DEDICATION AND A SALUTE: The Long Island Groundwater Research Institute — the only multidisciplinary research project designed to study Long Island's aquifer, the region's sole source of drinking water — was dedicated October 31. The ceremony honored New York State Senator Caesar Trunzo, who supported establishment of the institute. Guests included Long Island government officials, university officials and researchers associated with the institute.

Established this year to coordinate the diverse hydrologic research taking place at the University, the Institute consists of faculty from the Marine Sciences Research Center, the College of Engineering and Applied Sciences, the Center for Regional Planning Studies and the departments of Applied Mathematics and Statistics and Earth and Space Sciences, each of which has its own expertise in the area.

IN THE SWING OF THINGS: Slip on your tap shoes! Stony Brook's Theatre Arts Department is about to celebrate tap and swing and you're invited! Organized by Associate Professor Amy Sullivan, the Saturday, November 12 event will include classes, lectures and performances. The fun begins at 10 a.m. and dancers and observers are welcome. Master classes will be held for swing, tap, and jazz rhythm/improvisation in the Dance Studio of the Indoor Sports Complex and in Theatre One of the Staller Center for the Arts. Participants are requested to preregister. Observers are invited to watch.

Guest artists include Bob Crease and the Big Apple Lindy Hoppers, tap artist Jackie Raven and dance historian Ernie Smith. At 3 p.m. the guest artists and other dancers from the campus community, selected by prior audition, will give a performance in Theatre One. Mr. Smith will present a multi-media lecture, "Fascinating Rhythms," at 7 p.m. in the Javits Lecture Center, Room 105, featuring vintage film clips of the greatest tap dancers. The entire day's celebration is free and open to the public. For further information and preregistration, call the Department of Theatre Arts at 632-7300.

WINE AUCTION AND FOOD TASTING AHEAD: There's still time to get tickets to one of the largest and most interesting charitable wine auctions ever mounted in the Northeast: "An Autumn Evening's Wine and Food Tasting," the fifth annual scholarship fundraiser at the University at Stony Brook, Thursday, November 17, 5:30-8:00 p.m. in the Indoor Sports Complex. It is expected to draw over 1,000 people and yield about $60,000 in scholarships for high-achieving undergraduates at Stony Brook.

Nearly all of Long Island's vintners and many noted wineries of California and elsewhere are hosting tables at the event. In addition, more than 30 Long Island restaurants and caterers will serve their specialty foods and desserts. The live auction, beginning at 8 p.m., will be a highlight. Approximately 40 lots, all unusual and valuable, will be placed on the block for open auction and over 130 other distinguished wines will be offered at a silent auction that runs through the evening. Perhaps the rarest item to be auctioned is a Ferreira Port, bottled specifically for the Prince of Wales in 1815.

Foods for the tasting include Thai duck salad, crab-stuffed wonton, and herb-roasted filet mignon. Among the desserts will be apple polenta cake with caramel sauce, chocolate brioche bread pudding, and quince-cherry tartlets.

Tickets are $40 in advance; $50 at the door. Call 1-800-451-5866 for tickets and information.

WRITING STONY BROOK'S HISTORY: Have an interesting piece of University memorabilia? Want to share information about its history? USB Professor Sidney Gelber would like to hear from you.

Professor Gelber, who is working on a book about the University's origin and development, is seeking additional material for the project beyond the normal archives and official documents. If you have material you'd like to share, drop him a note at the University at Stony Brook, Health Sciences Center, L4 Room 215, Stony Brook, NY 11794, or call 444-8126.

USB Official Plays Key Role in Development of SUNYCard

It came as no surprise to USB Deputy to the President Carl E. Hanes when the State University of New York last week named a vendor to produce a new high-tech multi-purpose identification and transaction card for the SUNY system.

He already has a SUNYCard with his photo on it, or at least a mock-up of the real thing! The sample came with the territory.

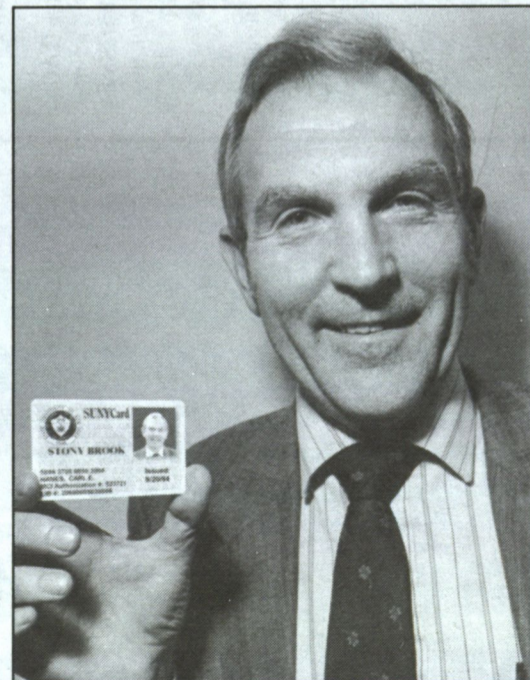

Mr. Hanes has been living and breathing the SUNYCard for months, spending part of each month in Albany as project manager for the program.

