Fine Arts Center Director Terrence Netter (left) presides over Gala Week opening activities including performances by Isaac Stern (top right) and the Ohio Ballet (bottom right).

FINE ARTS CENTER OPENS

A festival of art, music, theatre, and dance celebrated the formal opening of the Fine Arts Center this fall, launching the Center's inaugural year of special events. The first event of the season was an enchanting performance of "The Belle of Amherst" starring Julie Harris as Emily Dickinson on September 25. The performance was sold out weeks in advance.

Gala Week festivities, October 24-30, began with a ribbon-cutting ceremony hosted by Acting President Schmidt and Terence Netter, the new director of the Center. A plaza party followed featuring an 80-piece band, a brass ensemble, mimes, jugglers, dancing and refreshments. A number of alumni participated.

On the second day of the week's events, John Simon, New York Magazine film critic, joined Max Kozloff of Artforum and Harold Clurman of The Nation as keynote speakers at an inaugural conference entitled "Criticism in the Arts." Professors Lawrence Alloway, director of the University's Arts Gallery, and Charles Rosen, pianist, also spoke. Later in the week, Harvard University's theatrical impressario Robert Brustein delivered a special 65th birthday tribute to Stony Brook's internationally known drama critic Jan Kott.

"Mirrors and Entablatures," an exhibition of images of mirrors and architectural ornament painted by Roy Lichtenstein between 1970 and 1976, opened and will remain on view at the Center's Arts Gallery through December 14.

Onstage events at the Center included the Ohio Ballet on October 26, the Warsaw Pantomime on October 27, a concert by Isaac Stern on October 28, and jazz pianist Eddie Heywood on October 29.

The Theatre Arts department, under the direction of professor Alfred Brooks, presented Bertolt Brecht's comedy "A Man's a Man" on October 30. The week's activities concluded with the Graduate Chamber Orchestra's presentation of Bach's "Magnificat" and the premiere performance of professor Peter Winkler's melodic "Symphony."

For details on upcoming inaugural events, including performances by pianist Vladimir Ashkenazy, violinist Itzhak Perlman Alvin Ailey, Paul Taylor and Joffrey II dance troupes, consult Calendar listings.

SUSB/LI: History, Housing

Long Island's first regional history conference was held at the University on October 27. Co-sponsored by the Suffolk County Historian's Office and the University's Center for Continuing and Developing Education, the conference was titled "Directions for the Future." Its purpose, said county historian Chris Vagts, was "to get the public into history, to make them aware of Long Island's historic resources and the importance of preserving them." More than 500 Long Island residents participated in 18 separate sessions on such topics as establishing historic districts, preserving Long Island's waterways, and starting a family history.

Over 175 L.I. government, business and civic leaders attended a L.I. Housing conference September 29 at the H.S.C. A manifesto is expected in November urging action from all levels of government to increase housing choices for Long Islanders of all racial and economic backgrounds.

Administration Building Parking Garage, expected to open this Spring, HSC in rear:

WHERE TO PARK MEANWHILE

Until the new parking garage is complete, alumni visiting the campus will have to practice a skill acquired as students—patience.

Finding a parking place may take some time. Your best bet is to allow a few extra minutes for space hunting, particularly if you're heading for main campus from 10:00 a.m. to 4:00 p.m. Even during those hours, you almost always will be able to find a space in the new Health Sciences Center pay garage, at $.50 an hour, $3.00 maximum a day. It's a three minute walk to main campus.

If you're enrolled for part-time study, as a graduate student in the Center for Continuing Education, etc., be sure your car is registered with the Traffic Office (first floor, Administration Building) and you'll be eligible for parking in commuting student lots (South and North P Lots) from 8 a.m. to 4 p.m. and in any campus lots after 4 p.m.

If you're headed for a special campus function, check the campus office sponsoring it to see if they've made special temporary parking arrangements for their visitors. (The Alumni Office, for example, makes such arrangements for alumni events on campus.)

Meanwhile, we join Acting President Schmidt and others in the campus administration who've expressed regrets to visitors for the parking crunch. With a bit of luck, Stony Brook's parking problems will begin to ease before the current academic year is out and as the new parking garage opens.

