Center (MSRC) has teamed up with the Stony Brook Community Fund to present a series of environmental lectures that begin October 4.

The series will be held at the Community Fund's Marine Conservation Center, at West Meadow Creek in Stony Brook. Each two-hour program (7:30-9:30 p.m.) consists of a lecture, question and answer session, roundtable discussion and coffee break. Admission is $10 per session.

The October 4 session, on Evolution of the North Shore of Long Island will be led by New York State Assemblyman Steven Englebright who will discuss the history of human use of the North Shore, focusing on tidal wetlands, bays and marine habitats.

The next lecture in the series, to be held Thursday, October 20, will be on Water Quality in West Meadow Creek: Is It Safe to Swim and Eat Shellfish? Dr. Larry Swanson, director of Stony Brook's Waste Management Institute, will explain the results of a five-year water quality monitoring program in West Meadow Creek.

For more information on the series call the Stony Brook Community Fund at 516-751-2244.

STONY-BROOK Week

Volume 1, No. 6 • News for and about the University at Stony Brook campus community • October 5, 1994

HOMECOMING PREVIEW: Seawolves' Mike Bahr (No. 1) catches a touchdown pass that helped trounce Pace University 32-0 in recent play. The Seawolves face Vermont's Norwich University for the big Homecoming game that starts at 1 p.m. on the football field. As Stony Brook Week went to press, the home team had a 3-0 edge.

Campus Set for Homecoming '94 Five Day "Fest" to be Fun Filled

he university will kick-off an energized "Home-coming '94" in style next week, with dozens of special events, reunions, parties, and sports contests. Thousands of alumni are expected to mix and mingle with the campus community during the five-day fest that begins Wednesday, October 12, with a rally for USB's sports teams

In fact, a lifesize version of the university's new mascot, the Seawolf—a mythical creature that rises from the waves—will make its debut at the Homecoming '94 kickoff on Wednesday, 11:30 a.m.-3 p.m. in front of the Stony Brook Union. The Wolf Pack (Stony Brook's student spirit club) and kick line will be on hand to welcome the new mascot. The rest of the week is filled with parties, entertainment, sports, reunions, fireworks and plenty of fun. (See next week's Stony Brook Week for the full listing).

Here are a few highlights:

Wednesday evening, the Homecoming Committee will select the King and Queen at 6 p.m. in the Stony Brook Union. Across campus, judges will pick the best-decorated rooms in Roth Quad as part of a celebration marking the reopening of the newly refurbished residential complex.

USB Spirit Night explodes on Thursday at 8 - 10 p.m. with Grucci fireworks, a bonfire, pep rally and introduction of the Homecoming King and Queen.

Saturday opens with a continental breakfast for alumni in the Staller Center Lobby, 9 a.m. Alumni will have a chance to meet the university's new president, Dr. Shirley Strum Kenny. Saturday highlights include campus tours departing every hour from the lobby of the Stony Brook Union, 10 a.m.-2 p.m., and a variety of morning athletic contests, both varsity and alumni: women's soccer vs. Buffalo, 10 a.m.; alumni baseball, 10 a.m.; alumni lacrosse, 10:30 a.m. The Homecoming Parade departs from Tabler Quad at 11 a.m. and winds through the campus, ending at

Stony Brook Gets $1 Million for Undergrad Bio Science Training

The University at Stony Brook has been awarded a $1 million grant from the Howard Hughes Medical Institute for a four-year project to train the next generation of scientific researchers and educators in the biological sciences.

The grant, awarded under the Institute's 1994 Undergraduate Biological Sciences Education Program, will provide funds to enhance Stony Brook's undergraduate education, update laboratories and equipment, strengthen partnerships with public schools and provide opportunities for undergraduates, especially those in underrepresented groups.

"The effort to transform undergraduate biology education into a more researchbased, hands-on experience is an important

"The Spirit of the Lacandon Maya" will be on view at the Stony Brook Union Art Gallery from Monday, October 17, through Wednesday, November 2. The show includes paintings, sketches and sculptures by North American artist Kelynn Z. Alder and the Lacandon children with whom she worked. Only 200 Lacandons, descendents of the ancient Mayans, still survive in the Mexican rain forest in Chiapas.

Ms. Alder defines herself as a "visual essayist" who works in the field as well as the studio. Inspired by the cultures of indigenous peoples, she has visited and painted the Lacandons since 1991, examining their fragile culture through her art.

Ten works by Lacandon children will also be shown. These paintings were created in a workshop Alder organized last summer in response to the children's curiosity about her painting.

Ms. Alder will be on campus on Thursday, October 20, from 1-5 p.m. to discuss her work. She will present a video and slide lecture at 2 p.m. in Room 231 of the Union, followed by a reception in the gallery. The Union Art Gallery is open Monday through Friday, noon-4 p.m. For additional information, call 632-6822.