His work paid off last week when Citibank N.A. was selected to produce the new card that will allow students, faculty and staff throughout the SUNY system expanded access to services and information located both on campus and throughout the university system. The SUNYCard will end the need to have several different forms of ID and access cards. The one plastic card with two magnetic stripes will serve as an identification, library and information services card and even as a keyless entry to residence halls, labs and other academic facilities. The card also will allow for optional banking and telephone services.

The optional banking services, based on declining balance accounts, will let students pay for tuition, food service, residence hall rentals and other major purchases, using a personal identification number (PIN) and one of the card's magnetic stripes. Small purchases from vending, laundry and photocopying machines, will be possible using a second magnetic "purse" stripe. SUNY officials expect that much of the cost for SUNYCard hardware and installation will be offset by revenues generated by use of the card.

Card production systems will be installed at a few campuses, not yet identified, in early 1995.

"The new SUNYCard will provide the opportunity to use the new technology at Stony Brook to expand over time a whole array of useful and positive services for students, faculty and staff," says Mr. Hanes. In addition to SUNY, the City University of New York (CUNY) and Cornell University have been invited to participate, which means that upwards of 800,000 students, faculty, staff and constituents of the three universities could use the new card system.

"The selected Citibank prime vendor and partners bring together a strong team to work with each campus, like Stony Brook, to help make the transition to the new card system as smooth as possible," Mr. Hanes added.

■ Anne Frank on Stage at Staller ■ Freud, Advertising and Gender: One Artist's View ■ Two Symphonies in Contrast ■ Salsa Music Demystified

The Diary of Anne Frank will be performed in Theatre Two of the Staller Center for the Arts, November 10-13. Performances Thursday through Saturday are at 8 p.m.; Sunday, at 2 p.m.

Based on the secret diary of a girl hiding from the Nazis during World War II, the play reflects enduring hope and love in dark times. A Pulitzer Prize-winning drama by Frances Goodrich and Albert Harris, The Diary of Anne Frank is directed by Farley Richmond, chair of the Department of Theatre Arts.

The play communicates a timeless message, Dr. Richmond says, especially relevant in light of recent racial and ethnic conflicts around the world and in our own backyard.

Tickets are $8 at the Staller Center Box Office, 632-7230.

A one-of-a-kind, site-specific installation, "Dora: Big Girls Don't Cry," by New York City artist Maura Sheehan will be on exhibit at the University Art Gallery in the Staller Center from Saturday, November 12-Friday, December 16. An opening reception will be held on Saturday, November 19, 6:30-8 p.m.

The installation is designed to take advantage of the unusual spatial qualities of the gallery. Along with the large-scale installation, the gallery will show the artist's working drawings, plans and photographs.

"Dora" was the subject of Sigmund Freud's landmark study of female hysteria. Ms. Sheehan addresses the question of whether Dora was exploited by Freud or dominated him. She applies the same question to female images in contemporary advertising: do they depict victims or heroines? By shifting large, photographic images of women derived from billboards to the unconventional context of a gallery, Ms. Sheehan comments on how advertising manipulates us today.

Gallery hours are noon to 4 p.m., Tuesday through Friday, and 5-8 p.m. on Saturday. The gallery is also open for one hour before Main Stage performances. For information, call 632-7240.

The Stony Brook Symphony Orchestra, under the baton of Music Director Bradley Lubman, will perform two dramatically different symphonies on Saturday, November 12, beginning at 8 p.m. on the Main Stage of the Staller Center for the Arts.

The concert will feature the world premiere of Peter Alexander's Symphony No. 1, a dynamic work completed in 1994 that shows the influence of Stravinsky, Varèse, Bartok and Huorinen. The 35-year-old composer studied at Harvard University where he now teaches contemporary music.

Also on the program is Brahms' Symphony No. 1 in C minor, opus 68. It took Brahms over 20 years to write this piece, which he finally completed in 1876, having been awed to the point of creative paralysis by the shadow of Beethoven's genius.