CED: A CORNUCOPIA OF COURSES

Polishing skills, keeping up with developments, earning professional certification or just for the fun of it.continuing education courses at Stony Brook are increasingly popular and diversified as alumni study for credit or pleasure in almost any field imaginable. 'Nearly five thousand Long Islanders now register here for various programs of post-graduate study," according to Les Paldy ('62), dean of the University's department of Continuing and Developing Education. Classes and seminars are offered late afternoons and evenings, matriculating students work toward a Master of Arts degree in liberal studies. Dean Paldy reports that roughly 20% of matriculating admittants each semester are undergraduate program alumni of Stony Brook.

CED programs are offered in traditional disciplines, including classes in the schools of medicine. nursing, continuing professional education and engineering and applied sciences. New interdisciplinary areas include Long Island Studies, Women's Studies, Environmental Studies, Mid-Life Assessment, Labor Relations, Technology and Society, and others. Twice each year the Informal Studies Program offers non-credit classes to serve as an introduction to graduate study for people who have been away from formal schooling for a number of years. CED's Institutes and Conferences Office sponsors workshops and seminars aimed primarily at business audiences.

Among numerous interesting courses offered this past semester were Cloning and Genetic Engineering, the American Woman in Sport, On Becoming a Person, Humor and Paradox, and Mystery and Detective Fiction. CEB 533—Introduction to Oenology is described as an overview of "all aspects of the world's continuing romance with wine; its history, botany and microbiology, science of wine making, the physiology of the palate, the geography, soil and climactic factors in wine regions, as well as an inquiry into what makes a wine great."

Detailed information on any of these programs can be obtained by calling the CED office at 516-246-5936.

PRESIDENTIAL SEARCH

The search for Stony Brook's "second generation" president is back in gear. A new search committee has been formed including alumni board members Suffolk County Sheriff John Finnerty ('72) and David Skulnik ('69). proprietor of the Dining Car 1890 Restaurant in Stony Brook. Other members of the committee, which is chaired by Dr. R. Christian Anderson of the Stony Brook Council, are: Chancellor's designee: Murray Block; Administration Representative: still to be confirmed; Faculty Representatives: Edward Bergofsky-Medicine, Robert Cess-Engineering, Don Ihde-Philosophy, Allison Palmer-Earth and Space Sciences, Bernard Semmel-History, Betty Twarog-Anatomy, Esther Walls-Library, Non-teaching Professionals: Florene Holland-Assistant for University Financial Analysis, Jane McMahon-Assistant to the Director. Student Orientation; Undergraduate Student Representative: David Herzog; Graduate Student Representative: Karen Benthin; CED Student Representative: Vincent Fiorentino. Stony Brook Council Members are ex officio representatives. Dr. Richard P. Schmidt, Acting University President since July 1, expressed the hope that the process will result in "attracting a major academic leader within the current academic year." Dr. Schmidt plans to return to his post as President of the SUNY Upstate Medical Center in Syracuse, from which he has a leave of absence until a new Stony Brook president is selected.

SUNDIAL ON MALL

A two-foot diameter dark bronze sundial was recently presented to the University by the Turner Construction Company, NYC, builders of the HSC. The functioning dial has an antique patina, raised Roman numerals and is mounted in a concrete pedestal cast into a circular cobblestone walkway between the Administration Building and Melville Library. The gift resulted from a suggestion by the campus' Environmental Action conservation group during a Sun Day observance.

NEW ALUMNI BOARD MEMBERS

Class of '69: Janice (Armo) Seitzinger Janice grew up in Brooklyn and Lindenhurst (her family lives in Huntington now), and completed a master's in French literature at Boston College after graduating from Stony Brook. She worked as assistant director of housing at Boston College and in financial aid at U. of Maine, Augusta before becoming associate dean of students in charge of residence life at Colby College, Waterville, Maine in 1973. Janice and her husband (he is an assistant state attorney general) enjoy mountain climbing, canoeing and jogging near their wood-stove-heated home on a lake in Oakland, Me.