Suzy Bogguss, one of Country Music's top vocalists, will perform in concert on Monday, October 10, at 8 p.m. in the Staller Center for the Arts. Hosting the show will be WYNY radio personality "D.C."

Ms. Bogguss will release her sixth album this month. Simpatico (Liberty Records) is a special project that evolved out of her friendship with Chet Atkins, who wrote liner notes on her debut album, Somewhere Between, back in 1989.

That's the year she first received national attention, when she was named Top New Female Vocalist by the Academy of Country Music. Since then she has produced two gold albums, Aces and Voices in the Wind, and won numerous other awards.

Tickets are $26 and $23 and may be purchased at the Staller Center Box Office (632-7230) or through TicketMaster (888-9000).

This year's first Distinguished Lecture at the University at Stony Brook will be presented by Samuel Betances, professor of sociology at Northeastern Illinois University, on Monday, October 17, at 8 p.m. in the Recital Hall of the Staller Center for the Arts. The talk is sponsored by the Office of the Provost and is part of the celebration of Hispanic Heritage Month.

The topic, "Using Humor to Promote Multicultural Understanding," is educational and motivational, relevant to both the campus and the community. And best of all, it's entertaining.

Dr. Betances (Doctor of Education, Harvard) is a specialist in race relations, gender issues, workforce diversity, and the U.S. Latino experience. His own roots are bilingual and bicultural. For the past 20 years he has been on the faculty at Northeastern Illinois University. He has lectured and published extensively on demographic and social changes and the impact of the global economy on group relations in the United States, hosted his own television show in Chicago and appeared on the Phil Donahue and Oprah Winfrey shows. He is senior consultant for Souder, Betances and Associates, and in that capacity has worked with Merrill Lynch, AT&T, Xerox, the American Red Cross, NASA, the Boston Public Schools and many other corporate and non-profit clients.

The second Distinguished Lecture will take place on Thursday, November 10, when Ko-ichi Hattori, composer and professor at the Tokyo Kasei University will present "36,000 Days of Japanese Music," with soprano Kimiko Fukunari. This lecture/concert will explore Japanese music, ranging from Japanese interpretations of Western music to Japanese rock and roll to traditional koto music and contemporary Japanese art songs.

These lectures are free and open to the public. For further information, call 632-7005.

one," says associate professor of biochemistry and assistant vice provost David Bynum, who will direct the grant.

"As a major research university with exceptional strength in biological sciences, we are well prepared to build on our current undergraduate, partnership and research programs." The Stony Brook project is expected to serve as a model for undergraduate education in biological sciences at other research universities. The award will fund several programs including:

· A summer program for high school students from districts with significant minority populations. Students will be trained in DNA technology, lab and research skills and have an opportunity to work with Stony Brook researchers.

- · A summer program for pre-freshman and current students.
- New laboratory courses for undergraduate research. There will be one introductory course to strengthen skills in math, physics and chemistry, and one advanced course that will prepare students to work in a research lab. Selected students willparticipate in individual research projects. Qualified students will be able to apply for financial support.

Preparation for the programs will begin this academic year, with summer programs starting in June and laboratory courses next fall. High school and pre-freshman students will be selected in December. The two new laboratories will be ready by June.

The new programs will enhance the university's public school outreach and undergraduate initiatives such as the statefunded Science and Technology Entry Program (STEP), a year-round partnership providing classes, laboratory research and tutoring for secondary minority students and the Student Research Support Program for high-achieving students. Undergraduate initiatives include upgrading computer facilities and expanding the university's specialized educational programs.

a weekly update of news and information from UNIVERSITY MEDICAL CENTER AT STONY BROOK

"A Walk for Beauty in a Beautiful Place" unites Medical Center, Stony Brook Village and a very good cause

week from this Saturday, on October 8, hundreds of people are expected to gather in front of the Stony Brook Post Office at 7:30 a.m. Together these people—men, women and children—will come from the University Medical Center staff; cancer advocacy groups; the Three Village business community; and from across Long Island. They will meet to take the first steps toward realizing a dream—a special boutique for women who have had cancer.

It's being called "A Walk for Beauty in a Beautiful Place," and is sponsored by University Medical Center and BC H.E.L.P., in cooperation with the Stony Brook Community Fund. The walk winds through Stony Brook Village, up Rhododendron Drive, and back to the Inner Court of the shopping center. It takes in the best and most interesting of the area's historic spots and the natural beauty that is Stony Brook each autumn.

The walk will begin at 8 am (registration, 7:30 am). Participation is $12 per person or $50 in pledges. Families of up to four people can participate for $25 or $75 in pledges.

Pledge sheets are available in shops throughout Stony Brook Village or by calling 444-7880.