Each symphony reflects the spirit of its age:

Brahms' classic work communicates the optimism and energy of the late Romantic era, with its triumphant, utopian view of humanity. Alexander's piece, in contrast, suggests our more troubled time, with brutal, forces hovering just under the surface of civilization.

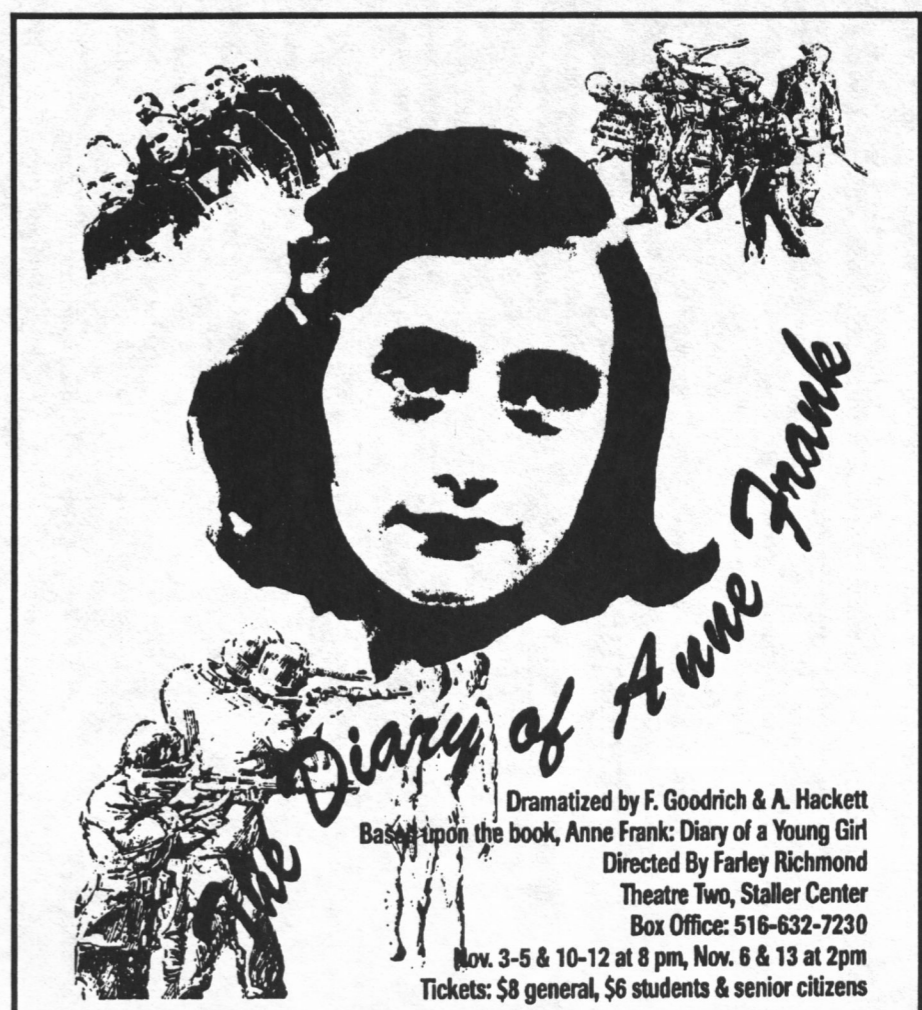

Maestro Lubman and Mark Lederway, WUSB 90.1 FM radio host, will discuss the works to be performed beginning at 7 p.m. in the Recital Hall.

Tickets are $10; $8 for senior citizens and students. Call the Staller Center Box Office at 632-7230.

The Latin American and Caribbean Center (LAC) will host "What Makes Salsa?" - a musician's demonstration of how salsa is put together, on Thursday, November 10, at 7 p.m. Ronnie Baró, lead vocalist and composer on the recently released compact disc, Africando, will present and discuss his musical techniques and trace his personal history.

This lecture/demonstration/performance, in Room 0113 of the Staller Center for the Arts, is presented in conjunction with Professor Timothy Brennan's course on "Poetry and Popular Music of the Caribbean," and is cosponsored by the Humanities Institute, the departments of Music and Theatre Arts, and the UNITI Cultural Center.

Next, June Nash will speak on "Neo-liberalism and Ethnic Revindication in Chiapas" on Wednesday, November 16, 12:30-1:30 p.m. in the LAC conference room, SBS Room N320.

