Bob:

GPO's Item Lister is a great resource! I found myself in the same situation here, with three depositories in Springfield, as well as one three miles away in the next city north, and two additional depositories about twenty miles north. The Item Lister allows you to quickly download a depository's profile. Using option #4, "Selections and non-selections in a single column," I downloaded the profiles for all six area depositories. I created a spreadsheet (MS Excel 5.0) that contained one column for the item numbers, and then another column for my depository's profile. The Text Import Wizard helped me through this process, and I then did the same for each of the other five depositories. Choose fixed width for the original data type, and set the column data format to text, so that the leading zeros in the item numbers won't be dropped. Using cut and paste, I brought all of the profiles into one spreadsheet. By the way, prior to this I had not used Excel, not was I particularly spreadsheet literate. The "wizards" and general help screens were informative and easy to use.

This spreadsheet proved useful, but in a limited way, since it only had the item number. The SuDoc number and title would make it much more useful. The List of Classes is also available at the GPO web site, and I downloaded this, and set up another spreadsheet.

My third step was to build a relational database that allowed me to better utilize the data I had. I used MS Access 2.0 to import my two spreadsheets, and then through the Query function linked them together by item number. Thus I have one data set that has nine columns: Item #, SuDoc #, Title and Format, and then my six depositories' profiles. The third column can easily be expanded/contracted so that the entire title field, which can be quite long, is present, or just 10 to 20 characters. There are approximately 10,000 rows in this data set.

The neat thing about these tools is that once they are created it isn't that much work to update them when GPO updates their web site's tools. I think you'll find that the time spent in developing these tools is time well spent.

INTRODUCTION

In the United States, we have enjoyed a historic commitment to open distribution of and access to government information. The New York State Freedom of Information Act notes that

The People's right to know the process of government decision making and to review the documents and statistics leading to determinations is basic to our society. Access to such information should not be thwarted by shrouding it with the cloak of secrecy or confidentiality.

This Directory was originally developed by the LILRC Committee on Government Information as a tool to facilitate access to public information at all levels. At the time of the first edition in 1977, that information was available primarily in print format. The situation has changed dramatically since then as a variety of electronic formats have been developed. The current trend is towards further proliferation of non-print distribution of governmental information sources. Moreover, we are presently faced with possible curtailment of the Federal Depository System. There is cautious optimism about the establishment of a State depository and document distribution system, but there currently exists no consistent or systematic method of preservation and distribution of documents issued by counties, towns, cities, villages or special districts in the Long Island region. It therefore becomes even more urgent that knowledge about the location and availability of government information, historic and current, be made available as widely as possible.

This third edition is the product of efforts of librarians from all of the libraries listed and members of the LILRC Committee on Government Information. It is intended to be used as a guide to the location of public information in public, academic and special libraries throughout the region and provides the names of contact people at those institutions. We hope that this directory will prove to be a useful tool which will provide our library users with free and convenient access to government documents from all levels. An informed citizenry is the foundation of democratic society.

Janet Wagner, Chair
LILRC Committee on Government Information
November 1992

EDITORIAL NOTE

For several reasons, production of this edition took much longer than anticipated. Although we tried to track changes such as agency names and staffing, some errors in personnel and collections may remain. Libraries are urged to report changes to the LILRC office.

Now that the Directory is "in the computer" in a standard word processing package (WordPerfect), future editions should be producible with less stress and strain.

All member libraries of the Long Island Library Resources Council (LILRC) and all public libraries in the Nassau Library System and the Suffolk Cooperative Library System received a survey form from the Government Information Committee. Included in this Directory are the libraries which responded and reported documents holdings.

When referring library users to another library, staff members are urged to call ahead to be sure the library is open (academic and special libraries in particular may have limited access at certain times) and that staff is available for assistance. Federal Depository libraries are required to be open to the public; please call to verify the hours they are open.

APPENDIX

DEPOSITORY DOCUMENTS ASSIGNMENTS

In an effort to achieve as complete agency coverage as possible, U.S. government depository libraries on Long Island have agreed to specific agencies for whose publications they will be responsible. Other libraries do, of course, have materials from these agencies, but these agreements make it possible for those other libraries not to select extensively in some areas. This agreement does not require the selection of everything made available as a depository item by that agency, but items not selected are excluded for specific reasons.
