LONG ISLAND PRESS SERIES CALLS FOR INCREASED AID TO STONY BROOK AS COMMUNITY RESOURCE

Editor's Note: The following was the first in a week-long Long Island Press series on Stony Brook's fiscal situation.

By KARL GROSSMAN

For decades, Long Island has been short-changed by New York State, as far as public colleges are concerned.

And now it's going to get worse. The state has decided to stop construction at the main campus of the State University at Stony Brook, now two-thirds built. Instead, Albany plans to spend its construction dollars to finish the half-done replacement campus for the State University at Buffalo.

The state is going ahead with its plan even though its own figures prove there already is a shortage of college seats on Long Island, and a surplus of seats in the Buffalo area.

If the decision holds, "even more of our young people will have to go upstate to go to college, or if they don't have the money or mobility, not go to college at all," warns Lee Koppelman, executive director of the Nassau-Suffolk Regional Planning Board.

"The state is saying," said R. Christian Anderson, chairman of the Stony Brook Council, the university's state-appointed advisors: "Send your students to Buffalo."

The "Imbalance between high school graduates and college places on Long Island is most serious," said Anderson, assistant director of Brookhaven National Laboratory.

"There's no question," said Queens Borough President Donald Manes, "the upstate area has received far better treatment when it comes to higher education than New York City and its suburbs. Stony Brook services a very large area with a great shortage of seats. It must be completed."

Some 65,000 Long Island college-bound students now leave the Island each year to attend college elsewhere, many because the Island has the worst proportion of college and university places for its high school graduates of any major area in the state, if not the nation.

"This enormous outmigration, if long continued, will profoundly sap the economic and social viability of Long Island because there is no corresponding influx of young people to study here," said the special Stony Brook study committee.

The Amherst campus of the State University at Buffalo is being built to handle 23,500 students.

Not finishing Stony Brook will mean the university will have to reduce its enrollment - originally set for 24,000 and then lowered to 21,500 - to 16,800.

According to State Education Department figures, the Buffalo region currently has 18 per cent more college places than the number of high school graduates it generates. The Albany region has 41 per cent more, and Binghamton 112 per cent more.

But Long Island has 15 percent less than its number of high school graduates.

Although Long Island now and in the past has been grossly underserved in terms of public higher education seats, it generates far more tax dollars for education than anywhere else in the state.

This issue's cover story first appeared in the Long Island Press as the first instalment in a week-long series. It indicates the strong regional support for campus completion. Civic, government and business leaders throughout Long Island rallied together, urging that the campus be completed according to long-range master plan specifications. They did so after receiving indications that statewide SUNY construction plans over the next few years would not provide for final, essential Stony Brook campus facilities.

The Association Board of Directors, at its December meeting, took early note of this situation, passing the following resolution:

RESOLUTION ADOPTED UNANIMOUSLY BY THE BOARD OF DIRECTORS OF THE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION OF THE STATE UNIVERSITY OF NEW YORK AT STONY BROOK ON DECEMBER 12, 1976

WHEREAS, there are now over 20,000 alumni of the State University of New York at Stony Brook who have studied here and viewed with pride the increasingly important contributions which Stony Brook has made to this Region, State and Nation; and

WHEREAS, there appears to be increasing concern on the part of community leaders and others associated with the University that the long-standing vital mandate for completion of the Stony Brook campus may not be fulfilled; and

WHEREAS, in less than fifteen years Stony Brook has made substantial progress toward fulfilling the mandate of the Board of Regents and the Governor, "to stand with the finest in the country . . . [to] bring to the State and help to advance technical and scientific industries . . . and to . . . provide additional sources of advice and expert service for all of the public and private interests of the people of the State," and is increasingly gaining national and international recognition as an outstanding educational institution; and

WHEREAS, the continued development of the Stony Brook campus in accordance with its master plan is of the greatest importance to the Nassau-Suffolk region, which presently lags 20 years behind the rest of the State with less than 50 per cent as many college places in public and private educational institutions proportionate to population, and, since, as a result, Long Island citizens suffer at least a 200 million dollar economic loss annually; and,

WHEREAS, this deficit will be compounded in the years ahead since New York State's principal population growth in the next two decades will be in Suffolk County,

NOW, THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED that the Alumni Association sees a clear, inescapable need for priority concentration of State University resources on meeting these critical regional shortages through full development of the Stony Brook campus in accordance with its master plan and mandate,

BE IT FURTHER RESOLVED that the Alumni Association pledges its fullest support to the Stony Brook Council in that body's recent, unequivocal commitment and to President Toll to achieve such development which can be of the greatest benefit to New York State.

ALUMNI WEEKEND APRIL 29

The committee working to develop this year's annual alumni reunion has added a touch of tradition to the festivities. Alumni Weekend '77 Chairman Jonathan Salant '76 has scheduled the reunion to coincide with the campus "Spring Fest" set for the weekend of April 29.

Alumni Weekend '77 will officially begin on Friday evening April 29, in the new Health Sciences Center teaching and research tower east of Nicolls Road. After taking a tour of the building which will include a visit to the top of the 20-story structure, returning alumni will gather on the library level of the tower to talk to old friends, listen to some music and share a mug or two of beer.

On Saturday morning a combination bagel brunch and career guidance session will be scheduled. That afternoon, alumni will have the chance to visit campus galleries, use the tennis courts or other athletic facilities, participate in Spring Fest activities, complete with carnival rides, special movies and demonstrations in the Union.

Saturday evening will begin with a special make-your-own hero dinner followed by a concert in the Gym featuring a major group performance.

On Sunday, Alumni Weekend '77 will come to a close with a bagel breakfast and an open forum meeting.

New events and final information regarding the cost of the weekend, or individual events, will soon be mailed to all alumni. But for now, circle the weekend of April 29 as a time to come back to the campus to celebrate.