Time To Enroll, Change Benefits

November and December are Benefits Choices and Open Enrollment months for State and Research Foundation employees, respectively. If you'd like to know more about the choices and have a fun time too, head to the 1994 Benefits Forum on Tuesday, November 15, in the Alliance Room of the Frank Melville, Jr. Memorial Library, from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. The forum will be repeated November 16 in the HSC Galleria from 10 a.m. to 2 p.m. Representatives of health insurance carriers and retirement and tax-deferred programs will be on hand to help employees evaluate their options. While you're there, you can have your body fat checked, cholesterol screened and more, not to mention being eligible to win Thanksgiving turkeys and pies that will be given away as door prizes.

Wanted: Long-Time Employees

Plans are being made for the 1994 Service Awards Ceremony to honor those individuals who have worked at the University at Stony Brook for 35, 30, 25, or 20 years. The annual event will held on Wednesday, December 7, in the Staller Center Recital Hall starting at 4 p.m. and will be followed by a reception. If you're among those eligible to receive a service award, please check with Victoria McLaughlin in Human Resources (2-6159) to make sure you're on the list.

Mid-Day Transportation Available

The Department of Parking and Transportation has put its mid-day mini-van runs in full gear, picking up and dropping off faculty, staff and students as well as residents from the greater Three Village community at several off and on-campus sites. The minivans (one eastbound, the other westbound on identical routes) run weekdays from 10:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at 20-minute intervals. The service makes it possible for to get around without a car. Off-campus, each van stops in the hamlet of Stony Brook, Rail Road Commons and Setauket Plaza before returning to the University where it loops around the west, south and east campuses. Service begins at 10:30 a.m. at the Administration Building and terminates at 2:20 p.m. at the hospital loop. The cost? Fifty cents per ride or a campus bus pass.

Getting in Step

The Employee Assistance Program will hold a series of workshops, "Learning to Step Together," as a support group for step-families. Meetings will be held the second and fourth Wednesdays of each month (exception: November meetings will be held the second and fifth Wednesdays), on South Campus in Suffolk Hall, Room 147. Meeting time: 6-8 p.m. For further information and to sign up, please contact Brenda Smith at 632-6085.

President's/Chancellor's Awards

Nominations are now being solicited for the 1994-95 Awards for Excellence in Professional Service. Nominees must have completed three years' full-time non-teaching professional appointments at Stony Brook, the Research Foundation, or any other integral unit of the University. Nominators are responsible for compiling support files that will include the nominee's curriculum vitae and letters of recommendation from supervisors, colleagues and constituents served.

Submit nominations by Friday, December 9, to the Selection Committee, Awards for Excellence in Professional Service, Administration Building, Room 310.

THE PULSE

a weekly update of news and information from UNIVERSITY MEDICAL CENTER AT STONY BROOK

National Primary Care Day at Stony Brook: Educating the next generation of physicians for careers in primary care medicine

Primary Care Day gave students at Stony Brook's School of Medicine the opportunity to meet with Long Island community physicians and discuss serving the public through primary care. Panelists brought a variety of experience to the discussion and the give-and-take was lively. Primary Care Day at Stony Brook was part of a national consciousness-raising project for medical students who must choose careers in a rapidly shifting healthcare landscape. Primary care focuses on four areas: family medicine, pediatrics, obstetrics and gynecology and general internal medicine. Panelists included (from left above) Harpal Singh, M.D., an intern in Family Medicine at University Medical Center who discussed his experiences in the Canadian healthcare system, and Mirza Rahman, M.D., M.P.H., Medical Director of the Tri-Community Health Center in Amityville.

"A Cause for Singing" brings Stonewall Chorale to Staller
Center for AIDS benefit and to honor Dr. Rose Walton

Rose Walton, Ed.D., is, by accounts of everyone who knows her, an extraordinary woman. Founder and first director of the AIDS Education and Resource Center at Stony Brook, Dr. Walton has long been a leader in the area of AIDS education with her local example serving as a model for the entire nation.

Dr. Walton retired this year and, on November 20, will be honored at a concert by the Stonewall Chorale at 3 pm at the Staller Center. The event, A Cause for Singing, is a benefit for the AIDS services at University Medical Center at Stony Brook. These include adult and pediatric AIDS Centers and the East End HIV/AIDS Center which has its formal opening this week in East Hampton.

Money raised will go toward non-medical patient services that are not covered by private insurance or Medicaid. Such services might include household help or clothing, for example.

Concert tickets are $35 each ($15 for students) and include a reception following the show. Singer Sandy Rapp will perform at the reception. In addition, an ad journal is being published. For information about the journal, or to order concert tickets, please call 516-444-2899.