Class of '71: Samuel R. Taube

Sam is the assistant to Stony Brook's vice-president for student affairs, Elizabeth Wadsworth. He is primarily responsible for personnel staffing, budgeting and recruitment. Sam, who recently completed a Ph.D. in Victorian literature at Stony Brook, is vicepresident of the board of directors of Response Crisis Intervention and is an active member of the campus ambulance corps. He also represents 600 non-teaching professionals in the University's Professional Governing Board as well as being on the executive committee of the Faculty Senate. Sam grew up in Manhattan and finds time for bicycling, swimming and chess in his busy schedule.

Class of '73: Richard Kahn

Richard is an attorney with Shavick, Shotz, Nadler and Konner of Hackensack, NJ. He specializes in real estate and finance. After completing his BA in history at Stony Brook, Richard attended NYU Law, graduating in 1976. His wife is exhibit coordinator at the Jewish Museum, NYC and they reside in Teaneck with their six-month-old son. Richard cites fatherhood as his current hobby; he reminisces on Stony Brook as "the best years of my life."

Class of '73: Susan (Graff) Stopek
Susan and her husband Steve ('75) live in Yaphank with their children, Rebecca
(4) and Mark (2). Susan works part-time as a podiatrist's assistant in Stony Brook and Steven is a claims representative with the social security system. Susan grew up in East Meadow, enjoys bicycle riding and plans to be very active in alumni weekend planning.

SB'S "UNDERBELLY" EXPOSED

ed. note: The following article was adapted from a story which appeared in Statesman, April 25, 1979 under the byline of Rich Bergovoy('79). SBP thanks Statesman for permission to reprint.

From Kelly C to rock superstars. That is the legend of Blue Oyster Cult, the so-called leather and laser boys who entertained at SB in the late sixties under the unlikely name of Soft White Underbelly (they were so billed again recently playing a sold-out stand at Roslyn's My Father's Place). They were also known as the Stalk Forest Group during an early incarnation.

Blue Oyster Cult, the name and music sometimes evoke visions of alienation and apocalypse, but the million album selling group—Don Roeser—lead guitar, Eric Bloom—lead vocals and "stun" guitar, Allen Lanier—keyboards, Joe Bouchard—Bass, and Albert Bouchard—drums—belies this image with wit and some talent. Roeser's teenage hit "Don't Fear the Reaper" rocketed the group to stardom in 1976 much after the name change and a move from Elektra to the Columbia label.

Back in the Spring of '68 the psychedelic Underbelly, joined by the Fugs and Country Joe, staged a 7 AM free concert cum musical mock invasion of the campus as a protest of the infamous bust of the previous Winter. In 1969, they opened at Stony Brook for The Band. Generally, though, the guys "spent a lot of time in the Union," playing concerts in cafeterias and dorms.

As to a still persistent rumor that the members all lived in Kelly C: "Kelly what?...No, not us. That was our manager Sandy Pearlman ('64—Polity president and still manager) and Richard Meltzer ('66—now a rock critic) who sometimes wrote for us." The original group lived in a big house at a Route 25A intersection, "on a road near Fat Humphrey's."

The Cult developed around 1971 when the group was playing bars in coal and steel towns in Ohio and Pennsylvania. They have not been back to SB since that year, but acknowledge, "Yes, Stony Brook is a very big influence on [our] music."

Albums include: Tyranny and Mutation Agents of Fortune Secret Treaties Spectres

STONY BROOK'S SHUTOUT KING

The shutout. The most easily recognizable sign of domination in an athletic contest. Often it is so difficult to achieve, that when a shutout is recorded, the reaction is one of ecstasy. However, for Stony Brook Patriots' goaltender Phil Lesko, the shutout is usually the end result of a dull, unexciting soccer match.

"Sometimes, my mind begins to wander during a match because our offense is in complete control and I'm not getting any action," says Patriot goalkeeper Lesko. "I'm happy when we shutout an opponent, but there's nothing I enjoy more than a tough, aggressive game."

A member of the North Babylon High School soccer team which captured the New York State Championship in 1976, Lesko chose to enroll at Stony Brook for academic purposes and an opportunity to be coached by New York Apollo defender Chris Tyson. "It's fun playing for Coach Tyson, since he's still a professional athlete and can easily relate to the team," says Lesko.

The 6-foot, 2-inch sophomore, who's majoring in mechanical engineering, became an instant starter upon his arrival at Stony Brook last year. In the Patriots '78 home opener, Lesko recorded his first intercollegiate shutout and a very positive trend for the Patriots had begun. Lesko was nothing less than sensational as a freshman, chalking up five shutouts and allowing an average of only 1.30 goals per game.

A NAME IS A NAME ...

This past Halloween night was the perfect occasion for a masquerade party celebrating a student initiated re-naming of Tabler Quad's Learned Hand College to Rod Sterling College. Celebrants appeared in lavish outfits ranging from Darth Vadar and R2D2 to Merlin and sundry spatial characters from the well-known TV series The Twilight Zone.

Though student re-naming of dormitories is still not recognized by the University, such nomenclature as Lenny Bruce College (Kelly C), Morrison Hotel (Roth's Toscanini College) and Jerry Garcia College (G Quad's Gray College) retains a good degree of currency amongst students from year to year.

Patriots' star goaltender Phil Lesko

This season, Lesko has picked up right where he left off in '78, and in the first week of the '79 campaign he notched two more shutouts. "Phil has great reflexes and is very aggressive," says Coach Tyson. "In addition, he's crazy as all good goalkeepers have to be."

Along with the rest of the Patriots, Phil is counting on bettering last year's 6-6-2 record and challenging for the Division II East Playoffs. "We can go as far as we want to," says Lesko. And, Coach Tyson asserts, "We've upgraded our schedule, moved to a better playing field and purchased new uniforms and equipment as an indication of a serious commitment. However, I still think it's important for everybody on the team to play, so nobody is going to come to Stony Brook and sit on the bench for four years."

Playing soccer is not only a lot of fun, but also a necessary alternative according to Lesko. "Soccer breaks up the monotony of going to class and having to study all the time," says Lesko. "I'd like to play soccer for as long as I can before having to start work in the real world." If Phil Lesko keeps on accumulating shutouts at his current rate, he's going to have the opportunity to continue playing soccer for a long, long time.

ALUMNI BASKETBALL REUNION FEBRUARY 2, 1980

ALUMNI SOCCER: 2-2 TIE

The Ninth Annual Alumni Soccer Game was played on September 22; sunny weather and spirited play resulted in a 2-2 tie with the Varsity team. A reception was held in the gym, players and friends were treated to sandwiches, soda and a videotaped replay of the just completed game. Players of the Match Awards were presented to alumnus Steve Shapiro ('77) and varsity player Rich Campbell.

PATRIOT HIGHLIGHTS

Earl Keith, ('79) Stony Brook's first All-American basketball player, recently signed a contract to play professional basketball in Germany.

Men's athletic director John Ramsey was extremely pleased to announce that Stony Brook will play the national basketball team from the Republic of China on Nov. 17, and host the Budweiser Invitational Tournament on Dec. 14 - 15, with New York Tech, Albany State and Quinnipiac entered in the tourney.

Second-year coach Fran Kalafer has added Kim Hovey to her coaching staff and plans on making significant strides with the women's volleyball team in '79. Last year, in their first season of intercollegiate action, the lady Patriots finished with a .500 record and qualified for the district playoffs.

Class of '75: Floyd Linton

As a member and former presiding officer of the Suffolk Co. legislature, representing the 4th district, Floyd has served three elective terms and worked on County Finance, Charter Revision, Youth and Senior Citizen Committee, as well as the Long Island State Park Commission, among others. He and his wife Mary are long-time residents of Miller Place.

Class of '77: Bruce Fein

Bruce works for Shearson Hayden Stone Inc. as a trader dealing mostly in platinum and heating oil at the New York Mercantile Commodities Exchange. He reports that decorating his new apartment in Manhattan, camping and dancing are his current hobbies and he is not married. "Being an R.A.," is among the most pleasant memories of Stony Brook.
